Cites Daunting Challenges Ahead At Second Term

Phelan Proposes 5-Point Tax Relief Plan

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Although the city has tackled serious financial problems during the past two years, more "daunting challenges" are on the horizon, Mayor William Phelan said during his inaugural address Monday morning in the North Quincy High School Auditorium.

"Much like two years ago, we are faced with a great challenge," Phelan told audience members in attendance. "And much like two years ago, we will meet the challenge head on."

Phelan, 44, was sworn in for a second term by former Mayor and current Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin, his father-in-law.

To ease the burden of rising property taxes, Phelan proposed a five-part "tax relief" package.

Included in the plan:

- Reintroduction of "modest" increases in developer fees and luxury fees;
- Cost savings through attrition in city government;
- Aggressive collection of outstanding taxes and other city receivables;
- Increased worker productivity and other management efficiencies;
- Initiatives to attract more businesses to the city and increase the tax base.

"To give property taxpayers the relief they deserve requires some shared sacrifice and some political courage," Phelan told the audience.

Citing rising property taxes, Phelan said he "shares the outrage" of the city's homeowners.

"Quincy homeowners are enjoying fantastic returns on their property investments, but we are definitely not enjoying the rising property tax bills that come with them," he told the audience.

Saying property taxes are arguably the most "unfair" form of taxation, Phelan said the city's disabled, senior citizens and disabled veterans are going to "feel the pain" of increased tax bills.

The mayor said federal and state governments share the blame for not providing enough support for cities and towns.

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN in his inaugural address said the city's finances have improved but that "daunting challenges" lie ahead.

"The federal government in Washington has essentially abandoned cities," he said. "At the state level, promises were made about not cutting basic services and not raising taxes. And the $7.2 million state cut to local aid to Quincy is a direct cause of the current property tax increases. Those local aid cuts have prevented Quincy taxpayers from receiving the full benefits of the streamlining of our local government that we worked so hard to implement the past two years."

During his 18-minute address, Phelan said "shared sacrifice" among municipal government and residents has helped the city to tread through tough financial times.

"We still face many daunting challenges," said Phelan. "But in solving our problems we will draw upon our great strength as a community, just as we have in the past. The citizens of Quincy have proven that when we come together as a commu

McCauley Pledges To Work With Mayor, Committee Chairmen

In remarks made following his unanimous election to the position of Council President, Frank McCauley said he would focus on moving legislation through the city council in a fair and expeditious manner.

"In the past, items would get referred to a committee and languish there for months," said McCauley. "I am going to work with the committee chairmen and the mayor's office so we can get the legislation referred out of committee and passed as soon as possible."

McCauley, serving as council president for the first time in his political career, said he does not want to address issues on a last-minute basis.

"It's not a good way to do business," he said. "Sometimes, legislative bodies place items into a committee and then forget about them. And then there is a last-

Keenan, Coughlin, Gutro Get Major Chairmanships

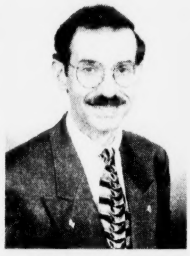
McCauley Makes Council Committee Assignments



For his first act as Council President, Frank McCauley Tuesday assigned the chairmanships, vice chairmanships and makeup of the council's 14 committees.

Three committees – finance, ordinance and oversight – are committees of the whole, meaning all councillors serve on them.

Councillor John Keenan will chair the finance committee, with Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro acting as vice chair. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin has been assigned chairman of the ordinance committee, with Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly as vice chair. And Doug Gutro will chair the oversight committee, with Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis acting as vice chair.

Seven subcommittees – public works, parks and recreation, public safety, rules, senior citizens, education and environmental – have five members. McCauley assigned Councillor Joe Finn as chair of public works, with Leo Kelly as vice chairman. Other members of the public works committee are Doug Gutro, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi and Kevin Coughlin.

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner will chair the parks and recreation committee, with Kevin Coughlin as vice chair. Other members of the parks and recreation committee are Joe Finn, Leo Kelly and Jay Davis.

Dan Raymondi will act as chairman of the public safety committee, and Joe Finn will be vice chairman. Serving with them will be John Keenan, Alicia Gardner and Jay Davis.

McCauley also assigned Jay Davis as chairman of the rules committee, with John Keenan acting as vice chair. Also on the committee are Dan Raymondi, Leo Kelly and Kevin Coughlin.

Dan Raymondi has been assigned chairman of the senior citizens committee with Leo Kelly as vice chairman. John Keenan, Doug Gutro and Joe Finn will also serve on the committee.

Kevin Coughlin has been designated chairman of the education committee, with Alicia Gardner as vice chairwoman. Also serving on the committee are Doug Gutro, John Keenan and Dan Raymondi.

And Leo Kelly has been assigned chairman of the newest committee, the environmental committee. Dan Raymondi will be vice chairman. Serving with them will be Jay Davis, Joe Finn and Doug Gutro.

Four other subcommittees – business and economic development, veterans, housing and library – are three-member committees.

John Keenan has been assigned chairman of the business and economic development committee, with Doug Gutro serving as vice chair and Jay Davis as the third member.

Leo Kelly is chairman of the veterans committee, with Kevin Coughlin as vice chair and Alicia Gardner as the other member.

Joe Finn will be chairman of the housing committee, with Doug Gutro acting as vice chair and Alicia Gardner as the third member.

Alicia Gardner has been assigned chairwoman of the library committee, with Joe Finn as vice chair and Kevin Coughlin as the third member.

Elected School Committee Vice Chairman

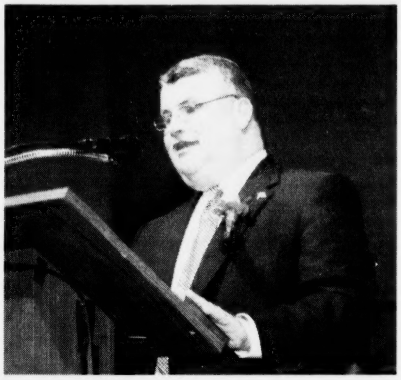
Financial Issues To Take Precedent, McFarland Says

Taking over the reins as Vice Chairman of the School Committee, Michael McFarland said financial issues will dominate the committee's agenda this year.

"With dwindling resources and increasing costs, creativity will be needed to continue to provide small class size, updated curriculum materials, additional educational opportunities, before and after school programs and continued facility and technology issues," he said following his unanimous election to vice chairman.



Overall, the status of education in the city is good and continues to improve, he said.

"As we go forward we must continue to keep students at the center of our universe," McFarland said. "We must continue to provide opportunities that challenge students and prepare them for a changing world. By providing quality education we keep home values increasing and Quincy continues to be a desirable place to live, to work and to raise a family. This is the ultimate value to the taxpayers."

In his address during Monday's inauguration ceremony, McFarland reaffirmed the Quincy Public schools' purpose.

"Our mission is to provide a safe and nurturing learning environment for children to achieve their maximum potential," he told the audience in the North Quincy High School Auditorium. "Our desire is to develop students who persevere in their studies, take responsibility for their choices, and are honest in character.

"We seek to equip the students with the necessary skills to thrive as productive workers and committed citizens and to meet the challenge of change in a global community," he said. "We strive to help children discover and explore their gifts and talents, and to value and respect each other's uniqueness."

MICHAEL McFARLAND, unanimously elected vice chairman of the School Committee, keynoted financial issues during his acceptance address. Quincy Sun Photo/Trish Bossart

He said the city must build a new high school, replace Central Middle School and renovate Sterling Middle School.

"We inch closer to the reality of a new Quincy High School daily," said McFarland. "The process has been tedious but we will stay the course. This is way too important to the future of Quincy Public Schools."

McFarland briefly waded into the rent dispute between the city and Quincy College.

"The Quincy Public Schools and Quincy College have had a positive educational relationship over the last 40 years," McFarland, entering his seventh year on the committee, said. "We need to continue this positive relationship. The time to resolve the current rent dispute is now.

"The School Committee's issue with Quincy College is only about rent and rent only," he said. "We don't belong in court."

McFarland said the city has been fortunate to have had elected officials and residents who support education.

"The status of education in Quincy is a constantly evolving and improving process," he said. "It contributes immensely to the quality of life in the City of Quincy helping to make Quincy the ideal place to live, work and raise a family."

McFarland welcomed his colleagues to the committee, including David McCarthy, the newest member of the body.

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason – to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close – you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

Phelan And The Next Mayor

This is the time of the year for looking ahead.

And, there must have been a few doing just that as Mayor William Phelan was taking his second term oath Monday.

PHELAN

Political watchers were toying with the inevitable question:

How many more terms?

Phelan has indicated he doesn't intend to make a career of being mayor. He has a law practice waiting for his return.

He might just complete this second term – or go for one more – and then bid City Hall fond farewell.

He certainly has no intentions of trying to match Jim Sheets' six terms.

Regardless of whether he decides to seek a third term – his eventual successor no doubt was sitting there in the North Quincy High School auditorium Monday looking on and maybe day-dreaming a little.

Phelan is an exception, but Quincy's mayors usually come out of the city council. When he stunned the political scene in 2001 with his 17-vote upset win over Sheets, he was only in the second year of his first term on the school committee. A virtual political unknown.

And, became the first mayor in 79 years to get to that office without first taking the traditional route through the city council chamber.

As Phelan was delivering his inaugural address Monday, a councillor or two perhaps were thinking little thoughts something like:

"Someday that will be me up there. . . standing there taking that oath, giving my inaugural address."

RAYMONDI

Who are seen as likely future mayor candidates?

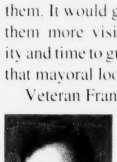
Well, Dan Raymondi is still very much in the likely category even though he decided to pass up a run last year while city council president.

Others seen as potential future candidates are Doug Gutro, John Keenan and Joseph Finn. And Kevin Coughlin seems interested.

GUTRO

KEENAN

Raymondi might take Phelan on if he seeks a third term. Others would probably wait until Phelan decides to relinquish the keys to the mayor's office.



FINN

Waiting would be beneficial to them. It would give them more visibility and time to grow that mayoral look.

Veteran Frank McCauley, the new city council president, isn't interested in using that title as a springboard to the mayor's office. He's been there, done that for four terms. And is retiring from politics after this term, closing out a distinguished 32-year career.

McCAULEY

Leo Kelly, returning to his Ward 1 council seat after 20 years, isn't thinking mayor either. Nor are newcomers Ward's 4 Jay Davis and Ward 6's Alicia Gardner.

Gardner took her seat this week as the first woman councillor in 10 years and only the fourth in the city's history.

There are those who hope to see a woman in the mayor's office one of these days.

Only four women have tried to get there:

Rita Anderson (1971), Grace Saphir (1973 and 1975), Joanne Condon and Sabina (Kavanagh) Stenberg, both in 1985.

Saphir came the closest, polling over 10,000 votes in a 1973 challenge of incumbent Walter Hannon.

But, as Phelan has shown, you don't have to be a city councillor or council president to get elected mayor. You can come out of the school committee as he did.

Two names being mentioned are Michael McFarland and Ron Mariano.

McFARLAND

MARIANO

McFarland was elected vice chairman at this week's school committee organizational meeting. Mariano, who is also a state representative, is beginning his 15th year on the school committee. He was also the last male vice chairman before McFarland serving in 1996-97. Not Steve Durkin as reported here last week. (Correction courtesy of Frank McCauley, the city's political historian. Frank doesn't let anything get by him.)

Whether any of the names being mentioned as potential mayor candidates ever actually run, remains to be seen.

And, could there have been someone else sitting in the NQHS auditorium Monday with thoughts of someday occupying the third floor office overlooking Hancock St.?

Someone not being mentioned.

NEWTON

ALSO LOOKING AHEAD are former Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton and his bride-to-be, Laura MacKnight, who will be married Saturday at 5 p.m. at Holy Family Church in Rockland.

They will take their vows from Fr. James Hickey, pastor, a Quincy boy and friend of the MacKnight family.

Newton's brother, Doug, will be the best man and Nicole Millette the maid of honor. And an added Quincy touch: Norfolk County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis and Tom Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park Department, will be eucharistic ministers at the Mass.

The wedding, which was planned some time ago, happens to fall on the same night as the Patriots-Titans playoff game.

"I promised Laura I won't even take a peek at the game on TV," says Joe. "And I better not."

ANOTHER COUPLE LOOKING ahead are Councillor Doug Gutro and his wife, Sue, who are expecting their second little constituent May 19. They know it is a boy. He'll be joining his big brother, Brian, who will be one on Sunday.

Congratulations.

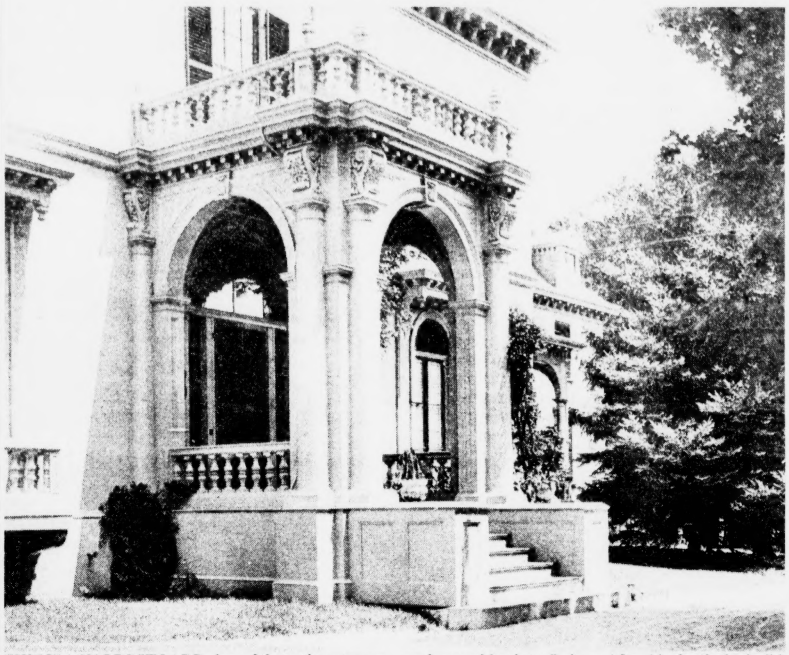
AND REALLY LOOKING ahead – far ahead – are Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley and his wife, Rosemarie.

BRADLEY

They'll filling a time capsule for their grandson, John "Jack" Hood, son of Peter and Helena Hood of Hull.



He was born Aug. 19, 2003. The capsule, which will be placed in the attic of the Bradley home, is to be opened Aug. 19, 2024 – his 21st birthday.

Among the items placed in the capsule so far are: his birth bracelet from South Shore Hospital, notes from his grandmother and grandfather, photos of him taken every week since he was born by his aunt, Annette Bradley, and the Dec. 31 issue of The Quincy Sun with its review of the year 2003 in Quincy.

"Jack will be able to look back on his birth and what was happening in the year he was born," says proud grandmother, Rosemarie.

Almost 21 years from now. That's really looking ahead.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1905 POSTCARD view of the main entrance to the Quincy Mansion School on East Elm Avenue in Wollaston. It was probably the most elaborate portico on any building in Quincy. The mansion was originally built in 1949 as the retirement home for Josiah Quincy, Jr., when he completed his term as mayor of Boston and moved back to Quincy. After his death the building was used as a private school for girls until 1919 when it became home to the Eastern Nazarene College. They used it for many years and tried to keep it as part of the campus but it finally gave way to the college's expansion in the 1970s and is no longer extant.

READERS FORUM

Quincy Must Invest For The Future

A recent article in The Quincy Sun by Alan Cousin of the Quincy Taxpayers Association raised the issue that excessive spending by local government has resulted in significant increases in property taxes. Alan Cousin concludes that this pattern in harmful to the City and will ultimately force many longtime Quincy residents out of the City.

Unfortunately, public discourse on important issues sometimes becomes untethered from fact and reason.

Alan Cousin stated that residential taxes have increased substantially recently due to excessive spending by our local government. I beg to differ.

First, residential taxes have increased significantly due to a substantial increase in residential property values over a short period of time and not due to excessive spending. Tax bills are determined by applying the tax rate to the value of the property. The increase in taxes is a direct result of the increase in property values.

Second, there has not been excessive spending. Mayor Phelan instituted significant spending cuts two years ago and has made every effort to control costs. The City Council also made spending cuts and I believe has made a good faith effort to control costs without sacrificing essential services.

Our elected officials are confronted with tough economic times and a decrease in state and federal assistance. This results in an increased burden on local government to produce revenue to cover operating expenses. Moreover, the economic recession has negatively impacted many businesses and resulted in decreased revenues from the commercial property tax bases. Thus a disproportionate burden has fallen on residential taxpayers over the last couple of years, but this will change as the economy improves and as residential values level off in the coming years.

An improved economy will bring increased state and federal assistance and increased revenues from the commercial tax base to help ease the burden on residential taxpayers. Any significant reduction in the residential tax rate at this time will necessitate a significant reduction in services and investment in the future of our City.

Alan Cousin also did an analysis of recent residential tax increases and concluded that if spending continues at current levels the average tax bill will be $10,320 by 2016 and that in a few years average residents would be forced out of Quincy. These statements are excessive and ignore the basics of economics and the free market system.

As stated, residential tax rates have increased so significantly due to the substantial increases in residential properties over a short period of time. These values accurately reflect the current market because people are willing to pay those prices in large part due to low interest rates that make mortgages affordable. Once prices get too high or the cost of mortgages increases, you will see a decrease in demand for houses and the values will level off or even decrease.

When values level off or decrease, property taxes will follow. You can't look at a short period of time in which residential prices have increase far beyond normal and assume that this will continue over a long period of time. Likewise, average residents will not be forced out of Quincy because the free market system will force the necessary adjustments once costs get high enough that it affects demand.

Where are these average residents going? Property values and taxes have increased in surrounding communities as well. The normal economic forces of pricing, supply and demand will take care of the situation.

There is no doubt that the recent substantial residential tax increases place a heavy burden on a segment of the City's population. In particular, the increase affects many elderly who are on fixed incomes and those who cannot provide for themselves and need assistance. But there are various options to provide relief to those who need assistance and I believe we have a moral obligation to provide this assistance.

We are better off investing in our City and attracting people who are willing to pay more to live in the City. This will provide more revenue, which can be used for those who truly need assistance. The answer is not to cut services and investment in those things that make our City an attractive place to live. In the long run this will have a devastating effect on the City.

If Quincy is to remain a vibrant City, we must invest for the future. This means investing in our schools, public safety, the infrastructure and continuing to provide services that make Quincy an attractive place to live.

The politicians in office are a convenient whipping horse when taxes go up. Instead of laying blame where it does not belong, let's resolve to do our part to invest in our community and make it a place that thrives economically and at the same time provides assistance to hose in need. Big deeds need big spirits. Our forbearers made many sacrifices to help make this City become what it is, we need to stand up and do our part.

McIntyre First New Mayor In 12 Years

This Week
38 Years Ago

James McIntyre, who also serves as state senator, was sworn in as Quincy's first new Mayor in 12 years, in ceremonies at City Hall.

McIntyre succeeded Amelio Della Chiesa who had served 12 years as mayor – four under the Plan E charter and eight under the present Plan A.

In his inaugural speech, McIntyre stressed the need for "programs to keep our city young." He called for a new board to oversee the Department of Public Works, closer planning with the MBTA in the construction of the new rapid transit line, the construction of a new north-south artery, a new branch library to serve Houghs Neck and Adams Shore, and the establishment of the position of city planner.

BURKED ELECTED COUNCIL PRESIDENT

George Burke was elected Council President by a 6-3 vote over Francis McCauley. After the vote, McCauley moved to make the vote unanimous.

Voting for Burke were Burke, two newly elected councillors Clifford Marshall and Vincent Smyth, and Richard Barry, George McDonald and John Quinn.

Walter Hannon and John Koegler voted for McCauley.

Percy Lane was re-elected clerk of committees, a position he has held since 1937.

NEW YEAR'S BABIES

Quincy City Hospital reported four New Year's babies, all from Quincy families:

For Mr. and Mrs. Irving Coughlin of Faxon Park Rd., a son; for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chittick of Captain's Walk, a son; for Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Olsson of Remington Ct., a son; and for Mr. and Mrs. David Sinclair of Willow Ave., a daughter.

BELLOTTI FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

Francis Bellotti of Quincy, former lieutenant governor and candidate for governor, became the first Democrat to formally announce his candidacy for the post of Attorney General that will be vacated by Edward Brooke. Brooke was leaving to run for Leverett Saltonstall's seat in the U.S. Senate.

It was expected that former Governor Foster Furcolo and Rep. Michael Dukakis would also be candidates

Sunday Liquor Sales Up To City Council

By TOM HENSHAW

It's okay with the state if the packies sell liquor on Sunday but it's still up to the city to give its imprimatur and that may be a long process.

And whether or not the liquor dealers themselves like the idea is a 50-50 proposition.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi plans to introduce a resolution in the Jan. 20 Council meeting asking a vote on acceptance of the state's newly approved permissive legislation.

DAN RAYMONDI

From there it will go into the Council's Public Safety Committee, which Raymondi chairs, to receive input from the public and the city's large and small liquor dealers.

"I would not like to see a vote without input from the public," said Raymondi. "The impact of Sunday openings may favor some store owners and be a negative to some others.

"The owners of small package stores may not want to be forced to open and pay for extra help and electricity and heat just because the big ones are open.

"We'll hold as many hearings as necessary to receive input from the public. I wouldn't want to take a vote without it."

Raymondi said he personally has no opinion on the Sunday openings "until we know what the impact will be on the owners."

Council President Frank McCauley came down cautiously on the side of Sunday openings. "Given the situation," he said, "we should exercise our option."

If and when the City Council passes the resolution, it remains for Mayor William Phelan to add his approval and then the License Board will have a chance at it.

The liquor dealers themselves are sharply divided on the Sabbath openings, although most if not all have been open Sundays between Thanksgiving and New Years with the city's permission.

"We'll be open," said Jim Gaudiano, manager of National Wine and Liquors, 101 Falls Boulevard, Quincy Point, a franchised operation inside Roche Brothers Supermarket.

"We're against it," said George Haivanis, manager of Wollaston Wine and Spirits, 58-60 Beale St., Wollaston, "but we'll be open.

"We'll get no benefit out of it. It won't generate any more business but we'll have to open if everyone else is."

Dennis Carson, manager of the Copeland Package Store, 273 Copeland St., West Quincy, told The Sun in a November interview that he doesn't plan to open on Sunday.

"I'm not going to open," he said. "I'd have to pay my people time and a half. I couldn't sell enough to make it up."

In the same November interview, Michael Shain, manager of Discount Liquors of Quincy, 603 Washington St., Quincy Point, said he was all for Sunday openings.

"I think it will be good," he said. "We're on Route 3A, the road to the beaches, so business should be up during the summer months."

"I'm not for it," said the manager of Granite Discount Liquors, 301 Quincy Ave., Quincy Point, a man who identified himself as "everyone calls me 'Snuffy.'" and he offered a suggestion.

"There are 27 liquor establishments in Quincy," he said. "What if they all got together and decided that five would open one Sunday and then take five weeks off while the others opened.

"We'd all make money and keep expenses down by not paying for the help or the lights or the heat on four Sundays."

What goes on inside the Quincy Masonic Building? Who are the Masons? What do they do?

The imposing Indiana limestone building at 1170 Hancock Street, has been a familiar landmark and the home of Quincy's Masonic community since it was dedicated in 1927.

To most people the Masonic fraternity is a mystery, and that's largely our own fault because, over the years, we have chosen to let our good works speak for themselves. But too many folks still believe that Freemasonry is a secret organization.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Yes we have some secret handshakes but, if we were truly a secret society, we would not have our familiar square and compasses emblem over the door and our members probably wouldn't wear lapel pins and rings. We're proud of who we are and what we do as Masons.

Masons have been helping to make Quincy a better community since the formation of Rural Lodge in 1801. And many of the things we do might surprise you.

Certainly you're familiar with the Shriners Burns Hospital in Boston. Every child receives treatment absolutely free. The hospital has no billing department. But, did you know that every Shriner first belongs to a Masonic Lodge?

Masons seek men of good character, who believe in God, to join in our good works. But, Masonry is not a religion. We are the world's oldest and largest fraternity of men based on a foundation of brotherly love, relief and truth. In fact, we like to say that Freemasonry makes good men better!

In future issues of this newspaper we'll be telling you more about the Masons of Quincy, what we do and how you can become a part of our good works while sharing fellowship and having fun. Yes, fun!

Masonry offers you the opportunity to improve your community and to improve yourself. For more information without any obligation, call the number below.

Community Blood Drive
Jan. 26 At Point Congregational Church

The Red Cross will hold a Community Blood Drive Monday, Jan. 26, from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy.

Anyone 17 years of age or older, weighing 110 pounds or more and feeling in good health may be eligible to donate blood.

Questions about donating blood should be directed to 1-800-448-3543.

It was pointed out that nearly 1,600 units of blood are needed each day to help those in need in the community, yet only about 5 percent of the population donate blood.

One single donation may help at least two, possibly three or more patients in need of a blood transfusion.

QHS Nite Out Meeting Jan. 22

A Quincy High School's Senior Night Out meeting will be held Thursday, Jan. 22 at 7 p.m. in the Pride Room at Quincy High School.

Beer, Wine License Suspended Three Days For Sale To Minor

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday issued a three-day suspension of the beer and wine license held by Juliano's Beer & Wine, 1504 Hancock St. for serving alcohol to a minor on Dec. 12. The owner is Alan Dinh.ππ

On a motion made by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and seconded by Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, the vote was unanimous.

The suspension will be on Jan. 22, 23 and 24.

Capt. Robert Crowley told the board that on the night of Dec. 12, he noticed a female coming out of Juliano's with two-thirty packs of beer and when she was about to enter a car, he stopped and asked her for her license.

She said she had no license and was 18 years of age. Crowley asked her if she showed an ID to the owner. She said she hadn't because she had gone in there previously with a 21 year old friend, and that the owner recognized her.

She also said she had heard that if you want to buy liquor in a place that doesn't always check ID's, you "go to Juliano"s."

Crowley said the beer was taken from the girl and a call to her parents was made.

Atty. James Timmins, counsel for Dinh said Dinh acknowledged the report as being accurate, but disputed the fact concerning one person's opinion about purchasing liquor without an ID.

Timmins told the board that because this was the first offense for Dinh and the fact that he is a new owner be taken in considertion. He said he recognizes the gravity of the situation but asked the board nonetheless to issue a one day suspension since Dinh fully cooperated with Crowley.

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard said the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission states that all ID's be shown no matter how many times they are in the store. He called the incident a "clear violation."

Chairman Joseph Shea said Dinh has five days in which to appeal.

Before the board voted on the case of Juliano's, Crowley said that on the night of Jan. 2, he observed a man carrying two bags of liquor. The man was about 35 years of age, but was according to Crowley "not in any condition to purchase liquor."

When Crowley looked in the car, he sawthree youths, a 15 year old from Quincy in the front seat, a 20 year old driver from Mattapan and a 17 year old from Dorchester.

Crowley said he should not have been served his condition, plus he wondered if the man was buying liquor for these youths. He put him on a bus to Weymouth, and sent the other youths home.

In Dinh's defense, Timmins said the man in question could have been waited on without even speaking. He could've shown his ID and grabbed the bottles off the shelf making it hard for Dinh to tell what condition he was in.

In other business, the board will meet Jan. 13 regarding an incident at Rouillard's on the corner of Copeland and Common St.

Deadline Jan. 30

Nominations Open For Environmental Affairs Award

The Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs is currently seeking nominations for the 2004 Secretary of Environmental Affairs Award for Excellence in Environmental Education, Sen. Michael Morrissey announces.

Any individual, student, teacher, school or organization within the Commonwealth who has distinguished themselves through the utilization of environmental education is eligible for this award.

There will be a formal award ceremony honoring these people whose actions and/or programs create a greater awareness and appreciation for conservation and innovation in today's modern world environment.

"This is an excellent incentive for students, teachers, and individuals in our community to continue, or to begin, to teach others vital information about our natural resources," said Morrissey.

The award ceremony will be held during Earth Week, April, 2004. Winners will receive a cash award or certificate of recognition for their efforts. The deadline for nominations is Friday, Jan. 30.

Applications are available either by contacting the office of Sen. Morrissey, 617-722-1494 or by internet at www.state.ma.us/envir/ee.

Income Tax Assistance Offered To Senior Citizens

The Council on Aging will offer free income tax assistance and training to senior citizens starting in February and ending April 15.

Madeline Papile will offer her expertise to the cause, aided by specially skilled volunteers.

Volunteers are needed for the IRS/AARP tax-aide program. They will receive training to do Federal and State Income Tax Returns for lower and middle income persons.

Those interested in volunteering should call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1246 and ask for Cleta or Lena.

Musician Mabel Biagini, Educator John Buckley Receive Honorary Degrees

Quincy College Celebrates Quincy At Commencement

Mabel Biagini, a Quincy musical legend, and the honorary degree recipient at Quincy College's Winter Commencement since the streets she serenaded the crowds." graduates attended [illegible] at Quincy's Marriott Hotel.

As part of her acceptance speech, the effervescent, 80-something on the accordion performance highlighted the afternoon of awards, degrees and celebration.

Biagini, who emotionally expressed how grateful she was for her wonderful life and career, said, "This honor is [illegible] on the cake."

Also receiving an honorary degree was guest speaker John Buckley, a seasoned educator from the Quincy Public Schools who was surprised when President Sean Barry presented an Honorary Associate Degree in Public Service to him at the conclusion of his commencement address.

Barry cited Mr. Buckley's contributions to the community including his 39 years as an educator with the last 35 years at Central Middle School in Quincy. He was also an adjunct instructor at Quincy College for 15 years.

A resident of Quincy, he was recently named "Citizen of the Year" by a civic group and he created an intramural sports group for the children of Quincy.

Barry said Buckley's volunteerism and service to the people of Quincy made him the ideal candidate to receive this honor.

Biagini has been playing the accordion for over 50 years. Born and raised in Quincy, she began playing while in junior high and continued after graduation from Quincy High School. She has entertained audiences throughout Quincy and the surrounding South Shore including a notable performance for the Kennedys.

Always active, she is booked for 25 shows per month, and for 10 years she taught the accordion in South Boston to a new generation of musicians.

Barry said through her music and extraordinary showmanship, Biagini has touched the lives of countless people in the community. And, at age 82, she shows no signs of stopping. She was presented her Associate Degree in Music Arts Honoris Causa with family and friends in attendance.

Nursing graduate Sybil Allen was asked to the podium by Theresa Tord-Pratelli, chairman of the Board, to offer greetings on behalf of her fellow graduates.

Allen was chosen to address the entire graduating class on Saturday after her inspiring speech delivered the previous evening at the RN Professional Recognition Ceremony. She urged her classmates to not be complacent and to continue moving up the academic ladder.

With passion and enthusiasm she insisted that "we can earn our bachelor's degree, earn our master's and we can get our doctorates. Quincy College has laid a great foundation for us. Don't stop here!"

Along with the special guests, nearly 200 graduates of Quincy College received their degrees or certificates during the graduation at the Quincy Marriott Hotel.

According to College President Sean L. Barry,

"Our graduates, if not already residents, have spent so much time in Quincy it has become their home away from home." Barry said. "Our special guests, who epitomize our neighbors in Quincy, were chosen to inspire our students and show them that people can affect our community in a positive way no matter what their futures may hold."

As indicated by the cheers of laughter and over 750 guests singing in harmony in the hotel's main ballroom, the event will leave a lasting impression on the graduates.

"We try to plan a ceremony that people will remember. The profiles and personal stories of our guests are meant to demonstrate the potential that each one of our graduates holds", said Tom De Santes, Vice President for Enrollment Management.

"For many, this is just the beginning of lifelong learning. For some, it is a culmination of their success in balancing work, family and studies. For others, it is a new beginning.

"No matter what brings our students to the ceremony, we want it to be a wonderful celebration even if we have to add some bells and whistles – and in Mabel's case her infamous bike horn."

Barry, at the conclusion of the ceremonies after the degrees had been conferred and the accordion was placed back in its case, summarized the winter ceremony by adding, "If you didn't notice by now, we do things a little differently here at Quincy College."

Judging by the immediate round of applause, the audience agreed.

minute rush to get things done."

During his speech, the former four-term mayor recalled how he lost a bid for the council presidency in 1966 to George Burke.

"I didn't think it would take this long to become council president," he joked to the audience.

McCauley said he will be working with City Clerk Joseph Shea and fellow councillors to determine whether any changes to council rules are necessary.

"We will be taking a look at the present rules and see if any changes are necessary," said McCauley.

Any rules changes would be addressed at the next council meeting, Jan. 20, he said.

As part of the ceremonies, McCauley presented outgoing Council President Dan Raymondi with a commemorative gavel for his tenure over the past two years.

In addition, McCauley gave Raymondi a citation for being only the second elected official in the city's history to serve as both council president and vice chair of the school committee. Raymondi served as vice chairman of the school committee from 1994-5.

The late Patricia Toland was the first to hold both offices.

Jeanne Reardon was also unanimously elected to serve as clerk of committees, a position she has held since 1980.

The other city councillors beginning their terms are: Leo Kelly, Ward 1; Daniel Raymondi, Ward 2; Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3; Jay Davis, Ward 4; Doug Gutro, Ward 5; Alicia Gardner, Ward 6; Joseph Finn and John Keenan, councillors-at-large.

CITY CLERK Joseph Shea swears in the 2004-05 City Council at Monday's inaugural ceremonies. From the left Alicia Gardner (Ward 6), Joseph Finn (at-large), John Keenan (at-large), Kevin Coughlin (Ward 3), Frank McCauley (at-large), Douglas Gutro (Ward 5), Daniel Raymondi (Ward 2), James (Jay) Davis (Ward 4) and Leo Kelly (Ward 1). Quincy Sun Photos/Trish Bessard

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING the inaugural ceremonies Monday were, from the left, former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and James Sheets, state Treasurer Tim Cahill, former city councillor, and Congressman William Delahunt, former city councillor and district attorney.

Phelan Proposes 5-Point Tax Relief Plan

City [illegible] nity anything is possible," he said.

The [illegible] inaugurate ceremony [illegible] saw the swearing [illegible] bers of the City Council, School Committee and the subsequent [illegible] by unanimous vote of Councillor Francis X. McCauley as [illegible] President and School Committee member Michael McFarland as Vice Chairman of the School Committee.

Among those sworn in Monday were newly elected councillors Leo Kelly of Ward 1, Jay Davis of Ward 4 and Alicia Gardner of Ward 6. John Keenan, who was appointed councillor-at-large after Tim Cahill resigned to become state treasurer, also took the oath.

On the school committee, David McCarthy was sworn sealing with Linda Stice and Hans Dreyer, who was appointed to the committee in 2002 but was up for election this year.

McCauley enters his 31st year in public office holding the position of Council President for the first time.

Jeanne Reardon was unanimously re-elected to her 25th one-year term as Clerk of Committees.

Over the past two years, Phelan said, the city erased a $5 million budget deficit and sustained $7.2 million in local aid cuts without massive layoffs or reductions in services. The city's financial situation is looking much brighter than when he took office two years ago, he said.

"As other cities closed schools and firehouses, and laid off huge numbers of teachers and public safety personnel, we managed our resources well enough to avoid these measures," he said.

Since taking office, Phelan said the city's fund balance has reversed itself, from a $5 million deficit to a $200,000 positive balance.

The city was able to accomplish this goal by streamlining city government and using innovative and cost savings measures, he said. Last year's early retirement incentive, which led to a reduction of 100 employees, also contributed to the turnaround, he said.

About 70 Quincy firefighters picketed outside the ceremony, accusing the mayor of trying to whittle away their vacation benefits. The Quincy Firefighters Association and the city have reached an impasse in contract negotiations and have filed for arbitration.

Quincy firefighters maintain they have been working without a new contract since July, 2001.

Within strict financial constraints, Phelan said the city is moving forward with a number of positive developments, including reclamation of the Broad Meadows Marsh, repairing sewer lines near Wollaston Beach, passage of the $10 million open space initiative, approval of payment for a new high school, and increased accessibility to municipal government.

Phelan said revenue from the Quarry Hills golf course and the hotel/motel tax will help the city to preserve open space, improve parks and repair the city's streets.

The mayor also said he would implement a plan for seniors to defer water bills.

Phelan promised that his forthcoming fiscal 2005 budget would be "clean" and drafted with the "best interests of the hard-pressed taxpayers."

This year, the administration will introduce a pavement management plan to prioritize the city's streets and make necessary repairs, he said.

The plan will "take the politics out of paving and develop a comprehensive and efficient way to begin performing much-needed repairs to our streets and sidewalks," said Phelan.

The mayor urged the city council to repeal an ordinance that establishes a minimum- manning standard for the fire department. If instituted, the ordinance would cost taxpayers millions of dollars every year, he said.

Phelan's theme throughout the speech was Quincy's strong sense of pride and community involvement.

He cited the success of the Babe Ruth World Series and last month's food drive as prime examples of the city's community involvement and volunteerism.

"Just this past month, in the face of disturbing reports of hunger in our city, the citizens of Quincy came together," said Phelan. "They rallied along with the United States Postal Service to tackle the problem. And together we collected more than six tons of food for Quincy's food pantries."

Phelan took time to honor the country's military servicemen and women fighting overseas. He recognized Quincy families in attendance who have loved ones stationed overseas.

"Words are not sufficient to honor the burdens that these families shoulder, and the sacrifices they willingly make as their sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers, protect our nation in what is an increasingly dangerous world," said Phelan.

Also attending the ceremony were family members of Todd Caldwell, a Quincy resident who died serving his country while stationed in Iraq last year.

Along with Tobin and McCauley, former Mayors Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and James Sheets attended the inauguration ceremony.

Those in attendance were also treated to a moving performance by Gerald McCarthy, 11-year old son of David McCarthy. Although completely blind, Gerald played on the piano a rendition of "Minuet 2," Anna Magdalena Bach's classical piece. He received a thunderous standing ovation for his efforts.

Other officials attending the ceremony included Congressman William Delahunt, state Treasurer Tim Cahill, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, state Reps. Stephen Tobin, Bruce Ayers and Ron Mariano, who also serves on the school committee. Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, Register of Deeds William O'Donnell and County Commissioner John Gillis, former city clerk, also attended.

The Invocation was given by Imam Talal Eid of the New England Islamic Center, and a Benediction was administered by the Rev. Anne Suzedell from the Quincy Point Congregational Church and the Rev. John O'Brien, pastor of Sacred Heart Church.

JEANNE REARDON is sworn into her 25th consecutive one-year term as clerk of City Council Committee by City Clerk Joseph Shea.

REAL ESTATE

New Federal Law Governing Credit Reports, Credit Scores

Consumers Now Have Better Access To Credit History

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

Sweeping changes to the laws governing credit reports and credit scores were signed into law by President George Bush in December, giving consumers more rights and better access to their financial histories.

The Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act of 2003 (known as FACT) requires that consumers in all 50 states be given one free copy of their credit report per year upon request. Previously, only Massachusetts and a handful of states had free disclosure laws in place.

In addition, consumers now have access to their credit scores for a "reasonable fee" and an explanation of the factors used to calculate those scores.

Consumers who receive credit terms that are less than the most favorable offered now will receive a "risk-based pricing notice" that discloses what information was used to make that decision.

"This is a tremendous victory for home buyers, who will now be able to access their numerical credit score and the wealth of factors that influence that score," said Walt McDonald, president of the National Association of Realtors. "A consumer's credit score has become increasingly important to that person's ability to obtain the necessary mortgage financing and insurance to buy a home."

Acknowledging the increased use of scoring in both the pricing and approval rates of mortgages, auto loans, insurance policies and other financial products, the legislation requires federal regulators to conduct a detailed study of how credit scores and insurance scores affect the products offered to consumers.

"For our economy, reliable access to credit and capital is essential to growth and prosperity. For individuals, a chance to get ahead and to make a better life often depends on building credit," Bush said at the Dec. 4 White House ceremony.

"The bill I'm about to sign will help make sure that hardworking, law-abiding citizens are treated fairly when they apply for credit." The FACT Act allows consumers to opt out of marketing programs by affiliates of companies with which they do business, mandates that creditors notify customers when negative information is added to their credit files, and establishes national safeguards against identity theft.

"This bill also confronts the problem of identity theft," Bush added. "A growing number of Americans are victimized by criminals who assume their identities and cause havoc in their financial affairs. These reforms make permanent the uniform national standards of our credit markets, and institute new, strong consumer protections."

According to federal regulators, the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act of 2003 will

• Ensure that lenders make decisions on loans based on full and fair credit histories, and not on discriminatory stereotypes. In 1996, uniform national standards were established to set clear rules on what credit agencies were entitled to include in individual credit reports. This legislation makes those national standards permanent.o Improve the quality of credit information, and protect consumers against identity theft.

• Give consumers the right to their credit report free of charge every year. Consumers will be able to review a free report every year for unauthorized activity, including activity that might be the result of identity theft. [Massachusetts residents already enjoyed this benefit under state law.]

• Help prevent identity theft by requiring merchants to leave all but the last five digits of a credit card number off store receipts. This will ensure that pieces of paper that most people throw away do not contain a credit card number, a key to financial identities.

• Create a national system of fraud detection to make identity thieves more likely to be caught.

• Establish a nationwide system of "fraud alerts" for consumers to place on their credit files.

Homebuying Info Meeting Wednesday

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy, will offer a free orientation session to assist first-time homebuyers with determining their level of mortgage readiness.

The meeting, sponsored by Randolph Savings Bank, is set for Wednesday, Jan. 7 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Bank's corporate offices, 10 Cabot Place, Stoughton.

Topics to be discussed include credit requirements, employment requirements, down payment requirements, and affordable housing opportunities.

Participation in this meeting is a requirement to determine which first-time homebuyer class participants belong in. To register, call (617) 770-2227 ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Fire Safety Tips For Your Home

(NAPS) — Fire safety is no accident. Whether it's the glow of a single candle or the flames wrapping a bundle of wood in the fireplace, open flames can quickly turn from cozy to dangerous.

Fire safety is of special concern during the winter months when there is increased use of heat, electricity and appliances. Heating is the second leading cause of residential fires and fire deaths.

The U.S. Fire Administration offers the following tips to help reduce fire hazards in your home and protect you and your family in the event of a fire:

Safe Heating:

• Don't use the oven to heat your home; it's a fire hazard and source of toxic fumes.

• Only use the fuel recommended by the manufacturer. Never refill a space heater while it is operating or still hot.

• Space heaters need space. Keep combustibles at least three feet away from each heater.

• Have your furnace and chimney professionally inspected annually and cleaned if necessary.

• Keep fire in the fireplace. Use a glass or metal screen in front of your fireplace.

• Dispose of ashes in metal containers away from the home.

Fire Safety Around The House:

• Don't put flammable decorations close to heat sources.

• Don't overload your outlets.

• If you use lit candles to decorate or in case of a power outage, make sure they are in stable holders and place them where they can not be easily knocked over.

• Install a smoke alarm on every level of your home. Having a working smoke alarm doubles your chances of surviving a fire.

• Develop a fire escape plan with your household and practice it regularly. Know two ways to exit from every room in your home.

The United States Fire Administration, an entity of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and now a part of the Department of Homeland Security, is the federal leader in public fire education and awareness, fire service training, fire-related technology and data collection.

Answers To Some Common Questions Homeowners Face

By PAUL O'MALLEY

Question: What's the difference between Rock Salt and Ice Melt?

Answer: Per pound Rock Salt (Sodium Chloride) is an inexpensive solution. However Rock Salt is usually damaging to concrete, bricks and doesn't perform in extreme temperatures.

Ice melt is a better product but not all ice melt products are the same. The best one to get will contain 90% calcium chloride flake. This product is safest for walkways etc.

Some others still may contain a fair amount of rock salt so look at the label.

Next comes the severity of the ice condition and availability of product will dictate what you have to use. If you have the choice I would use calcium chloride first.

Question: What is better, aluminum or plastic snow shovels?

Answer: Neither type of shovel should be used to chop ice or hard snow. I find in normal shoveling that the aluminum can bend out of shape easily just by hitting a crack in your walkway. The plastic shovel will usually bend back into shape.

Used correctly a good quality poly plastic shovel can last for years and the snow tends to glide off easier then aluminum.

Question: What will happen if I put regular gas in my oil gas mix snowblower?

Answer: If you have two kinds of yard equipment, a straight gas (4cycle) lawn mower and a oil gas mix (2 cycle) snowblower it is really important to label the gas container you are using. Running a 2 cycle snowblower with straight gas will ruin the engine not to mention your day when you now have to shovel that 2-foot deep snow and then pay for an expensive repair.

It's an easy mistake to make so mark that gas can!

You can send your questions to askpaul1@hotmail.com or call in your questions to Paul at 773-0808.

Did You Know?

The right choice of shingles is important to the life of your roof.

Experts recommend asphalt shingles that are thick and offer many layers of protection for your roof.

Also, an underlayment called WinterGuard by CertainTeed is added protection against leaks caused by ice dams or wind-driven rain. It is installed at the eaves and should ice dams or wind-driven rain occur on your roof, water will not be able to penetrate this membrane, even where it is nailed into the roof deck, because it seals around the nail.

Conway Financing Guide Explains Mortgage Options For First-Time Home Buyers

If buying a home in 2004 is among your goals for the New Year, the real estate experts at Jack Conway & Co. and Conway Financial Services are ready to help you make the "American Dream" a reality.

Think you can't afford a home of your own? You may be surprised at the mortgage options available in today's market.

A comprehensive publication, "Affording the American Dream: A Guide to Financing Your First Home," explains these options in easy-to-understand terms. The booklet is available from all of Conway's 41 sales offices and from CFS directly.

The guide outlines the mortgage programs that cater to first-timers, including loans designed especially for teachers, veterans and buyers with little cash available for a downpayment. Another loan allows buyers to finance up to 103 percent of the sale price to cover closing costs, while some programs will include the costs of renovations in the total mortgage amount.

The financing guide complements Conway's American Dream program, which is aimed at helping novice buyers navigate the complexities of purchasing real estate.

Buyers can contact their local offices for additional material on purchasing a home, and receive a detailed report on properties priced under $250,000 for sale in their area.

American Dream agents can e-mail daily updates on new listings to customers, and also can provide customized town profiles and school data that is maintained by Conway's Relocation Division.

Conway Financial Services is the mortgage arm of Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co., the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts. CFS maintains correspondent relationships with some of the largest lenders in the East and originates a full line of mortgage products.

For more information about all types of mortgages, and for the latest interest rates, call CFS at (781) 681-9400.

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 810 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. In 2003, the company was ranked 77th in the nation among real estate firms in the annual Power Broker survey, compiled and published by National Relocation and Real Estate magazine.

Real Estate Salesperson Course At Quincy College Begins Friday

Quincy 50's Alumni Benefit Fund Dinner At Quincy Sons Of Italy

Football Legend Pete Zoia To Be Honored Sunday

The Quincy 50's Alumni Benefit Fund will honor North Quincy High School football legend Pete Zoia Sunday, Jan. 11.

"I just think this is very important," said Ron Ivil, president of the 50's group. "I thought it might boost the morale in sports. He's getting up in age and this just shows that people are not forgotten. He set an example. He's a great family man and a great friend to us."

North Quincy High football players, fans and friends are invited to attend the buffet dinner from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry Street. There will be door prizes.

Donation is $20. Money raised will be used to build a display case of his memorabilia at the high school. His memorabilia will also be on display at the banquet. For tickets or more information, contact Ivil at 781-337-0062.

Zoia, who played from 1930 to 1932, was the captain of the first North Quincy football team and a two-time all-scholastic fullback. He later served as an assistant coach for 20 years, under his nephew the late Dave Burke. Ken McPhee and Peter Chrisom Jr.

NORTH QUINCY FOOTBALL legend Pete Zoia (right), with former Red Raider coach Ken McPhee, will be honored Sunday by the Quincy 50's Alumni Benefit Fund at a buffet dinner at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry St.

Zoia's No. 20 was retired some years ago. The only other players to wear that uniform number were his grandsons and Bill Curran.

As an assistant under McPhee, Zoia started the tradition of participating in the final practice of the season before the Thanksgiving Day game. He would run the last lap with the kids around Cavanaugh Field and catch the final pass.

"The kids always looked forward to that," McPhee said. "I remember one time he got out of the hospital bed to make the last lap. That's how important it was to the kids.

"No one bleeds truer red and black than him. He's probably the most respected player in North Quincy history. It's my pleasure to have been associated with him. He's been an inspiration to all of us."

Big Night For Quincy's Bonnie Hirtle

By CHRIS POISSON

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

She wasn't supposed to do it last Friday night. Then again, she has never been ordinary in her career at Quincy High.

Needing 31 points, senior captain Bonnie Hirtle poured in 32 big ones in a 67-46 home victory over Dennis-Yarmouth to reach the 1,000-point plateau. The game was stopped to honor her achievement as she received roses and the game ball.

"She caught us all by surprise," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We thought she would've done it (Monday). It's a magic milestone for her and she's certainly proud. A lot of the kids have been playing with her for three years now and they all showed pride in her achievement."

Hirtle, averaging 25 points per game this season, is well on her way to breaking the school record of 1,138 career points held by Kerri Connolly (1992-1996).

"She should definitely break that if she doesn't get hurt," Bretsch said. "She's doing really well this season. With less shots, she's scoring more points. She has more and more confidence in herself. She's shy by nature. It has been a process of growing into the role of team leader.

"The biggest difference this year has been her composure. In the past, she's been up and down, hot and cold, streaky. She's very focused, very intense, from start to finish this year."

Hirtle followed up her crowning performance with 25 more points Monday night at home. But it wasn't enough as Quincy (5-2 overall, 1-1 Atlantic Coast League) fell to Whitman-Hanson, 52-49.

Trailing by seven points with 40 seconds left, the Presidents pulled within one but the Panthers hit two free throws at the end to close the game. Junior center Alysia DiMuzio scored 12 points and pulled down 16 rebounds. Junior guard Rebekah Sorensen hit two clutch jumpers down the stretch.

"We struggled to get our offense rolling," Bretsch said. "We played with a lot of heart. I'm proud that we never gave up."

Last Tuesday, Quincy cruised to a 56-36 win at Abington. Hirtle led the way with 28 points. Senior point guard Sarah Shea and sophomore Jessica Page, a transfer from Archbishop Williams, scored 10 points apiece.

On Dec. 27, Quincy rolled to a 61-41 home victory over Archbishop Williams. Hirtle scored 20 points, DiMuzio 15, Shea 12 and senior forward Brittney Tobin 10.

On Dec. 23, the Presidents finally defeated their neighbors with a 61-37 win over North Quincy. Hirtle drained a school record five 3-pointers for 31 points. Shea added 11 and Tobin six. Junior first-year player Stephanie Kozlowski also scored.

"The girls really wanted that win for a long time," said Bretsch, who also beat North Quincy for the first time in his three years as head coach. "They always felt they were capable of knocking them off. They played a great game and were real excited after they won."

Raiders Hold On Against Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

ICE HOCKEY

When Quincy scored with four seconds left in the second period to close the gap to 3-2, it wouldn't have been shocking if North Quincy failed to earn a win in last Saturday night's city hockey showdown.

In recent years, the Red Raiders have played the Presidents well but have settled for ties or closes defeats — like last season's pair of 3-2 losses.

In this game, though, North Quincy received a break when it scored a fluke goal early in the final frame and then held on to a 5-3 victory at Quincy Youth Arena.

"We've struggled against Quincy," said NQ head coach Bob Doyle. "It seems like it's always ties or losses. We had a couple of good practices going into this game and I was real pleased with our effort. This is a good confidence booster for our upcoming games."

North Quincy (2-3 overall, 0-1 Old Colony League) took on Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) and will travel to Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday at 4:30 p.m.

Quincy (1-3-1) followed the North Quincy game with a 4-3 loss to Plymouth South Monday afternoon.

"It's still early in the season," said Quincy head coach Bob Sylvia. "We hope to play our best hockey in the second half. We have to plug in a few holes. We have a lot of inexperience. Our goal is to get into the tourney, somehow.

"North Quincy has the better team this year. But our kids played well. It was just one of those nights where things didn't go our way. The kids hung in there. The difference was in experience. North has two solid forward lines. And we've got (Josh) Giordani and (Mike) McKeon that we split to try to balance our lines."

After a scoreless first period, North Quincy dominated the middle frame but only held a one-goal lead as Quincy junior goalie Joe Daly, a transfer from Milton, made all sorts of spectacular saves.

Junior forward Matt Haskins staked the Red Raiders to a 1-0 at 10:58 with junior Pat Casper and sophomore Chris Tufo assisting. Quincy netted the equalizer when McKeon took a feed from senior Brendan Craig and beat senior goalie John O'Driscoll at 7:26.

Nearly four minutes later North Quincy regained the lead when sophomore defenseman Joe Ferris found the back of the net with a wrist shot from the point. North Quincy increased its lead to 3-1 when junior center and captain Paul Graham scored an unassisted goal off a faceoff at 1:42.

"That was the best period we've played the entire season," Doyle said. "We came out with some bounce in our feet. Their goalie kept them in the game. We had numerous chances, at least three odd-man rushes."

Quincy senior captain Josh Giordani — last season's Atlantic Coast League MVP — pocketed the back-breaker with four seconds left, roofing a shot over O'Driscoll's left shoulder from the high slot to make it 3-2. McKeon and Tony Gilbody recorded assists.

"That goal certainly gave them some momentum, but I didn't want to dwell on that," Doyle said. "I told the kids to get it out of their minds and go out and play like we did in the second period."

About two minutes into the third period, Carmody fired a slap shot from the blue line and the puck ricocheted off the side glass and somehow found its way into the cage to give North Quincy a 4-2 lead.

"We got a lucky break," Doyle said.

The Presidents made it 4-3 when senior forward Danny Sullivan scored at the eight-minute mark with assists from Giordani and junior Joe Sweeney.

"Going into the season I knew we were going to start off slow," Doyle said. "We lost a lot of firepower, 12 seniors. But we still have a solid nucleus with 10 returnees. Our question mark is on the blue line where we are considerably inexperienced. I think we're steadily going to improve."

ANDREW DONOVAN (21) tries to elude a Quincy defender in the Red Raiders' 5-3 win over the Presidents last Saturday night at Quincy Youth Arena. Donovan, a sophomore, picked up an assist on Chris Tufo's empty-net goal late in the game.

You Auto Know

by Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

QUIET PLEASE

Automakers are listening to customer preference for quieter vehicles as awareness increases of the link between noise, vibration, and fatigue, in addition to the link between noise and hearing loss. Consumers also perceive an association between quietness and vehicle quality, and from a practical standpoint, drivers want a quiet cabin environment for listening to entertainment and navigation systems. With all this in mind, car manufacturers are paying particular attention to "carcoustics." One of the many points where improvement is sought is the wheel well, where manufacturers are introducing sound-dampening materials to reduce road noise transmission. Laminate glass for windshields also holds promise for reducing decibels without adding weight. Per usual, manufacturers are hush-hush about their research in this area.

For most of your car maintenance needs rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. ## Healthy Ideas

Independent research studies show that better oxygen utilization improves cell functions by increasing the cell energy; even short-term exposure produces beneficial changes. This is increasingly used by health spas, health professionals, hospitals and individuals.

It has been tested on human athletes in Finland and on racehorses in Norway. A poorly performing horse at the Askin race course there, for example, was treated with Airnergy+ from Natural Energy Solutions after the device was part of her owner's successful cancer treatment.

After 20 minutes exposure to it each day for four weeks, the horse beat the track record.

Quincy Medical Center Launches Nurses' Appreciation Fund Appeal

Did you know that nearly 75 percent of nurses at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) live in the South Shore and more than 20 percent live in Quincy?

More often then not, the QMC nurse caring for you or your family is your neighbor or lives in your town.

"Everyone at QMC is proud that so many nurses from our community provide care directly to our community," said Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO of QMC.

Quincy Medical Center is launching its third annual Nurses' Appreciation Fund appeal, designed to recognize the compassionate care that QMC nurses provide by underwriting professional development opportunities for the nurses. More than $35,000 was raised during the first two years of the appeal.

A mailing announcing the third annual appeal was recently sent to individuals, businesses, physicians, former patients and community leaders. The appeal offers former patients the opportunity to honor the work of a particular QMC nurse, if desired.

Many donors, however, have chosen to acknowledge the QMC nursing staff as a whole, saying there are so many exceptional nurses that it would be difficult to select only one nurse.

A donation to the Nursesí Appreciation Fund also helps sustain a nurturing work environment for QMC nurses, whose retention rate is 97 percent, more than 12 percent higher than the statewide average.

"Our nurses work in a rapidly changing health care environment. The Nurses' Appreciation Fund is designed to recognize, reward, and retain our exceptional nurses," said Elizabeth Cadigan, RN, vice president of patient care services at QMC.

"Because of the Nurses' Appreciation Fund, I was able to attend a nursing seminar that has enriched my clinical skills as a nurse in Quincy Medical Centerís cardiac catheter laboratory," said QMC nurse Jennifer Buccigross, RN, a resident of Abington. "I would like to thank all the donors to the Nurses' Appreciation Fund for giving me this opportunity."

Donations to the Nurses' Appreciation Fund are tax-deductible to the full extent allowed by law.

For more information or to make a donation, contact Amy Klotz, QMC development officer, 617-376-5493.

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work side-by-side with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
JOINED TO THE BONE

At the heart of a dental implant is a process known as "osseointegration." This phenomenon was discovered quite by accident, over fifty years ago, by a Swedish surgeon who was conducting research into the healing patterns of bone tissue. He found that, when pure titanium comes in contact with living bone tissue, the two bonded together to form a permanent biological adhesion. In time, dentists who endeavored to create a permanent anchor for tooth replacements adopted the concept of osseointegration. Today, this innovation stands at the center of tooth-implant technology that utilizes titanium implants to serve as the rooted foundation for the attachment of prosthetic teeth that feel and look like natural teeth.

Whether missing one tooth or all their teeth, more and more people are replacing the loss with dental implants. We are currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you will be pleased with our "personal touch" philosophy and our dedication to your complete dental health. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth implants have the added benefit of preventing atrophy of the bone underlying a lost tooth.

Four Chaplains Sunday Observance Feb. 1

The Quincy Veterans' Services Department reminds residents that Sunday, Feb. 1 has been mandated by the Congress of the United States as "Four Chaplains Sunday."

Veterans Services Director Henry Bradley encourages asks local houses of worship to incorporate the significance of this day into homilies and/or place notices in weekly bulletins.

In 1943, on a dark and cold February morning the troopship Dorchester slowly made her way through the frigid waters on the North Atlantic toward Greenland. Suddenly, a German torpedo struck amidships and released suffocating clouds of stream and ammonia gases.

Many men were killed instantly. Others groped and stumbled their way to the upper deck. The ship was mortally wounded and listing badly; she would sink in only 20 minutes.

Out of 902 men aboard, only 230 men were saved that awful night.

However, moving reassuringly among the frightened men were four chaplains: George Fox, Methodist; Alexander Goode, Jewish; Clark Poling, Dutch Reformed; and John Washington, Catholic. These chaplains worked to calm the men and handed out available life jackets.

Soon the supply of extra life jackets ran out. Calmly and without hesitation all four chaplains stripped off their own life jackets, giving them to the frightened men near them, never asking whether they were Protestant, Catholic, or Jewish.

It is said that these men of faith linked arms, bowed their heads, and each in their own manner, led the men in prayer, putting their lives in the hands of God.

Survivors recounted the sight and sound of that terrible night picturing those four chaplains who performed a tremendously heroic act.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"If love is blind, how is it, pray . . . . That love will always find a way? . . . Author unknown.

After Edward Markham, noted poet and author of "The Man With the Hoe," had lost his fortune by bad investments, there stirred within his soul a spirit of resentment. But realizing that the man who hates hurts himself more than he does the other fellow, he became certain that there was no safety except in love. . . "Love will outwatch the stars," he said, and so on that particular day his resentment subsided and the philosophy of his life returned. And in a flash, on a sheet of paper, he inscribed two circles. One was a diagram of all that wisdom which years had brought: the other, a brief, inspiring allegory, subtle but clear, a terse summation of religious and human faith, all embracing love. These four lines have come to be one of the best-known quatrains in the world.

"He drew a circle that shut me out -
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout;
But Love and I had the wit to win:
We drew a circle that took him in."

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's a good time to take a much-needed break from your recent hectic schedule and spend some time in quieter surroundings. Important news could arrive early next week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Taurean traits of reliability and thoroughness could be well tested when decision-makers consider your proposals and/or requests. Be prepared to answer some probing questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A sudden attack of boredom leaves you with some tasks undone. It's OK to take a short respite. But get back to work by week's end so that you have time for other projects.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid prejudging a situation just because it looks bad. Facts could emerge that would make your position uncomfortable, to say the least. A relative has interesting news to share with you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to begin reassessing some of your recent decisions about your long-range goals to see if they still have merit. Spend more time with loved ones this weekend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unsettled situation at home or on the job early in the week could drain your energy levels, making it difficult to get your work done on schedule. But things improve by midweek.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A temporary setback could give you time to go over your plans to find weaknesses you might have overlooked before. A romantic getaway with that special person is favored this weekend.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Professional and personal situations benefit once you set a positive tone in getting things off to a good start. Honest dialogue smoothes over any occasional display of balkiness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A problem with workplace colleagues or family members seems to defy even your sage counsel. But be patient. Your words will eventually lead to a resolution.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't just wait out that unexpected and unexplained delay in your career move. You could gain added respect if you ask why it happened and what you can do to move things along.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although your workplace strategies are usually accepted, you could be challenged by someone who isn't so favorably impressed. Be prepared to defend your positions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your friendship circle expands, with new people coming into your life at this time. Welcome them warmly. But don't neglect those cherished longtime personal relationships.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to search for knowledge and share it with others. You would make an especially fine teacher.

Ann Benotti, 65

Retired Secretary

A funeral service for Ann Hickey (Benotti), 65, of Melbourne, Fla., formerly of Quincy, a retired secretary, was held Monday at Brownlie Maxwell Funeral Home in Melbourne.

She died Dec. 30 at home of a heart attack.

Born and raised in Quincy, she graduated from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth and Aquinas Secretarial School in Milton.

She worked as a secretary in Melbourne for 20 years.

She is survived by a daughter, Megan Benotti of Melbourne; a son, John Benotti of Manassas, Va.; a brother, Robert Hickey, a retired Quincy police officer, of Quincy; her former husband, Joseph Benotti of North Adams; three grandchildren; and several nieces and nephews.

Money Will Be Found To Fix Marshall Air, Mold Problems

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The school department must spend an additional $100,000 to fix chronic air quality and mold problems plaguing the five-year-old Marshall Elementary School, according to a public works official.

Brion Wynn, mitigation manager for the department of public works, told the school committee last week that the potential costs associated with rectifying problems with the school's ventilation system could cost the city as much as $111,000.

A study by a building engineer found that an erratic air conditioning and heating system was the culprit. The engineering firm, Turner Building Science of Maine, recommended replacing or repairing parts of the air conditioning and heating system. Adjustments need to be made to the computer software that runs the ventilation system, the firm recommended.

Complaints of mold, foul odors and moisture have plagued the $9.5 million school since it opened its doors five years ago.

Mayor William Phelan, chairman of the school committee, said it is the school department's responsibility to find a way to pay for the improvements.

"I'm not suggesting we wouldn't help out the school department, but I think they have to determine whether they have some excess revenues out there.

Michael McFarland, vice chairman of the school committee, said: "We will find the money somewhere. We made a commitment to remedy this problem and we are going to do it.

McFarland said the process of seeking vendors and figuring out what portions of the project need to be advertised is expected to begin soon. Repairs should be completed by the end of the current school year, he said.

A portion of the repairs can be accomplished while kids are in school, but other work will be done during the April vacation, said McFarland.

The ventilation system is computer-controlled and combines the heating and cooling delivery with air flow, said Wynn. Computers direct most of the major fea

McCauley Wants To Eliminate Special Elections For At-Large Vacancies

At next week's council meeting, City Council President Francis X. McCauley will introduce two proposals, including a home rule petition that would eliminate the need for a special election if a vacancy occurs in the office of councillor at-large in the first year of a term.

Also, McCauley will propose an ordinance change that requires the Traffic Engineer to sign off on all modifications to traffic ordinances.

McCauley said he would co-sponsor an order with Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly that seeks to rezone a portion of city-owned property on Stoughton St., Houghs Neck, to open space.

The council president said he and Kelly have written to state Sen. Michael Morrissey concerning the transfer of property in lower Hough's Neck that includes the Maritime Center, from the state to the city.

QC Adopting Changes In Surgical Tech. Program

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Quincy College will adopt a number of recommendations designed to improve the school's surgical technology program, which has come under fire after some students claimed they graduated with out adequate training.

Attorney George Burke, hired by the college to investigate the students' allegations, said the college has agreed to implement his recommendations, which include improving internal controls, providing greater oversight and capping the number of students enrolled in the program.

Burke's recommendations and response by the college will be part of a report submitted next week to the state Board of Higher Education. If the board is not satisfied with the college's response to the complaints, it will turn the case over to the state attorney general's office.

Quincy College President Sean Barry and other college officials have signed off on the recommendations Burke said.

"Everyone is in agreement with [the] recommendations of the investigator

Sheets Optimistic USS Salem Will Stay

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The clock is ticking for the USS Salem.

The shipbuilding museum has until April 1 before it is evicted from the former Fore River shipyard, according to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), which owns the property.

But former Mayor James Sheets, chairman of the museum's board of directors, said he is optimistic a deal can be worked out to ensure the USS Salem stays in its present location.

For the second time, MWRA extended its lease with the nonprofit museum, moving the deadline three months ahead to April 1. MWRA wants to sell the property and initially set a June, 2003 deadline. That deadline was first extended to Jan. 1.

JAMES SHEETS

MWRA Spokesman Jonathan Yeo said the latest extension was granted to allow the authority to negotiate with the MBTA, which is seeking to buy or lease the 15-acre property. The MBTA subleases 12 acres from the USS Salem to house its Harbor Express commuter boat there.

The MWRA is not in the real estate business, said Yeo. We are selling off any property we don't need for our water and sewer business.

Sheets criticized the MWRA over the issue, but said museum officials would try to negotiate a new lease with the MBTA to keep the Salem in its present place.

If the MWRA wants to be in that business and walk down that road, I think it will be a lonely road, Sheets told the Sun. If the MWRA wants to be in the business of kicking out a memorial ship and all the associations that have exhibits on the ship, then so be it. This shipbuilding museum is just as holy and important as the World War II memorial at City Hall.

But I m optimistic, said Sheets. The ship was built at the Fore River shipyard it belongs there and should stay there. We think we can work something out.

Sheets said the process of moving the museum elsewhere would take years and cost nearly $500,000.

We are not talking about moving a 50-foot houseboat, he said. This is one of the largest ships of its kind in the country.

He said relocating the museum would have to be coordinated with the Coast Guard and Navy. Finding a suitable location and moving the ship would take 18 months to three years to accomplish, he said.

I don t think the MWRA understands this. It will take a lot of money and time to put all the pieces together, said Sheets.

Another point of contention is the MWRA s charge that the museum has defaulted on its current lease and owes the authority $133,000 in back payments.

The lease is very clear as to what constitutes a default, said Yeo. They were late on their payments and now they owe us a substantial amount of money.

Sheets disputes that claim.

We don t owe them (MWRA) money, that is not true, he said.

Yeo said the MWRA audited the museum s books in early 2003 and discovered the organization had underpaid by approximately $97,000 over a four-year period ending in 2002. Interest on the amount in question has ballooned the total to $133,000, he said.

Under the terms of the current contract, Harbor Express as a subtenant pays $6,000 a month rent, with half going to the museum corporation and the other half to the MWRA.

The Salem also pays the MWRA another $1,000 a month in rent.

Under the terms of the lease, the Salem is supposed to pay the MWRA 10 percent of any revenue raised if the amount is below $500,000 for the year, said Yeo. If the museum generates more than $500,000 in the year, the rate jumps to 15 percent, he said.

But Sheets said the language in the lease maintains that the Salem would pay 10 percent to the MWRA only if revenues generated top the $500,000 threshold. According to financial records filed with the state, the museum took in $331,800 for the budget year ending March 31, 2002, the last year for which information was available.

The shipbuilding museum was dealt a financial blow last year when Fire Chief Paul O Connell banned sleepovers by groups staying aboard the ship overnight. O Connell said the ship was unsafe due to a lack of sprinklers, poor ventilation and inadequate exits.

But the museum derived approximately 40 percent of its revenue from the sleepovers.

The Salem has appealed the ban to the state building board of appeals, which is scheduled to make a site visit soon, said Sheets.

We have been damaged by the ban on the sleepovers, said Sheets. It is very important that we get this issue settled as soon as possible.

Dedication Set For Jan. 20

Col. Quincy Tankard To Go On Permanent Display At City Hall

The historic Colonel John Quincy Tankard will be dedicated and placed on permanent display Tuesday, Jan. 20, in the atrium at new City Hall.

Mayor William Phelan will host the 10 a.m. dedication ceremony at which a commemorative plaque will also be unveiled.

Among those attending will be Atty. George G. Burke, owner of the tankard; and representatives of the Quincy Historical Society, the National Services and the Quincy Tourism Council.

The 237-year-old solid silver tankard, Quincy s link to the man for whom the city was named, was placed in custody of the city by Burke.

Burke rescued the tankard from auction in January, 2001 and has put it on display on several locations, including its very first appearance in the window of The Quincy Sun a few days later.

It was among 11 pieces of colonial silver auctioned off by United First Parish Church to finance badly needed repairs to the church building.

The auction, held at Sotheby s in New York City, brought $2.7 million to the church.

Burke won the tankard with a bid of $160,000. He also paid $21,000 in commissions to Sotheby s and $9,087.50 in New York state sales taxes and other expenses. His total cost: about $200,000.

Colonel Quincy left money in his will to have the tankard made and donated to what was then First Church of Christ Braintree, now United First Parish Church known as the Church of the Presidents.

Colonel Quincy, who was the grandfather of Abigail Adams and the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams, died in 1767.

Many people today especially tourists think Quincy was named for the sixth president, Burke says.

Now, by having it on display at City Hall everyone residents and visitors alike will know that the honor belongs to Colonel Quincy.

The tankard will be displayed in the special showcase on a permanent basis. But plans are to place it in a vault at night for security.

Burke, who is a former city councillor, state representative and district attorney, said he got the idea to bid on the tankard after reading an article in The Quincy Sun.

The article reported United First Parish Church was going to auction off 11 pieces of its colonial silver to pay for the building repairs and quoted the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister, as saying he hoped someone local with historical concern would be able to retrieve it from auction.

I felt that sentence was directed at me, Burke says.

He noted that he and Colonel Quincy had something in common. Both were lawyers and had served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, Colonel Quincy as Speaker.

Burke borrowed a copy of the auction catalogue from The Sun, read up on the rules of bidding and from his North Quincy law office the following morning started his bidding on the tankard by telephone.

It was thought the tankard would bring about $50,000. But apparently, silver and antique experts knew it was considerably more valuable and the bidding climbed to $160,000 with Burke the winner.

I am pleased that everyone will now be able to see the tankard, Burke said. It is the last artifact remaining of Col. John Quincy and our link to his importance in our city s history.

The Odd Couple

Frank McCauley and Dan Raymondi politically go back 32 years.

At last week s inaugural ceremonies at North Quincy High School, McCauley called them the Odd Couple of Quincy politics.

FRANK McCAULEY and DAN RAYMONDI at last week s inaugural ceremonies.

Well, they are political opposites and former rivals. Though Quincy municipal elections are non-partisan, McCauley is a Republican and Raymondi a Democrat. So, they do have different philosophies.

And, you might say McCauley is short on talk. And, Raymondi well not so short.

Their political relationship began in January, 1972 as two of the three new members of the school committee.

There were three open school committee seats in the election, a political rarity that may not have happened before and hasn t since.

That year James McCormick opted to run for mayor and two other incumbents, Alice Mitchell who had served 18 years and Ruth Scanlan (four years), decided not to seek re-election.

McCormick, incidentally, lost a nomination to Joseph Brett in the preliminary election, who in turn lost to Walter Hannon in the final.

The three vacant seats on the school committee produced a record field of 23 yes 23 candidates.

Harold Davis took the top spot, Raymondi the second and McCauley the third.

Ten years later in 1981 McCauley and Raymondi were in a mayoral battle to succeed incumbent Arthur Tobin who decided not to seek a third term.

McCauley was the winner and went on to four terms as mayor. He then returned to the school committee and city council.

McCauley and Raymondi have served 10 years, off and on together, in the city council and will reach 12 years at the end of their present terms.

Last week, McCauley was unanimously elected city council president, succeeding Raymondi who, under council rules, was limited to two one-year terms.

We are the odd couple of Quincy politics, McCauley said as he called Raymondi forward for special recognition.

McCauley had a commemorative city council president gavel which he asked Raymondi s wife, Sharon, to present to him. A nice gesture by McCauley, and one Sharon will fondly remember. It happened on her birthday.

And McCauely presented Raymondi with a plaque, noting he was only the second person in the city s political history to serve as both council president and vice chairman of the school committee.

The first and only other person to hold both posts was the late Patricia Toland.

McCauley couldn t resist poking a little fun while he had Raymondi standing beside him.

No, you can t have the mike, he told Raymondi, setting off a ripple of laughter across the auditorium.

And added mischievously:

I asked Dan if he wanted to speak but he said he was at a loss for words.

That triggered another ripple.

It got a laugh out of Raymondi, too.

Later, after the ceremonies, McCauley had some serious comments about the Democractic half of the odd couple :

Dan knows the workings of government. He does his homework. He works very hard at what he does and what he believes in. He is one of the most successful ward councillors I have ever seen.

Maybe Frank should have let Dan have that microphone at the inaugural.

We caught up with Raymondi afterward and he had some nice words for his Republican half:

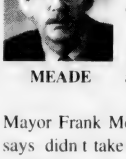
Some people only think of him as a Republican budget slasher. But there is much more to Frank. He has been a strong advocate for the construction of schools and a driving force for the addition to the main library. He deserves a tremendous amount of credit.

I admire his work ethics. He loves and cares deeply for his Ward 1 and the city.

As for their differences:

We may disagree on certain issues. But the disagreement never gets disagreeable. The debate never gets personal. Never gets ugly.

I don t think we have had a harsh word between us in the 32 years we have known one another.



And one other thing:

I was proud to vote for him for city council president.

Sounds like they may be getting to be a more-alike couple.

RICHIE MEADE, one of City Hall s all-time favorites, will be honored at a retirement party Thursday, Jan. 22 at 5:30 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, Glendale Rd.

MEADE

Meade opted to take early retirement last month after serving 17 years as the city s Planning Director.

He was appointed in 1986 by then Mayor Frank McCauley, an appointment McCauley says didn t take me much more than 30 seconds to make.

Meade has been one of City Hall s most popular and respected figures for the way he treated people and for his know-how ability.

He has also been active in the community as a youth baseball, soccer and basketball coach, member of the Flag Day and Babe Ruth World Series committees and other worthy volunteer causes and projects.

It won t be easy finding a new planning director of his caliber. But, fortunately, he will still be active in the community.

Tickets for the retirement party can be obtained from City Clerk Joseph Shea (617-376-1131) or Margie Colton, in the Planning Department, at 617-376-1362.

They re going fast.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of what was known then as the Union Vacation House at the corner of Huckins Avneune and Bellevue Road in Squantum. This three-story structure built in the nineteenth century was originally the summer home of Calvin Richards, president of the Metropolitan Railroad in Boston. It later was used as a retreat house where the telephone company sent its operators and others for summer vacations, thus the name Vacation House. After a fire in 1913 that pretty much destroyed the building, the site was purchased to build the First Church of Christ in Squantum. Members had been holding services in the house. The first church, which also served as the first assembly hall in Squantum, was dedicated in September 1914. In 1949 the present church replaced the original building.

The Tax Issue Is City Spending

Another year, another $550 tax increase for the average residential taxpayer in the city of Quincy. In two of the last three years our residential tax bills on average have risen more than $550 or approximately $1,238 in the last three years. The average residential tax bills have risen by 16 percent per year for the last three years.

In fact, according to the Department of Revenue, the average residential tax bill in Quincy exceeded the statewide median average of $401 in Fiscal Year 2002 and by $380 in Fiscal Year 2003.

We as taxpayers are told this is due to skyrocketing growth in residential value along with stagnant or declining commercial growth in the city. Never are we told that if the city budgeted less money each year, then both classes of taxpayers would be taxed less. This is never an option in the city of Quincy.

In Fiscal Year 2003 (last year), Mayor William Phelan projected approximately $195.2 million in budgeted revenues. According to the Department of Revenue, the city received actual revenue of approximately $204.5 million or an additional $9.3 million in revenue. The mayor did not suggest that the budget should be reduced or we as taxpayers should receive any type of reduction. In fact, this year s budget (FY2004) was increased by over $9 million.

In Fiscal Year 2003 the city of Quincy became the first community in the state to adopt the early retirement bill for city employees. We were told that this was done to alleviate budget problems that the city anticipated. The mayor and the city council did not perform an analysis on what the cost to the taxpayer of adopting this program would be. The taxpayers were told that it would save $3 million for the city and it was the right thing to do for the employees.

The only problem is the city received $9.3 million in additional revenue. This program was not necessary. The Quincy City Retirement Board (Ed Masterson) estimated (six months later) that this program would cost the city $450,000 a year for 15 years or $6.75 million of taxpayer money.

During this same year the city s funding schedule of unfunded pension liability was changed from 2019 to 2023. No estimate of the cost of this change was ever released to the taxpayers. And now, we have a year in which the budget is balanced and the average residential tax bill is going up $550.

The mayor and the city council are feeling so generous with taxpayer money that they are again willing to offer an early retirement program to 43 city employees in Quincy. No cost estimate has been released or discussed for this program, but what the heck, the city can always blame it on classification. When will it ever end in the city of Quincy?

The issue for the taxpayers in Quincy is not classification. It is city spending. It is time for city officials to analyze their actions before adopting them. It is time for Mayor Phelan and the city council to do what s right for all taxpayers in the city of Quincy.

Frustrated With Tax Increases

I am frustrated with the increases in real estate taxes. I know that our home values have increased but that doesn t help to swallow this bitter pill. I do feel fortunate to live in Quincy with its great schools, teachers, recreation facilities and competent city employees.

I m flabbergasted when I watch city council meetings on television that certain councillors are complaining about our taxes as if they bear no responsibility. I ve watched the council reject boating fees. I ve watched as councillors voted to mandate an increase in the number of additional firefighters the city must hire when they could have opted for a study to first determine the Fire Department s most critical needs. I ve watched the budget hearings where it seemed to me that the council spent more time discussing the rejection of the boating fees than trying to find solutions for raising new revenue to help offset tax increases.

I feel Mayor Phelan has done a good job with the situation he inherited. He has been able to save jobs and actually increase the amount of services in Quincy, which is remarkable considering the sharp job cuts in many cities and towns. I feel it is time for our entire city council to give him some help.

6 Mayors Honorary Pall Bearers At City Messenger s Funeral

This Week
1951
53 Years Ago

Six mayors of Quincy were honorary pallbearers at the funeral of Harry W. Tirrell, Quincy s first and only city messenger, who died at Quincy City Hospital at the age of 85.

Tirrell was elected city messenger in 1889, the year Quincy became a city, and was re-elected in each succeeding year.

A native of Quincy, he was the son of Quincy Tirrell, city tax collector and proprietor of a prosperous carriage shop in what is now the parking lot behind Sheridan s. The shop went out of business soon after the coming of the automobile.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin and former Mayors Charles A. Ross, Joseph L. Whiton and William A. Bradford attended Tirrell s funeral. Ex-Mayors Charles Francis Adams and Perley E. Barbour were out of the city.

Jerry s Spectacular Soup

Last week on one of those cold windy days (do we have any others?) my brother-in-law Jerry brought over a sample of his delicious soup made with beans and escarole. Do you like it already ? It was so delicious that I naturally asked him for the recipe to share with all of you.

Cooking Instructions

In the hot oil, saut the onions and garlic with salt and pepper for about five minutes. Add the escarole, cook until wilted for another five minutes on medium heat stirring often.

Add the tomatoes, water and seasoning and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to low and simmer stirring occasionally for 20 minutes. Add the beans and continue to cook for a few minutes. Top with the grated cheese and serve with crusty bread. What a dish for a cold day or any day for that matter. Enjoy!

Jerry s White Bean and Escarole Soup

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium Spanish onion (chopped)
salt and pepper to taste
4 garlic cloves (finely chopped)
1 head escarole, (washed and finely chopped)
1 can (16 ounces) whole peeled tomatoes (crush or purchase crushed tomatoes)
1/2 cup water
1 tablespoon chopped fresh Rosemary or Italian seasoning
1 15 ounce can cannellini beans (drained)
1 cup Parmesan cheese for topping

Library To Present Film, Discussion Series On The Chinese Experience

The Thomas Crane Public Library, in collaboration with the Nease Library of Eastern Nazarene College and Quincy Asian Resources Inc., will host Becoming American: the Chinese Experience, a four-part film and discussion program.

Becoming American, a Bill Moyers special first broadcast on PBS in March, 2003, recounts the history of Chines immigrants to America and their Chinese American descendants. The saga of Chinese immigration begins in the mid 19th century and continues to the present day, as new arrivals and long-time residents alike struggle with issues of race, cultural identity and assimilation.

The film and discussion series offers Quincy residents an opportunity to examine, discuss and reflect on the immigrant experience, the intricacies of balancing the old world and the new, and the psychic complexities of being American.

The series begins on Wednesday, Jan. 21, at 7 p.m. with a screening of Personal Journeys, conversations between Bill Moyers and prominent Chinese Americans who have contributed to American life. Personal Journeys will be shown at the Shrader Lecture Hall at Eastern Nazarene College Main Campus, 23 East Elm Ave., Quincy.

The next three parts of the series will be held Jan. 28 Feb. 4 and Feb. 11 in the community meeting room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. These evenings will feature Part III of the documentary No Turning Back, which explores the living memories of the contemporary Chinese America, from the terrors of the Cold War to the present.

East session will begin at 7 p.m. with a 30-60 minutes film screening followed by a moderated discussion. Program participants may attend any one or all of the sessions and no registration is required. This program is funded in part by an Institute of Museum and Library Services and Technology Act grant, administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

For more information, call the Thomas Crane Public Library at 617-376-1301.

Park Dept. Free Walk Along Neponset River Saturday

The Park Department s Environmental Treasures program and the Neponset River Watershed Association are sponsoring a free walk along the Neponset River on Saturday, Jan. 17 at 2 p.m.

Naturalist Tom Palmer will lead the tour, which will begin at the corner of Vershire and Ardell Sts.

For more information call 617-376-1254. In case of inclement weather, the tour will be rescheduled to Jan. 18 at 2 p.m.

Brynn Manning On Loyola Dean s List

Brynn Manning of Quincy has been named to the Dean s List for the fall semester at Loyola University New Orleans.

Registration Begins Jan. 23 For Kids Programs At Library

Registration begins Jan. 23 at 9 a.m. for enrollment in the Thomas Crane Public Library s weekday morning Storytimes and Elementary Explorations for kids.

Storytimes is designed for children ages four months to five years old, and after school school programs are for kindergarten and first and second graders. Both programs will be offered in five-week sessions beginning Feb. 2.

Registration is required and is limited to Quincy residents. Program details are available on the library website at http://ci.quincy.ma.us/tcpl/ or at library locations.

Also, the library will be offering a special science literacy program, Mother Goose Asks Why? every Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. from Feb. 4 to March 10 for children ages three and a half to five years old. Young children are natural scientists always asking why? and how does that work? Put your preschooler s curiosity to work answering the questions and learn basic science skills in this special storytime that combines wonderful picture books with hands-on science experiments for you and your child.

Due to the amount of parent involvement needed to successfully complete the experiments we ask that you try to make this special one on time for you and the preschooler.

For more information about this program call the children s department at 617-376-2411.

This program is supported by the Institute of Museum and Library Services under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act as administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

Board Delays Request To Reopen Custom House

By MARIE D OLIMPIO

The License Board voted to continue a request to reopen the Custom House at 125 Sea St., citing the need for a more comprehensive plan and more issues to be discussed.

Atty. Donald Orkin, counsel for owner Thomas F. Tuffo, said that Tuffo purchased the liquor license from the Quincy Ship s Brewing and secured the location on Sea Street.

He told the board that no structural changes are planned for the site, but that there would be cosmetic changes including a new kitchen and bathrooms.

Tuffo said he plans to open the 200 seat restaurant featuring an open grille for casual dining with an extensive menu of chicken fish and steak.

Fire Chief Paul O Connell questioned whether Tuffo plans to have entertainment in which he replied, maybe a piano bar. O Connell then asked if he was going to ask for a Keno License and Tuffo s answer also appeared vague to the board.

Police Chief William Falco said that he thought Tuffo had too many maybes in his answers and made the motion to continue.

Some board members felt that Tuffo s experience was that of financial manager in two restaurants in Boston rather than the food industry. Tuffo said he plans to surround himself with staff who will oversee the food part of the restaurant.

Chairman Joseph Shea recounted some of the background of the restaurant which he said had been there for about 50 years.

He said it had been Dutton s and then the Custom House of late.

Shea said the license formerly belonged to Quincy Ships Brewing on Southern Artery, and had gone into bankruptcy, but he added has since paid back taxes. He said that when the Custom House was sold, condos were expected to be constructed, but later dropped.

Shea said Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly supports the new plans for a restaurant at that site.

The meeting is scheduled for Feb. 24.

Gardner Schedules Two Tax Relief Workshops

Ward 6 City Councillor Alicia Gardner in cooperation with the Assessors Department will offer two residential tax relief workshops.

The first workshop is scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 20, at 6:30 p.m. at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 E. Squantum St. The second will be held Wednesday, Jan. 21, at 10 a.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center located at The Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 15 Harvard St.

Assessor Chairman Marion Fantucchio and her staff will inform residents of the process for filing a real estate tax abatement as well as to inform them of the various exemptions programs that may be available to them.

The workshops have been organized in response to the significant increase in the residential property tax bills that were mailed Jan. 1., Gardner said.

ALICIA GARDNER

Any real estate property owner is entitled to file for a tax abatement if they believe the city has over assessed the value of their property, Gardner said. In an effort to inform the residents of Ward 6 of this process I hope they will find these workshops informative and useful.

Gardner has scheduled two workshops in hopes of accommodating the schedules all Ward 6 residents and encourages all those interested to attend.

For more information, call Gardner at 617-328-9382.

QC Adopting Changes In Surgical Tech. Program

done, Burke told the Sun. These changes have to be put into effect to make it a better program.

A college spokesperson said Barry has received Burke's recommendations and is in the process of implementing them.

Quincy College has come under scrutiny recently after two graduates of the school's surgical technology program filed complaints with the state Board of Higher Education alleging the college failed to provide required clinical instruction.

In addition, the MetroWest Medical Center in Framingham filed a complaint with the board, saying a recent Quincy College graduate hired by the hospital had inadequate skills to do the job.

Filed by Plymouth residents Pamela St. Clair and Dawn Spencer, the complaints allege the school promised that its surgical technology program would include hands-on training in the operating room. The women completed the one-year certificate program but said they never received training in the operating room.

The students also allege that documents placing them in clinical training at Quincy Medical Center during the spring were concocted or forged.

The complaints were submitted to the Association of Surgical Technologists and the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Both the college and city are conducting investigations into the matter. The college hired Burke, former Norfolk County District Attorney and Quincy city councillor, to conduct the school's investigation. Burke has been conducting interviews with students, college staff and hospital officials.

The mayor's office contacted lawyer John Sullivan, a forensic auditor, to conduct its own investigation.

The college program is supposed to comply with a strict set of accrediting standards and requires all surgical technology students to spend several weeks in clinical training at one of more than a dozen hospitals that partner with the college, according to college officials.

Surgical technologists work as assistants in hospital operating rooms and are sometimes called scrubs. They require detailed knowledge of operating rooms, the tools used in surgeries and how to prepare patients for surgery.

Students are placed in a number of hospitals to satisfy the requirements of the program.

Many of Burke's recommendations pertain to the work of Faith Tucker, the college instructor who heads the surgical technology program.

Burke said the school will place a cap on the number of students enrolled in the program, because the school was not able to keep track of students last year. About 70 students enrolled in the certificate program last year, which made it unmanageable for Tucker, he said. The college should limit the number of students in the program to 50 or 60, he said.

Faith Tucker had so many students she couldn't do the job correctly, said Burke. Many students have come to me and said she is a good teacher. But the success of the program became too much for her.

Burke said the college was lax in its oversight of the program as well. For example, he said, records were not kept by the college to determine whether instructors or students were attending class.

Even now, I cannot tell you which students went to which operating room, said Burke. To me, that's step one. This was woeful recordkeeping.

St. Clair and Spencer were not assigned to the operating room at QMC because the hospital did not have enough room to accommodate them, Burke said. Five students were assigned to QMC but the hospital could accommodate only two, according to Denise Parker Spellane, spokeswoman for Quincy Medical Center.

The college would make a request to the hospital and based on our ability to accommodate a request we accommodate that request, she said. We only have a certain amount of placements.

Tucker was aware that St. Clair and Spencer were not getting time in the operating room, Burke said.

It would seem to me the students should have been assigned to another hospital, he said.

Also, evaluations of the students performance were incomplete or non-existent, he said.

Burke said Tucker would receive student evaluations by telephone from Patty Kang, the college instructor assigned to QMC. Tucker

W. Quincy Cafe License Suspended Three Days

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board issued a three-day suspension for the all alcoholic, common victualer license at Rouillard's Cafe, 139 Copeland St. because of an incident Dec. 28.

On a unanimous vote by the board, the suspension involved failure to notify the police according to rules and regulations of the license board, and a failure to cooperate with the police once they arrived at the scene.

Det. Lt. Robert Perchard, liquor agent for the board said that on the night of Dec. 28, near closing time, a person was removed from the bar, who subsequently returned and kicked the door. Windows were broken and police were not notified.

Persons were ultimately injured with a knife which was later found under the bar, Perchard said.

According to Officer Francis Johnson, the bartender Steve Smith was uncooperative and said he saw nothing because it happened so fast. Smith said that when he began to dial the telephone to call the police he saw a police cruiser outside.

Smith said he was trying to empty trash and clean the bar so he did not observe the happenings in the establishments.

Owner Mike Repucci said he wasn't called on that night because the bartender didn't know his number.

That statement caused Chairman Joseph Shea to comment that when the license board issues a license, they need to know who they are dealing with at all times, and said he was surprised to hear that Repucci's number was not available.

Repucci said his number was posted in the back and wasn't noticed by employees.

Perchard explained that anyone who knows Rouillard's knows its as big as a shoe box with a capacity for about 20 persons, and said he couldn't believe that the bartender didn't notice anything in such a small place.

Police Chief William Falco agreed with Perchard and said very little can happen in such a small place without being noticed.

When the motion to suspend was made by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and seconded by Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, Falco on the motion, suggested to Repucci that Smith was not a credible bartender consequently not a credible person to work there.

Shea said Repucci has five days in which to appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission after receiving a letter from the license board.

Quirk To Pay $1.8M In Real Estate Taxes

Dan Quirk, owner of the former Fore River shipyard, has agreed to pay $1.8 million in real estate taxes on the property, according to Mayor William Phelan's office.

The agreement is a result of a lawsuit filed by the city to collect taxes that have accrued since a Special Tax Agreement (STA) was rescinded by Phelan in 2002 as one of his first actions as mayor.

This is a significant event, said Phelan. For the first time in nearly a quarter-century this critical parcel will generate tax revenue for the City of Quincy. Restoring the shipyard to the tax rolls was a priority of my administration and I am very pleased that we have accomplished it.

Quirk bought the shipyard at auction last year and was responsible for more than $2.2 million in taxes owed by the former owner, Massachusetts Heavy Industries. With interest, the city was seeking approximately $2.6 million, according to Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the board of assessors.

Since the sum will be less than what the city was seeking, the difference will go toward abatements, she said. The city should be able to cover the difference, she said.

The agreement was approved by Norfolk Superior Court and reduces the value of the property to $10 million for tax purposes. Quirk purchased the property for $9 million at a time when it was assessed at $50 million.

The mayor complimented Quirk, manager of March Forth LLC, for his commitment to resolving the tax issue expeditiously and fairly. I look forward to working with Quirk to ensure that the shipyard is developed to its highest and best use, so that this historic piece of Quincy becomes a vibrant economic center that is compatible with the neighborhood in which it is located, said Phelan.

The STA was part of a deal struck with the former Mayor James Sheets administration that allowed Massachusetts Heavy Industries, the previous owner of the site, to forego tax payments for the parcel with the expectation that the company would create jobs. The STA remained intact despite not creating any significant employment opportunities from 1997-2001.

The city continues to pay more than $800,000 of the CDBG funds to pay a loan given to Massachusetts Heavy Industries Shipbuilding by the federal government. Quincy guaranteed the loan in 1997.

It is unfortunate that these CDBG funds are not available for legitimate community development purposes, said Phelan, but taxes paid by the shipyard owner are going to be a great benefit to the City of Quincy.

Under the settlement agreement, approved by a Supreme Court Justice, the shipyard will be assessed on the normal course in future years.

QTA Head Declares Tax Emergency Here

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association says there is a tax emergency in Quincy because of this year s 18 percent increase in the average annual residential property tax bill.

Politicians soothing words and crocodile tears will not change the fact that taxpayers are hurting.

Cousin said, and they re going to hurt a lot more in years to come unless spending is brought under control. Mayor Phelan s tax relief plans are good ideas in and of themselves, but they only account for pennies on the dollar in terms of revenues versus expenditures.

Cousin again pointed to his analysis of trends in taxation and spending in Quincy over the past six years, which he says that residential property taxes account for a larger share of the city budget every year, and will average $10,000 a year by 2016 in spending is not contained.

Cousin said he has invited 18 QTA members to serve on the steering committee for a campaign to show the Mayor and City Council the need to put taxpayers interests first at all times.

One of the six Freemasons who signed the Declaration of Independence...

John Hancock was born in Quincy in 1737. How did his Masonic connection influence him and other great Revolutionary patriots?

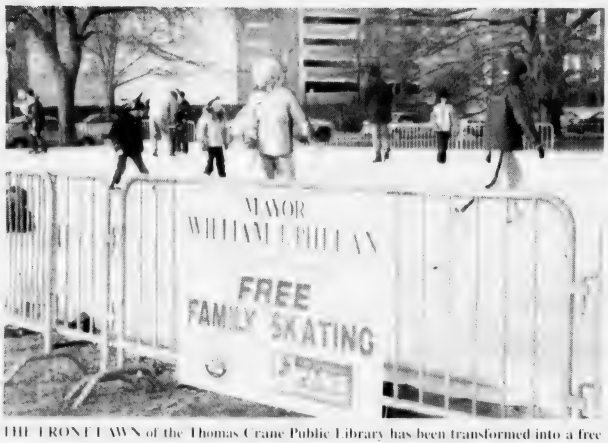
Many of the patriots that played a decisive roll in the formation of the United States were Masons. Surely you recognize George Washington, Paul Revere, Benjamin Franklin and Quincy's own John Hancock.

It is true that many of these great men were indeed Masons but it was their fervent love of liberty, justice and freedom of thought...concepts embraced by Masons for centuries...that induced them to act as individuals in forming the foundation of this great nation. These men made a positive difference in their community and in their country, much as Masons do today. But, it might surprise you that political discussions are forbidden in the Masonic Lodge room.

The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts was formed in 1733. Paul Revere was our Grand Master in the 1790's. Rural Lodge of Masons was formed here in Quincy in 1801. The goal of Masons then, as it is today, is who can best work and best agree. And we apply those principles to the work we do today. More than 175,000 children have taken advantage of the Masonic Child Identification Program with Toothprints™, introduced to the world right here in Quincy. Masons contribute more than 20,000 pints of blood collected by the Red Cross each year. Masons operate the Shriners Hospitals for Children. And contribute millions of dollars to worthy causes each day...most of which is never publicized.

Today, as we did more than 200 years ago, Masons are making a difference in our nation and right here in Quincy.



See for yourself how the members of Rural Lodge are working to make our community a better place.

See how you can be a part of it while sharing the fellowship that Masonry offers to all good men.

would fill out the evaluations on behalf of King, said Burke.

But the students claim they never met King. Burke also said there is some question whether King was regularly attending classes to oversee students. Burke has been unable to locate the instructor.

Burke also recommended that the college assign someone to assist Tucker in overseeing and reviewing records.

Someone above Faith Tucker has to be checking files, you can t rely on one person only, said Burke.

As for the allegations about the college falsifying students self evaluations, Burke said a handwriting expert confirmed the signatures on the documents are the students .

The college has agreed to provide free, additional training to any student who graduated from the program but believes they did not receive adequate training, Burke said. This includes time in the operating room or training with surgical instruments, he said. Burke said he is aware of five or six students that believe they were lacking in certain areas.

Overall, I find that it is a very good program, said Burke. I had a lot of students write in and tell me what a good program it is, and how they got good jobs.

But Burke said it is bothersome that students graduated from the program without adequate training.

Homework Is Key to Savings

Make a resolution in 2004 to save money and time by planning weekly meals. You would be amazed by how much cash you can save, particularly if you take advantage of coupons and sales for the products that you know you'll need for the coming week.

It's all of a matter of getting organized. You have to carve out about 30 minutes. Before going to the grocery store, sit down and plan which meals you would like to make on which days. Of course, you always can switch the order around if you like.

Once you know what you're going to prepare, make a second list of the ingredients you'll need. That's your basic grocery list, to which you can add other items such as health and beauty products, lunch and breakfast needs, etc.

Check the pantry and refrigerator first to see if you already have these items. Then go to your coupon file and check to see if you have any coupons for the items on the list.

When you hit the grocery store or superstore, avoid — if at all possible — straying from the list. That's where you end up spending a lot of money — on those enticing "extras" or new products that look so interesting. Sure, those exotic dried fruits are tempting, but will they still be sitting in your cupboard past the expiration date? Quite possibly.

Move past the bakery, deli and convenience foods as fast as you can; those departments contain lots of items that will pump up your final bill. Keep asking yourself: Do I really need this?

Focus on your list, and your final payoff will be lower costs for your groceries because you won't be purchasing duplicates or items that will go to waste.

Have a great — and cost-conscious — 2004!

New Water Heaters: Your Comfort, Your Safety, And The Law

(NAPS) When it comes to new water heaters, safety is no accident. They will be safer because of both new regulations and one of the most significant technological innovations in over half a century.

The American National Standards Institute has decreed that all new 30-, 40- and 50-gallon conventional gas-fired water heaters in the United States must include design features and components that resist ignition of flammable vapors outside the heater.

Although flammable vapor ignition outside the water heater is rare, it can occur when vapors from improperly stored or accidentally spilled gasoline, paint thinner or other flammables reach the flame from the water heater's burner. These vapors can then ignite and travel back outside the water heater.

In response to these new regulations, Bradford White Corporation, one of the nation's largest manufacturers of water heaters, has engineered the Defender Safety System, a safe, reliable, maintenance-free and flammable vapor ignition resistant water heater.

How The Safety System Works

In the Defender Safety System, air for combustion is drawn into the water heater through openings in the outside jacket. This air travels down and around the combustion chamber and enters through holes in the very bottom of the corrosion-resistant chamber.

The air then travels up through thousands of tiny flame arrestor plate louvers, where the velocity of the air is increased and its direction altered. This airflow also keeps the system free of lint, dust and oil.

Finally, the air mixes with the supplied gas and is efficiently combusted. In case trace amounts of flammable vapors are in the air flowing into the combustion chamber, they are harmlessly ignited by the burner.

The arrestor plate prevents any flame from traveling backward and igniting vapors outside the combustion chamber. If there are too many vapors, the whole system shuts itself down.

Once the water heater has been serviced and the air clear, the system can be reset with the push of a button. The new Defender Safety System also maintains outstanding efficiency, a long service life and very low emissions.

Neighborood Housing Services Homebuying Workshop Jan. 24

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore in collaboration with Randolph Savings Bank will sponsor a First-Time Homebuyer Workshop Saturday, Jan. 24 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Randolph Savings Bank, 10 Cabot Place, Stoughton.

All potential first time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from real estate related professionals.

Downpayment grants up to $10,000 per family are available for first time buyers who are purchase-ready and income eligible. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs.

Lunch will be provided.

Advance registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit us online at www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Hot Water Woes

Q: Lately, the hot water coming out of the tap hasn't been so hot. It's pretty cloudy as well, but only at first, as it settles down and clears quickly. Do you think I need to replace the water heater? Does the cloudiness mean I need to replace my pipes? Thanks. — *Joseph L., Kennesaw, Ga.

A: You probably don't need to replace the water heater right now, although if you have an electric heater, a problem with the heating elements or the thermostat may exist. And your pipes are probably just fine — the cloudiness is mineral sediment, which builds up in the bottom of water heating tanks.

Burned-out heating elements are a common problem in electric water heaters. One to two elements are installed in the side wall of the tank, one higher and one lower. These can be replaced by anyone who has experience working with other electric-powered items (such as replacing an outlet or switch). Make sure to turn off the power at the main breaker panel and drain the tank before doing the work, and check the nameplate for the element's voltage and wattage rating so you can purchase the correct replacement.

But before doing that much work, try three basic maintenance steps to increase the water temperature safely: drain the tank to reduce sediment, insulate the hot water pipes, and reset the thermostat. Additionally, perform a quick visual check of the tank exterior for signs of damage or corrosion, and test the pressure valve on the side of the tank by lifting the lever and snapping it back (a burst of water should enter the drain pipe). And of course, make sure the pilot light is on (in a gas heater) or that electric current is reaching the unit (in an electric heater; check the tank controls and the circuit breaker).

Turn off the heater and then the water valve leading to it, let it cool for a couple of hours, and drain about two-thirds of the water from the tank through the spigot at the bottom of the unit. Turn the water valve back on and then the heater. Don't let the heater operate when the tank is empty; in electric units the heating element will burn itself out.

Insulate the water pipes using foam material cut especially for these smaller, thinner delivery pipes. It can be found in the plumbing or insulation section of hardware stores.

Reset the thermostat, in electric heaters, by pressing the reset button on the control unit and then setting the correct temperature, using a screwdriver to do so.

Check and maintain your water heater once a year (twice, preferably) to stay aware of heating problems and avoid having to take a cold shower in the middle of winter.

From Driving Less To Going Generic

Save $2,000 With These 7 Painless Tips

(NAPS) These seven simple budgeting ideas should net you about $2,000 a year, with a minimum amount of effort.

Tip 1: Use less. A pea-size bit of toothpaste. A tablespoon of dishwashing powder. A half-cup of laundry detergent. That s all of most cleaning products that you need to use. Instead of scrubbing, spritz and let soak. Let the cleaning stuff work for a while on its own.

The typical household spends $509 on housecleaning products, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. You can probably cut that in half.

Tip 2: Use more. Americans waste about 10 percent of their food dollars, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports, on groceries they never use. Produce rots, bread molds and canned goods gather dust instead of getting eaten.

The simple fix: Cruise through your refrigerator every few days and incorporate the stuff that s aging into that night s dinner. Rubbery carrots can get chopped up into stews or spaghetti sauce, for example, and that stale loaf can make a killer bread pudding. Make a monthly inspection of your pantry and use whatever cans have been shoved to the back.

If you spend $4,404 annually on groceries (average for a family of four), you can easily save more than $400.

Tip 3: Cook once, eat twice. Whenever you cook a meal, make twice as much and freeze or refrigerate the excess for a future dinner. If the frozen meals mean you eat out just 10 percent less, you can trim $300 a year from your family s overall food bill.

Tip 4: Don t shop. Toss catalogs as soon as they arrive. Stay away from shopping Web site. If you spend just $10 a week on recreational shopping, you ll save over $500 in a year.

Tip 5: Drive less. Gas and oil set the average household back $1,279 a year, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Drive one less day a week and you could save about $180 in a year more, if less wear and tear results in lower repair and maintenance expenses.

Hitch a ride into work with a friend, telecommute, take public transportation or leave your car in the garage one weekend day.

Tip 6: Go generic. The average person under 65 spends about $485 on prescription drugs and about $200 on over-the-counter medicines annually, government statistics show, so you may save about $200 a year by going generic when possible. Folks over 65 spend more than $1,100 on prescription drugs, so the potential savings could be even greater.

Tip 7: Be fee-free. The average person who didn t maintain a minimum account balance paid $217 annually for a checking account, according to the U.S. Public Interest Research Group. Add to that the ever-higher fees for bouncing checks and using an ATM, and you could easily be paying a bank more than $300 a year for the privilege of accessing your money. It s not that tough to keep track of your balance or to find your own bank s ATMs.

Conway & Co. Honors November Top Producers

Jack Conway & Co. reannounces its top producer awards to recognize the agents in each sales office who excelled in listing and selling homes during November.

In the Quincy office, John Coughlin was the Top Seller and Ralph Santosuosso was the Top Lister for the month.

We re very proud of these agents and their accomplishments, said Conway President Richard F. Cahill. They are involved in their communities and give quality service to buyers and sellers across the region.

Founded in 1956, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 810 associates in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. # WINTER CAR CARE

AAA Offers Easy-To-Follow Winter Motoring Advice

Check Batteries, Tires And Anti-Freeze

Winter driving is tough on motorists and vehicles. To help drivers make it through the toughest winter conditions, AAA Southern New England offers the following tips:

Charge!! - Cold weather is tough on batteries. At zero degrees, a car s battery loses about 60 percent of its strength. At a comparatively mild 32 degrees, a battery is 35 percent weaker. Keeping battery terminals clean helps, but a battery performance test performed by a qualified technician will help determine whether a car s battery is strong enough for winter starts.

Get a Grip - Before winter arrives, make sure your car is equipped with tires that are able to handle New England s winter weather. For most motorists, all-season tires are adequate. In more northern or mountainous regions, switching to snow tires may be needed. If you are using snow tires on a front-wheel-drive vehicle, four snow tires are required.

See and Be Seen - Danger must be seen to be avoided. Driving with a snow-covered windshield, windows, side-view mirrors or lights invites a crash. Clear windows, mirrors and lights with an ice scraper, brush or spray de-icer. Make certain windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order and that washer reservoirs are filled with no-freeze windshield washer fluid. Remember to clean snow off the roof of the vehicle.

Slippery When Wet - In temperatures at or just above 32 degrees, a thin layer of water can cover the ice, causing extremely slippery conditions. The distance needed to stop on ice at 32 degrees is twice as long as at zero degrees.

Keep Your Engine Cool - Make certain cooling system antifreeze is mixed with an equal portion of water for maximum protection.

Fast Solution - A squirt of de-icer spray is a quick method to overcome frozen door locks. Once thawed, lubricate the lock with silicone or lightweight oil - avoid penetrating oils.

Air It Out - Don t let frigid temperatures tempt you into starting your car in a closed garage or idling your engine for long periods with the windows closed. Carbon monoxide, present in exhaust fumes, is almost impossible to detect and can be fatal when breathed in a confined area.

Finish Up - Road salt, slush and grime are especially hard on a car s finish. To help prevent rust and paint damage, keep cars washed and waxed. A full or self-service car wash makes the job easier when temperatures are low.

Top Repair Facilities Needed For Tough Winter Auto Repair Jobs

Winter weather can cause difficult-to-diagnose automotive problems that require the services of top auto repair facilities, according to AAA Southern New England.

Cold weather can be tough on a vehicle s electrical system, said John Paul, AAA s Car Doctor. It s important to find a repair facility with the capability to properly service the wide range of advanced technologies on today s high-tech vehicles.

AAA offers this advice for choosing the best auto repair shop:

Look for AAA approved repair shops. These shops display a sign that says AAA Approved Auto Repair. To be AAA approved, repair shops must meet tough standards for personnel, customer service, equipment and scope of service. Technicians must be certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

Decide what kind of shop can best handle the work. You may not necessarily go to the same place for all repairs. For example, one shop may specialize in exhaust systems, while another may be excellent at finding an obscure electrical problem. If your car is under warranty, you will probably need to get it fixed at the dealer.

Ask friends, family members, and other for recommendations of technicians they trust.

Slick Facts About Oil

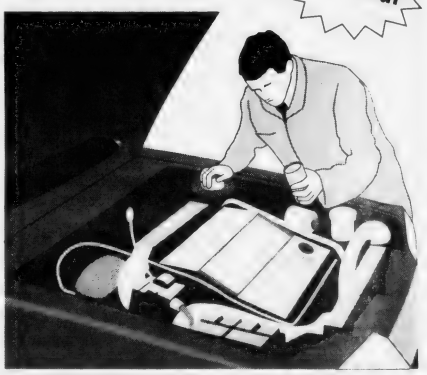
It s time to change the oil on your trusty car and you decide to do it yourself. You find yourself at the auto parts store staring at the assortment of oil on the shelves, trying to decide which one to buy and trying to decipher all the numbers and letters on the containers.

Cracking the oil code requires some basic understanding of what your vehicle requires. In every owner s manual there is a chart with a recommendation of oil type for that car.

The right engine oil is important to cold weather starts, says AAA. Oil can become thick and gluey when cold and can make it difficult for engine parts to move. Some oil grades are thinner than others, and thinner is better for winter weather.

The Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) rates oil for its viscosity in both cold and hot conditions. The first number, usually a 5W or 10W, is an indication of how thin the oil stays when cold. The second number is an indication of how thick it stays when hot and usually ranges from 30 to 40. This means that 5W-30 oil is thinner than 10W-30 when cold.



AAA advises motorists to refer to the SAE oil rating to decide which oil grade is best, and to look in the owner s manual for the viscosity recommended for the vehicle.

Red Raiders Down Barnstable, 60-54

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The North Quincy High School boys basketball team believes it has turned the corner this season.

And a big reason why has been the play of its underclassmen especially last week.

Sophomore forward John Murray drained 34 points to lead the Red Raiders to a huge 60-54 victory over Barnstable last Friday at home.

And fellow classmate, guard Kyle Costa, scored a team-high 24 points in a tough 79-68 loss at Bridgewater-Raynham last Tuesday.

Yeah, I think we've turned the corner, said head coach James Rendle. What's encouraging is Tuesday a sophomore led us in Kyle Costa and Friday a sophomore led us in John Murray. Now that the younger kids are playing well, I think we're going to make some noise.

North Quincy (3-5 overall, 2-3 Old Colony League) traveled to Plymouth South Tuesday and Stoughton Wednesday and will host Marshfield tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30.

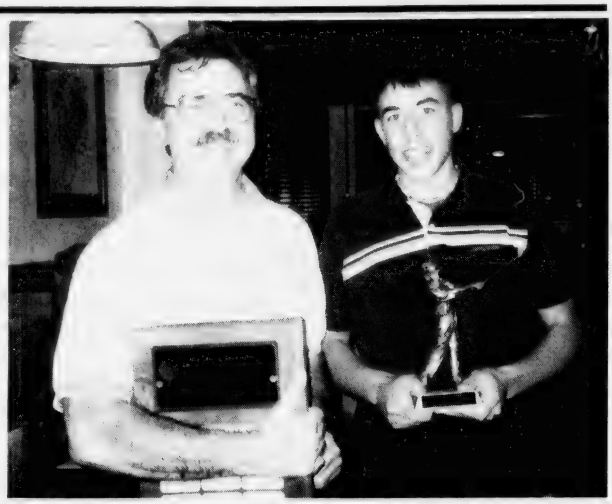
Against Barnstable, Murray connected on 14-of-18 field goals and hauled nine rebounds in his breakout game.

He shot the ball very well with 12- to 15-footers, Rendle said. He was money. Nothing but net consistently. No one really matched up with him. He's 6-3 with long arms and he was too far out for big men to chase him.

Against B-R, the Red Raiders took a lead with about five minutes remaining in the first half, but senior forward Daryl Costa (20 points) and center Brandon Neves got into foul trouble and the Trojans went ahead at the break. Both fouled out late in the game as the Trojans held on for the win.

We're getting better, Rendle said. I'm pleased with the efforts in both games. Friday was a big win for us. It puts us back into contention for the upper echelon of the OCL.

North Quincy might have hit upon its steppingstone Dec. 30 at Rockland. Although the Red Raiders fell, 61-49, it came against an undefeated Bulldogs team that was winning by an average of 42 points per game.



Neves and Daryl Costa led the offense with 19 and 18 points, respectively.

The Red Raiders followed that game with a convincing 51-41 victory at Falmouth Jan. 2.

Neves powered the offense with 18 points and nine rebounds. Kyle Costa added 13 points. Daryl Costa chipped in with eight points and a solid defensive game. Junior guard John Fitzgerald scored six huge points down the stretch and also defended well.

North Quincy's other win this season was an exciting 60-58 overtime victory over cross-town rival Quincy Dec. 23. Kyle Costa hit both free throws with six seconds remaining in the extra session to lift his team to the win. The Red Raiders dropped both games last year.

North Looks To Rebound Against Plymouth South

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

It has been a tough stretch the past several weeks for the North Quincy High School girls basketball team.

Although they dropped their fifth straight game with a 59-45 loss to Barnstable last Friday, the Red Raiders turned in a strong effort on the road and hope it s a sign of better things to come.

I was pleased with our intensity level we played with against Barnstable, said head coach Doug MacFarlane. Hopefully we turned the corner in that game. Although they lost, the girls liked the way they played. They showed some good signs.

North Quincy (2-7 overall, 1-4 Old Colony League) hosted Plymouth South Tuesday and will head to Marshfield tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30.

Barnstable held a three-point lead with about six minutes left in the game before the Red Raiders slipped into a funk, something that has plagued them all year.

We went into a funk for a couple of minutes, like a deer in the headlights, MacFarlane said. We stopped playing defense and stopped running our offense. They built a 10-point lead and we couldn t overcome that barrier. If we didn t hit that funk, we had a good shot at winning that game.

Junior Sarah Goreham paced the team with 15 points and junior Shauna Kelly added nine.

Last Tuesday, North Quincy never threatened Bridgewater-Raynham in a 65-31 loss at home. Junior Amanda Saylor led the team with nine points and 10 rebounds.

We weren t in the game from the beginning, MacFarlane said. We don t match up well with them this year. They are a very good team. They outplayed us.

With 5-11 senior center Alyssa Dearani out sick, the Red Raiders had no way of slowing down 6-3 all-star Megan Driscoll who had 18 points. We couldn t stop her underneath, MacFarlane said.

North Quincy has played the whole season without senior point guard Ashley Ridge. Ridge was involved in an automobile accident Dec. 6. She fractured the second vertebrae in her neck and will most likely not return this season.

Without Ashley, it s been tough, MacFarlane said. It s tough not having that senior leadership at the point guard position.

The Red Raiders felt her absence over winter break as it lost three straight games.

On Jan. 2, North Quincy fell, 41-40, to Falmouth. The Red Raiders stormed out to a 24-9 lead in what MacFarlane described as a picture perfect first half. And when they scored the first five points of the second half, it seemed they were going to cruise to victory.

Then the whole bottom fell out, MacFarlane said. We couldn t do anything right. I told the girls at half-time that it wasn t going to stay like this. We were hitting all of our shots and Falmouth couldn t buy a basket. The second half was totally opposite.

North Quincy hit just 2-of-11 foul shots in the second half. For the game, they shot 40 percent from the charity stripe and an even cooler 33 percent from the floor.

Goreham scored a team-high 18 points, Kelly added eight and Dearani grabbed 11 rebounds.

On Dec. 30, North Quincy dropped a 55-42 contest to Brockton. Goreham and Kelly each tallied 15 points.

In the Chelsea Tournament, North Quincy knocked off Everett, 46-45, in the preliminary game but suffered a 62-30 loss to Braintree in the championship.

Presidents Hoping To Bounce Back

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The Quincy High School boys basketball team dropped three straight games last week following its first win of the season.

The Presidents suffered a tough 56-54 loss at Whitman-Hanson Monday, fell to Plymouth North, 59-50, Wednesday and capped the week with a 72-45 setback to Nauset Friday night.

We re working hard, said head coach John Franceschini. There s a lot more of the season to go. I hope we get better as we go through the season. Hopefully we can turn this around.

Quincy (1-6 overall, 1-2 Atlantic Coast League), which took on Sandwich Tuesday, heads to Randolph tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 and hosts Revere Saturday afternoon at 3.

In the Nauset game last Friday, Quincy started off strong in the opening minutes but then never really got into rhythm. The Warriors took a 38-23 lead into the locker room at halftime.

And Nauset wiped out any thoughts of a second half collapse, engineering a 21-5 run over the first seven minutes. Senior guard Derek Evans couldn t miss a shot as he poured in 11 during the stretch and finished with a game-high 28.

The score indicates we got beat pretty good, Franceschini said. Nauset is one of the top teams in the league. We re a new team, with only two guys back from last year that got a significant amount of minutes.

Those two players returning from last year s tournament team are senior forward J.J. Niamkey and junior guard Parker Scott. Niamkey scored a dozen points as he took the ball strong to the hoop. Senior forward Ed Matthews dominated inside and finished with a team-high 15 points.

Last Wednesday, the Presidents stayed close with a strong Blue Eagles team and were tied 25-25 at the break. In the second half, though, Plymouth North went on a 9-0 run and Quincy never recovered.

We played very well against them, Franceschini said. They caught us with a press in the second half and that took us out of it.

Quincy has had a couple of heart-breaking defeats this season. Last Monday, the Presidents led the entire game against Whitman-Hanson but lost at the buzzer. And in the season opener they came up short against North Quincy with a two-point loss in overtime.

Quincy s 1-Goal Loss Trend Continues

HOCKEY

The third period has been an adventure for the Quincy High School hockey team this season.

Unfortunately, that s when most games are decided and the Presidents have come up on the short end more often than not.

Quincy dropped another close game last Saturday night at home, falling to Nauset, 5-4, as it fizzled down the stretch. Take away an empty-net goal by North Quincy Jan. 3 and all four of Quincy s losses have been by a goal.

It was back and forth and was anyone s game in the third, said head coach Bob Sylvia. Our inexperience is still kicking in and that s what hurt us. At some point we ll put three periods together and then we ll start turning the L s into W s.

Quincy (2-4-1) traveled to Dennis-Yarmouth Wednesday and will host Sandwich Saturday night at 6:40 at Quincy Youth Arena.

Senior captain Josh Giordani netted a pair of goals with an assist to lead the offense and junior goalie Joe Daley recorded 42 saves.

We re skating every game and getting good goaltending, Sylvia said. Joe Daley is keeping us in games. We wouldn t be where we are without him because of our inexperienced defensive corps.

We have seven games under our belts. The kids should have more accountability for themselves now. The effort is there. The kids are trying. We re going through some growing pains.

Last Wednesday at home, the Presidents knocked off Whitman-Hanson, 3-1, as they came up with the big plays in the final stanza this time.

Trailing 1-0, sophomore Matt Giordani scored the tying goal with an assist from his cousin, Josh Giordani, late the second period.

With about 30 seconds left in the game, Josh Giordani and sophomore Mike McKeon set up Matt Giordani for the game-winner. Quincy added an empty-netter to close out the scoring.

It was the same type of game as Nauset, Sylvia said. We got through two periods, but this time we did what we had to do and we put it together. Josh, Mikey and Matthew made a nice bang-bang play on the winning goal.

Because of its inexperience on the third line, Sylvia has been going with just two lines for the final seven minutes of games. Sylvia teams McKeon up with the Giordanis to form its best scoring line and then goes with a checking line.

I believe in all fairness to the hockey program, you have to skate three lines, Sylvia said. We skate three lines, but when we get to the seven-minute mark we ve been using two lines. It worked against Whitman-Hanson and it didn t work against Nauset. We ran out of gas.

What You And Your Family Need To Know To Keep Safe On Vacation

Tips To Avoid Potential Travel Health Issues

(NAPS) Traveling abroad on vacation can be an exciting adventure. Most people spend a great deal of time planning their trips, making sure that the hotel is just right and the tourist attractions are nearby.

But a recent survey presented at the International Society of Travel Medicine 2003 Conference found that nearly two-thirds of respondents traveling to areas with a high risk of infectious diseases didn't seek travel health advice to avoid potential health issues.

What else can you do to keep you and your family safe from illness on vacation? Here are some answers to common travel health related questions that can help you stay healthy on your next vacation.

Q: I'm healthy. Why should I see a doctor before I travel when I have so many other things to get ready?

A: Many travelers will develop a health complaint when traveling to many foreign countries. Travel medicine specialists can help you prevent many common travel health problems by providing appropriate advice, vaccines and prophylactic medicines. You should plan to visit the doctor 4-6 weeks before the trip for a pre-travel consultation to determine the need for any vaccinations and/or anti-malarial medications, as well as any other medical items that may be necessary.

Q: Do I need to get any vaccinations before traveling abroad?

A: Depending on where you are going, you may need to be vaccinated against a number of diseases that we do not routinely vaccinate against in the United States. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) report that hepatitis A is one of the most common vaccine preventable diseases in travelers. Others are vaccine preventable diseases that travelers can be at risk for include yellow fever, hepatitis B, diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, measles and influenza, among others.

Additionally, adults may need to get booster shots for certain immunizations that they got years ago. Make sure that you are up to date on all of your booster shots and that you take your immunization record with you on your trip. Traveling infants and children should be fully up to date with routine childhood vaccinations because diseases covered by these vaccines that are now rare or non-existent in the U.S. are still common in other areas of the world. Vaccination recommendations for specific destinations can be found at the CDC's Traveler's Health site (www.cdc.gov/travel).

Q: I got severe diarrhea the last time I went on vacation. What can I do to prevent this on my next trip?

A: According to the CDC, travelers' diarrhea (TD) is the most common illness affecting travelers, with an estimated 20-50 percent of international travelers becoming ill each year. Travelers' diarrhea is caused by a number of different bacterial and viral infections, and while it is rarely life threatening, TD can ruin an otherwise perfect vacation. To minimize the risk of getting travelers' diarrhea, travelers should avoid eating raw foods such as salads, already-peeled fruit and undercooked meat. Tap water, ice and ice should also be avoided, which may increase the risk of TD. Stick with bottled water or carbonated beverages whenever possible.

If you do get sick, make sure to replace lost fluids, as TD may result in dehydration. Over-the-counter medications that treat cramps and diarrhea can be used, but travelers should see a doctor if the symptoms persist for more than several days or if they are accompanied by a high fever or blood and/or mucus in the stool.

Q: My doctor recommended that I take medication to prevent malaria on my upcoming trip. I read recently that Lariam (mefloquine hydrochloride) is associated with psychiatric side effects. Are there other medications I can take?

A: Malaria is a serious disease and it is important for travelers to most of Africa, Southeast Asia and parts of the Caribbean, Central and South America to be protected against it. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) recently announced a Medication Guide explaining the risk of psychiatric side effects while taking Lariam. These include anxiety, depression, restlessness or confusion. Some of these side effects may persist even after you stop taking the medication. The good news is that there are other effective anti-malarials that do not have the same risk of these side effects, such as Malarone (atovaquone/proguanil HCl) Tablets, which adults take one tablet a day, starting one or two days prior to entering a malaria-endemic area, one tablet a day while in the area, and one tablet a day for only seven days upon return.

In addition to taking preventive medications, you can reduce your risk of mosquito-borne diseases like malaria by using insect repellents and by wearing long-sleeved shirts and trousers during times of the day when insects are more prevalent, such as twilight, and sleeping under a bed net dipped in permethrin.

Q: Do I need to bring a traveler's first aid kit on my trip? If so, what should go in it?

A: It is always a good idea to bring a first aid kit when traveling, no matter what your destination is. Travel to areas with a high risk of disease, however, means giving a bit more thought to its contents. Plan to include various-sized bandages, antibiotic ointment, aspirin or other pain reliever, and an over-the-counter diarrhea medication. In addition, if you are on medication, it is crucial to bring your full supply. Try to keep your first aid kit contents in a waterproof bag or container with multiple compartments for easy access.

No matter where your destination is, it's important to make sure you'll stay healthy while traveling abroad. When planning your next trip, be sure to talk to your doctor about disease preventive measures that may be necessary. The right planning and preventive measures will help to ensure your next vacation is a healthy and happy one.

Advances In Preventing Second Strokes

(NAPS) Stroke is on the rise. It is estimated that by the year 2010, there will be one million strokes suffered per year.

A stroke is a brain attack during which blood supply to the brain is cut off, destroying cells that control brain functions.

Among stroke survivors, the risk of another stroke within five years is more than 30 percent, and they have a three-fold greater chance of dying than first stroke patients.

Fortunately, a new clinical trial may offer new information on the best way to prevent second strokes and the potentially fatal damage they can cause.

Second strokes are even more likely to cause death or serious disability in their victims than first strokes, said Dr. Ralph Sacco, MD, MS, of Columbia University College in New York. We are confident that the PRoFESS study will demonstrate the best treatment options for preventing second strokes.

The PRoFESS (Prevention Regimen For Effectively avoiding Second Strokes) study will seek to prove that Aggrenox, an antiplatelet medication currently available, is more effective than Plavix plus aspirin in preventing second strokes. The drug works by thinning the blood and preventing clots, and may protect the artery wall.

The main risk for a second stroke is a prior stroke or TIA (transient ischemic attack) due to degenerative processes in the wall of blood vessels supplying the brain.

It is estimated that up to one-half of all strokes could be prevented through stroke risk detection and stroke risk management.

Patients at high risk of a second stroke with all its consequences should seek preventive treatment.

Data from ESPS-2 have demonstrated the superiority of Aggrenox over the traditional treatment of aspirin in preventing second strokes after a TIA or stroke, said Dr. Sacco. The PRoFESS study is powered to prove which combination antiplatelet regimen is the single most effective anti-platelet agent for preventing second strokes.

Healthy Ideas

(NAPS) — More and more seriously ill patients are getting a second chance at life, due to the generous people who donate blood marrow.

The National Marrow Donor Program helps match patients and donors, keeping a computerized registry that records the tissue type of individuals who have agreed to become donors.

The NMDP also assists patients toward successful recovery with education on the transplant process and helps them understand health insurance coverage, facts about financial resources and provides advice on developing a financial plan to meet transplant costs.

Learn about the donor program at www.marrow.org.

New research shows that influenza is responsible for more than 114,000 hospitalizations and 36,000 deaths annually — more deaths than AIDS. Vaccination is especially important for those at risk for influenza-related complications including the elderly and those with chronic illnesses.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

UNLIKELY CULPRIT

Tooth cavities are caused by the acid that bacteria in the mouth produce as they consume sugars. While tooth-brushing and flossing go a long way toward averting this damage, there are other, less obvious sources of acid that we might want to concern ourselves with. For instance, dental researchers have discovered that excessively chlorinated water can erode and stain tooth enamel. While more chlorine in a pool may provide more protection against bacteria, it may also lower the water's pH level to the point of making it dangerously acidic to teeth. If you frequently swim in chlorinated water, brush your teeth and use a fluoride rinse immediately after spending more than an hour in the pool.

Your dentist can discover cavities during your regular dental check-up. We can provide you with complete dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular preventative dental health care. Let us help you preserve your teeth. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

William K. Flynn, 57

Patriot Ledger Editor, Columnist

WILLIAM FLYNN

A funeral Mass for William K. Flynn, city edition editor of The Patriot Ledger and columnist, was celebrated Wednesday in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Mr. Flynn died Saturday at Quincy Medical Center after suffering a heart attack. He was 57.

Friends, co-workers and officials had tributes for Mr. Flynn, who spent his entire newspaper career at The Ledger where his weekly column City Seen was one of the newspaper's most popular features.

He had his finger on the pulse of Quincy, said Mayor William Phelan. He often wrote the way people were feeling.

Former Mayor James Sheets said, He had an uncommon love and understanding of his city. Bill celebrated Quincy's goodness and wrote to cure its weaknesses. Quincy is certainly a better place to live because he lived here.

This is a devastating loss, said Congressman William Delahunt, a friend. It's not just a loss to the family and The Ledger, but to the whole community. He was truly a community person.

Chaz Dowaliby, editor of the Patriot Ledger, said Mr. Flynn was the consummate newsman in the best traditions of our profession.

The Ledger and its readers have lost a remarkable editor.

He loved it all, his wife, the former Maureen McAloon said. He was the consummate newspaper man.

Mr. Flynn was born in Boston and moved to Quincy with his family at age 6. He graduated from North Quincy High School and began work at The Ledger as a high school sportswriter in 1965 while a student at Northeastern University.

And then rose through the ranks.

He became a general assignment reporter in 1971. He later worked as a copy editor, editorial writer, night editor, community editor and ombudsman before being named city edition editor in the late 1990s.

Mr. Flynn, who was known as Kevin by his family and close friends and Bill by colleagues and readers, had a wide range interest in music and was a passionate sports fan especially of the Red Sox. He helped found the Quincy Youth Soccer League.

In addition to his wife, Mr. Flynn is survived by two sons, Patrick of Goshen and Matthew of Quincy; daughter, Elizabeth of Quincy; and two granddaughters, Isabel and Rory of Goshen.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Donations may be made to Lend A Hand, The Patriot Ledger, P.O. Box 699159, Quincy 02169.

Grandpa loved gardening, baseball, and playing the harmonica.

Your memories are precious. That's why, at Keohane Funeral Service, we take the time to find out what made your loved one special. Whether it's gathering some of the flowers he so tenderly cultivated or finding a musician to play "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" on the harmonica, you can count on us to help you plan a service that will be just as unique as the person you love.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Are you a friend? It does not take a special gift. It takes a special grace the grace of kindness.

A good talk with a close friend can solve problems, or at least put them in perspective before they become overpowering. One of the problems we face in our hectic, moving-about-society is a scarcity of true friends. . . .

Let's think about friendship . . . A friend is one who is kind, patient and loving enough to listen to what bothers us. A friend is one who does not look down upon us because we feel discouraged or mixed up. A friend listens and hears the need we, ourselves, have difficulty understanding. A friend is one who, simply by letting us share, helps us hear our own words so that we gain a better perspective.

How often have we said to a friend who listened: You have been such a real help. Thanks a lot. After reflecting, we remind ourselves that our friend had just listened, not only with the ears, but with the heart, and hardly said a word. Yet we were refreshed and encouraged . . .

Yes, friendship need not be a scarcity to those who truly want to be friendly. . .

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Romantic aspects are high at this time for single Lambs looking for love. Warm and fuzzy feelings are also at enhanced levels for Rams and Ewes in paired relationships.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors what Taureans dote on — namely, love and money. Look for more meaningful relationships for both singles and pairs, as well as an improved financial outlook.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) All lingering shreds of that recent bout with boredom are dissipated as you eagerly accept a challenging offer. Your positive mood persuades others to join you in this venture.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might need validation for a possible solution to a situation involving someone close to you. Consider asking a trusted friend or relative to help you with this problem.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Investigate carefully before agreeing to assist a friend or colleague with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors that could emerge later that will create problems for you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your decision to work with an associate rather than go it alone, as you first proposed, brings an unexpected bonus. Be careful not to be judgmental. Allow for free and open discussion.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A loved one's health problem could, once again, make demands on your time and attention. But this time, make some demands of your own, and insist that others pitch in and help.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time for the traditionally staid Scorpion to plan adjustments in your day-to-day schedules. Be more flexible and allow for more impromptu, off-the-cuff actions.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid creating unnecessary fuss over a situation you don't approve of. If it's going to work, it will do so despite your objections. If it fails, it will do so without a push from you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Working with a trusted colleague could open your mind to exploring some considerations you previously dismissed out of hand. The weekend brings news from a loved one.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolving a recent problem leaves you in a good position to strengthen your influence on how things get done. But continue to encourage ideas and suggestions from others.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend suggests an interesting opportunity. But check it out before you snap at it. It might be a good deal for some people, but it might not work in helping you reach your goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of helping people solve their problems, making you a most-respected counselor and trusted friend.

tures of the system, he said.

The repairs may not rectify all of the problems in the school, he said.

It's not accurate to say this is going to absolutely fix it, Wynn told the Sun. But it will go a long way to get ting the system to operate in a reasonable fashion.

Phelan said the city would explore the possibility of seeking a remedy from anyone we believe is responsible for this system and the way it has operated from the beginning.

But the passage of time may make it difficult to determine the exact origin of the problem, he said.

As years go by, it becomes more difficult to determine what is causing the problem, said Phelan. This problem should have been pursued from the beginning. We have to make the corrections now, regardless of whether we pursue legal remedies. Making these corrections will assist us in determining what the original problem may have been.

School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg said the city may have grounds to recoup the costs for repairing the ventilation system.

While we were having these problems the equipment was under warranty, she said. It could very well be a defect from the manufacturer. I m appalled that we have a five-year-old building and we have to put another $100,000 into it. And we still don t know if this will correct the problem.

MICHAEL McFARLAND

Wynn said during his investigation he discovered items that should have been caught during installation.

When asked if the city may have grounds for seeking a remedy, Wynn said: At the end of the day there will be operating, maintenance and installation issues. But right now we need to address the current situation.

Phelan said the matter should have been dealt with when it first came to light.

This is just another problem we inherited, said Phelan. When the issue first arose it was swept under the rug. Since taking office two years ago, we have been dealing with this issue in a forthright and systematic manner.

Phelan said conditions have improved at the school but more work needs to be done.

Last year was considerably better than the year before, but it s going to cost money because of the system failures that have been there since the beginning.

Relief Fund For Family Of Home Destroyed By Fire

A relief fund has been established for members of a Quincy family whose Carlson Street duplex home and belongings were destroyed by a three-alarm fire they fled to safety in sub-zero temperature.

The Jenkins Family Relief Fund was opened Tuesday at the Quincy Municipal Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., by a neighbor, Tony Siciliano, former Quincy Deputy Director of Emergency Management.

Eight members of the family of Daniel Jenkins, Sr. and his wife, Jean McAdams Jenkins, escaped, some in pajamas, night gowns and bare feet, after the fire was discovered in the basement of their duplex home at 38 Carlson St., behind Faith Lutheran Church, early last Friday morning.

The temperature at the time was about 9 degrees below zero with a wind chill factor of 20 below.

Jenkins and his wife were awake having coffee around 5:45 a.m. when she noticed smoke in the dining room. He checked the basement and found it a fire.

Mrs. Jenkins called 911 and she and her husband started rousing the other members of the family.

Their daughter, Sarah, and son-in-law, Barry MacDonald, lived with them on their side of the duplex.

On the other side were son, Daniel, Jr., his wife, Christina, and their two children, Tom, 13, and Tim, 3.

Daniel Jenkins, Sr., his wife, Jean, and Sarah and Barry MacDonald have been given refuge by Siciliano in what coincidentally was a

Set Tax Rate Before Elections

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi was scheduled Tuesday to introduce a home rule petition that sets a Sept. 15 deadline for the city to establish its tax classification.

At Tuesday night's council meeting Raymondi was set to introduce the measure which mandates the board of assessors to establish the city's tax rate for the fiscal year no later than Sept. 15.

"This legislation should provide for more accountability and responsibility by elected and appointed officials," said Raymondi. "If there are future property tax increases, it will give the residents more time to manage their individual budgets."

Under this proposal, any future property tax increase would be spread over the three quarters of the year instead of two, as it was this year. Supporters of the bills could be [illegible] with the new rate, he said.

"Residents are getting blindsided with the second, third and fourth quarter bills," he said. "We have an obligation to set the tax rate as soon as possible. We have got into this pattern of setting the rates later and later."

The legislation also allows the city to petition the Department of Revenue Commissioner for an extension of the date in the case

Fr. Bill's Place Strained By Deep Freeze

Last week's bone numbing temperatures forced more people than ever before to seek shelter at Father Bill's Place, according to Executive Director John Yazwinski.

Yazwinski said about 140 people sought shelter at Father Bill's during the coldest days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

"This is the busiest we've ever been. But we didn't turn anyone away," said Yazwinski. "But we had to transfer some people to other shelters, such as the Long Island Shelter."

Father Bill's set up additional 40 cots to accommodate the number of visitors, he said.

"Some people slept at the dining room, others in the hallways wherever we could find some space," said Yazwinski.

In addition, the shelter was open for 24 hours a day, instead of the normal 12

A relief fund has been established for members of a Quincy family whose Carlson Street duplex home and belongings were destroyed by a three-alarm fire they fled to safety in sub-zero temperature.

The Jenkins Family Relief Fund was opened Tuesday at the Quincy Municipal Credit Union, 100 Quincy Ave., by a neighbor, Tony Siciliano, former Quincy Deputy Director of Emergency Management.

Eight members of the family of Daniel Jenkins, Sr. and his wife, Jean McAdams Jenkins, escaped, some in pajamas, night gowns and bare feet, after the fire was discovered in the basement of their duplex home at 38 Carlson St., behind Faith Lutheran Church, early last Friday morning.

The temperature at the time was about 9 degrees below zero with a wind chill factor of 20 below.

Jenkins and his wife were awake having coffee around 5:45 a.m. when she noticed smoke in the dining room. He checked the basement and found it a fire.

Mrs. Jenkins called 911 and she and her husband started rousing the other members of the family.

Their daughter, Sarah, and son-in-law, Barry MacDonald, lived with them on their side of the duplex.

On the other side were son, Daniel, Jr., his wife, Christina, and their two children, Tom, 13, and Erin, 3.

Daniel Jenkins, Sr., his wife, Jean, and Sarah and Barry MacDonald have been given refuge by Siciliano in what coincidentally was a

Set Tax Rate Before Elections

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi was scheduled Tuesday to introduce a home rule petition that sets a Sept. 15 deadline for the city to establish its tax classification.

At Tuesday night's council meeting Raymondi was set to motion for the measure which mandates the board of assessors to establish the city's tax rate for the fiscal year no later than Sept. 15.

"This legislation should provide for more accountability and responsibility by elected and appointed officials," said Raymondi. "If there are future property tax increases, it will give the residents more time to manage their individual budgets."

Fr. Bill's Place Strained By Deep Freeze

Last week's bone numbing temperatures forced more people than ever before to seek shelter at Father Bill's Place, according to Executive Director John Yazwinski.

Yazwinski said about 140 people sought shelter at Father Bill's during the coldest days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

"This is the busiest we've ever been. But we didn't turn anyone away," said Yazwinski. "But we had to transfer some people to other shelters, such as the Long Island Shelter."

Father Bill's has opened additional 40 cots to accommodate the number of visitors, he said.

"Some people slept in the dining room, others in the hallways - wherever we could find some space," said Yazwinski.

In addition, the shelter was open for 24 hours a day instead of the normal 12

Col. John Quincy Tankard Dedicated At City Hall

ATTY. GEORGE BURKE presents the Colonel John Quincy Tankard to Mayor William Phelan for its dedication and permanent display in the atrium at new City Hall. Quincy was named for Colonel Quincy. Flanking Burke and Phelan are County Commissioner John Gillis, former city clerk, and Senator Michael Morrissey. Burke, who rescued the tankard from auction in 2001 at a cost of nearly $200,000, will retain ownership of it. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Tuesday at City Hall in cermonies held in the Atrium, Atty. George G. Burke, dedicated the historic Colonel John Quincy tankard for permanet display.

Burke will still retain ownership of the tankard.

Speaking to the gathering, Burke told how Col. John Quincy, who was born in 1689 was town manager for 42 years when Quincy was known as Braintree.

The North Precinct of Braintree later became the Town of Quincy. Col. Quincy served for 25 years in the House of Representatives, and later as Speaker of the House.

Burke said when Abigail Adams, Col. Quincy's granddaughter, gave birth to a son she asked her husband John Adams if she could give their son the middle name of Quincy after her grandfather. He agreed and that that is how the sixth president of the United States got the name John Quincy Adams.

Burke said when the North Precinct of Braintree was being named, it was either going to be Hancock after John Hancock or Quincy after Dorothy Quincy.

It was up to the Governor of Massachusetts who was John Hancock to make the decision. Burke said when Hancock returned home that evening it was to a "great reception" because Hancock was married to Dorothy Quincy. He picked her name over his.

Later Mayor William Phelan joked, "It's amazing that even before women began to vote, the importance they had at that time."

Sen. Michael Morrissey said he and Burke were both graduates of U/Mass and said "Burke has never forgotten his roots in Quincy."

Burke said he first noticed a story about the tankard in the Quincy Sun. It was reported that the Church of the Presidents was in need of a new roof and needed funds. They decided to sell the historic silver which was ultimately went on auction at Sotheby's in New York.

Col. Quincy left money in his will to have the tankard made and donated to was then First Church of Braintree, now United First Parish Church known as the Church of the Presidents.

Burke said there were 11 pieces of silver for sale that day, and the first piece went for $750,000, which he said was the highest price ever paid in the United States for silver.

When Burke made that statement, Phelan quipped, "that's when you knew you were in trouble."

Burke said it had been noted that the tankard would net about $30,000, but when all was said and done he paid $200,000 for the piece. Before bidding on the piece, Burke said he thought to himself, "I don't care; how high it is bid, I'm going to buy it for the City of Quincy."

Burke has displayed the tankard on several olocations, inluding its very first appearance in the window of The Quincy Sun.

It will now be displayed in the special show case on a permanent basis at City Hall. Plans are to place it in a vault at night for security.

Burke thanked historian Ed Fitzgerald for his help in preparing a brochure about the tankard and for some of the historical facts about Quincy.

Equality Should Extend To Proper Healthcare

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

African Americans are making headway in the Civil Rights struggle, but there is room for improvement in the area of healthcare, according to the keynote speaker at the city's annual breakfast tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King.

More than 300 residents turned out for Monday's event, which was sponsored by the Quincy Human Rights Commission and held at the VFW Bryan Post.

This year's keynote speaker, Thomas A. Farrington, praised the late Dr. King for his efforts in promoting equality for all. If he were alive today, the civil rights leader would be promoting proper healthcare for African Americans because the issue is a human rights concern, said Farrington.

"Homelessness and poverty are human rights issues," he told the audience. "And a lack of healthcare in our country is a human rights issue."

Farrington fought a successful battle against prostate cancer after being diagnosed in 2000. He founded The Prostate Health Education Network, Inc. (PHEN), a non-profit organization dedicated to raising awareness about the dangers of prostate cancer. Farrington wrote a book about the disease, titled, "Battling the Killer Within."

"I felt compelled to help other people fight the disease," he said. "A war on prostate cancer is a war that must be felt by all races."

An entrepreneur and business executive, he has served the community at the federal, state and local level. He served as a senior advisor to former Gov. Michael Dukakis during Dukakis' run for president in 1988. Farrington was appointed to the Export/Import Bank Advisory Board by former President George H. Bush, and he was appointed to serve on the Historically Black College Advisory Board by former President Bill Clinton.

Farrington called on citizens to become more educated on healthcare issues. He said African American men die from prostate cancer at a rate nearly two-and-a half times that of all other men. Early detection of the disease is paramount to winning the battle, he said. African American men should be

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"

(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason – to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close – you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

Pete Zoia: Mr. North Quincy

Football rivalries have a way of turning into cherished friendships.

Especially when it comes to cross-town rivals North and Quincy High schools.

That was quite evident at the recent tribute to NQHS football legend Pete Zoia – "Mr. North Quincy."

PETE ZOIA, "Mr. North Quincy", was honored at a special Quincy sponsored tribute. Photos on Pages 21 and 22.

The recognition dinner for North's first football team captain and long-time assistant coach now 86, grandfather of 27 and great-grandfather of 18 was put on by "the other guys" – former Quincy players, members of the QHS 50's Alumni Benefit Fund Committee.

Players, coaches and friends from both schools bonded and blended into a scene of warm friendship and fond memories at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Among them was Vic DiGravio, one of Quincy's all-time football greats who later became a top-notch professional basketball referee.

DiGravio was sitting beside Pete at his table and the two had a lot to reminisce about. Like that 1934 game they played against one another. It was a classic that ended in a 0-0 tie. DiGravio kicked a field goal but it was nullified by an offside penalty.

That game, the second in the 71-year rivalry, was played on Armistice Day (Veterans Day) at Coddington Field across from the police station before a crowd estimated at 7,000.

The dinner drew a nice Quincy and North representation.

The QHS 50's alumni Committee members included Ron Ivil, president; Vin Moscardelli, secretary; Eugene (Satch) Cavanaugh, treasurer; George Mallett, Ronald Leone, Jack Brown, Sr. and Dick Lombardi.

Among former Quincy players attending were Mike Casali, legendary Central Junior High coach; Ken Burgess, Lionel (Shine) Buckley, Guido (Budsie) Pettinelli and his brother, Bobby Pettinelli.

Present Quincy head coach Bob Noble was there. So was Linda Sullivan, wife of the late Bill Sullivan, who as a Quincy player and coach, was a legend himself.

North was also well represented.

Former head coaches Ralph Frazier and Ken McPhee, NQHS Principal Lou Ioanilli, retired Principal Peter Chrisom, Sr. and present assistant coach Peter Chrisom, Jr. joined in the tribute to Pete.

As did his old teammate, Joe Rogers, and more recent North players, Steve Moynihan, Bo Lyons, John (Butch) Mahoney, Dan Mahoney, Ray and Bob Doherty, among others.

And, Mary Pratt, another North Quincy legend who played professional baseball as a member of that famed World War II "League Of Their Own" helped make it a memorable day for Pete.

As did brothers Arthur and Dr. Allan Yacubian. Allan, now a North Quincy dentist, while a student in 1957 was the model for North's mascot and symbol, The Yakoo. The brothers have been strong supporters of the North Quincy sports programs through the years.

State Senate and House of Representative commendations were presented to Pete by Senator Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers. And city council citations by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner.

Pete was also presented a Quincy/North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame desk set with a miniature Quincy High football helmet. He was one of the first inducted into that Hall of Fame.

And there were words from the heart. Among them:

Lou Ioanilli: "I thank him for being himself. He has more integrity than any other person I have ever met."

Ken McPhee: "There will never be another Pete Zoia. No one will ever replace this man."

Twelve of Pete's 13 children were there: Janet Campbell, Joanne Kelly, Carol Goward, Cheryl Zoia, Beverly Gregory, Barbara Younie, Paul Zoia, Regina Galasso, Rhonda Nickley, Gregory Zoia, Gayle Ayoub and Dean Zoia.

But there were three people who weren't there Pete would loved to have shared the day with:

Elaine, his late wife of 60 years, mother of their 13 children and high school sweetheart. She was a pretty NQHS cheerleader when Pete was playing football and went on cheering from him and North Quincy the rest of her life.

Peter J. Zoia, Jr., his namesake, who, sadly, died of cancer at age 14.

And, Jack Donahue, North Quincy's legendary first football coach who Pete played for and admired. The coach and his captain became close friends. Pete was like a devoted son to Donahue in the latter's declining years.

The first words Pete and Elaine taught their babies as they came along was "Rah for North Quincy," daughter Barbara recalls.

But, she says, Pete had a lot of respect for Quincy and even taught the children the words to Quincy High's school song, "March Down The Field."

Pete was taken by surprise at the dinner when Coaches Chrissy Tierney and Jane Cocio arrived – with 18 North Quincy cheerleaders.

They swung into cheers for Pete and North and then, in a fitting touch, led the audience in Quincy's "March Down The Field."

Proceeds from the dinner will go to establishing a Pete Zoia memorabilia trophy case to be displayed outside the NQHS gym.

There are also thoughts of creating a scholarship.

A scholarship jointly in the names of Pete Zoia and Bill Sullivan.

Yes, football rivalries do have a way of turning into cherished friendships.

Especially rivals like Quincy and North.

Legislation Bans Fees On Gift Cards

Quincy's state delegation is co-sponsoring legislation that would significantly increase consumer protection regarding gift certificates and gift cards.

Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ron Mariano and Bruce Ayers are co-sponsoring a bill prohibiting fees that may reduce the value of a gift certificate or gift card.

The legislation expands the legal definition of gift certificate to include gift cards and any electronic card whose intent is to be used as a gift certificate. This will extend existing gift certificate consumer protections to gift cards or similar electronic cards.

The bill would remove the provision requiring a gift certificate as an item that must be redeemed by the seller of the gift certificate. An example of this is the Simon's Mall's gift cards, which can be used at any business that accepts Visa credit card.

Since Simon's Mall does not redeem its own gift card, it is not considered a gift certificate under the law, Mariano said. As a result, this allows Simon Companies to charge a service fee for six months. The card also expires after one year.

Morrissey said gift certificates and gift cards that can be used at businesses other than its seller would be subject to current gift certificate consumer protection laws, according to the bill.

The legislation would remove from the definition of gift certificate the requirement that to have the gift certificate to be given to a third party.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard showing the bridge on Rock Island Road that at that time was the only connection between Rock Island and Houghs Neck. This view is to the southwest showing cottages on Spring Street in the background. Today, this postcard scene is hardly discernible, the bridge was long ago replaced with a granite culvert and the road is level. The cottages are now year-round homes and are for the most part hidden by trees and brush, some have been destroyed by fires. Rock Island is named for its exposed rock formations that were once quarried and crushed here by the Tidewater Broken Stone Co. The crushed rock, known as trappean rock, or trap rock, was first used without a binder to macadamize roads early in the twentieth century. Later, asphalt or hot tar was added and, over time, road pavement material evolved into the blacktop we know today. Remains of the "Crusher" still exist. Rock Island itself is really two islands, separated from each other and from Houghs Neck by estuaries. The bridge shown here went from Houghs Neck to the eastern island known as Rock Island Head. The quarry was on the western island, which in the 1700's was the estate of Norton Quincy, an uncle of Abigail Adams. It was from the shore near Quincy's home here that John Adams and his 10-year-old son, John Quincy, departed for France in February 1778. This postcard was one of a series of Houghs Neck views published by Arthur Dunham whose popular store was on the far end of Sea Street.

Fire Deaths Cited In Call For New Safety Regulations

This Week
1958
46 Years Ago

Nine people died in Quincy fires in less than a year, prompting Building Inspector Alrick Weidman to recommend to Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa new safety regulations.

Included in the recommendations were the ban of space heaters, inspection for all newly installed heating systems, removal of dilapidated buildings, strengthening the authority of the Fire Prevention Bureau and requiring some type of home fire alarms.

The most recent fire deaths included a 28-year-old mother and her two young daughters in Houghs Neck and a husband and wife in Squantum.

SCHOOL BOUNDARY CHANGES

The boundaries of some elementary schools would have to be changed to alleviate overcrowding at both Quincy High School and North Quincy High School.

It was expected that the Coddington School would be taken over completely for Quincy High School use while sixth graders as the Mass. Fields and Wollaston Schools being sent to Central Junior High School, instead of North Quincy. Crowding at North Quincy High School would also be solved with the scheduled opening of the new Atlantic Junior High School.

QUINCY ADAMS YACHT YARD MAY CLOSE

The Quincy Adams Yacht Yard in Adams Shore could be forced to close if it were unable to convince the Navy Department of the actual costs for the construction of wooden minesweepers and personnel boats.

The Navy was willing to settle to dispute with a payment of $320,000, but the yard said their costs were $1.7 million.

After a two-hour meeting in Washington with the Navy, Quincy Adams President Edward Whiting was not optimistic.

A Feb. 15 public auction of the yard was scheduled by one creditor, which would effectively force the yard into involuntary bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, a "creditors committee" made up of mostly Quincy businesses was formed to co-operate with the yard rather than force its closure.

Representing Senator Everett Saltonstall at the Washington meeting was his secretary, Charles Colson.

Decision Needed On Quincy College's Status

Regarding the situation at Quincy College, there must be a final decision on whether it's a privately or city-run institution.

Quincy College can not be both, as it presently is.

I'm definitely no expert in managing a department or company, but the "quasi-private, quasi-city" status of Quincy College is very confusing. If there were any problems regarding Quincy College, who's responsible — the city of Quincy or the college?

It's sort of like a person with multi-personalities, if you know what I mean. It's insane, and no one benefits.

For the benefit of everyone, especially the students and Quincy taxpayers, there must be a resolution to Quincy College's status very, very soon.

Thank You For Helping The Kids

I am writing to thank you for your generosity to the 150 children served by the United Homes for Children Christmas Party. So many have led lives of abuse, neglect, homelessness or severe medical, emotional or mental challenges.

The party marked a brief respite for them from their situations; to be "just kids" again, if only for a short time. Let us hope that some of them are adopted.

Your newspaper and photographer coverage highlighted the generosity of the business of Quincy. It's people like you that really make a difference in the lives of others. I guess the people of Quincy really put the "I" in Philanthropist.

Taking time from the busy holiday season to assist some special children in need is indeed the true spirit of the season. We appreciate your caring community example.

As we head into the New Year, we echo Tiny Tim to you: "God Bless Us Everyone" and thank you again.

Thinks Milosevic Trial Is A 'Kangaroo Court'

During a recent press conference, Presidential hopeful, former General Wesley Clark, told reporters that he was delighted that he could testify against Slobodan Milosevic: "The man I believe was responsible for so much of the slaughter and victims in the Balkans."

I was shocked when I heard him use the word "believe." Saying "believe" means he really does not know if Milosevic knew about alleged atrocities in Kosovo or Bosnia. Anyone can believe anything — but one can legally only testify in court about what they know to be factual.

To add insult to injury, Milosevic has been prevented by the International Criminal Tribunal for former Yugoslavia (ICTY), on U.S. request, from cross-examining this witness who is testifying to what he "believes" to be true. It is a fundamental right to be able to face and confront your accuser in a public court hearing.

Obviously, Milosevic has been deprived of this right. Wesley Clark also told reporters that authorities should consider a similar court to prosecute Saddam Hussein — alluding that Milosevic should be made an example of. There is one phrase which accurately describes the trial of Slobodan Milosevic: Kangaroo Court.

Nutrition Theatre Show At Bernazzani School Jan. 30

"Foodplay", a national award-winning nutrition theatre show, will appear at the Charles A. Bernazzani School Friday, Jan. 30 at 10 a.m.

The show features colorful characters, juggling, motivating messages, music, magic and fun.

Addressing the major nutrition, fitness and self-esteem concerns affecting today's school children, Foodplay provides students with the practical skills they need to grow up healthy and fit.

During the performance, students will learn how to treat their bodies right with good nutrition, physical fitness, and healthy lifestyle habits. Kids will also learn how to decipher food labels as well as consumer skills to make sense of today's food marketplace.

Student will also discover that they don't have to be skinny to be attractive and that "every body is different, and different is a good thing."

While Foodplay makes good eating fun, its messages are quite serious. Starting healthy lifestyle habits early in life can help prevent the leading causes of death and disease in this country – heart disease, cancer, and stroke. Yet, surveys of American youth show troubling trends. Today, one out of four children are overweight and face and increased risk of chronic disease later in life. Twenty-five percent of today's school children already show signs of high cholesterol levels.

Foodplay Productions is a nutrition and health media company which produces national touring theatre shows including "Foodplay" for elementary schools and "This is Your Life" for middle and high schools as well as media campaigns, conference keynotes, video kits, and creative resources to improve children's health.

Quincy Masonic Lodges Consolidates

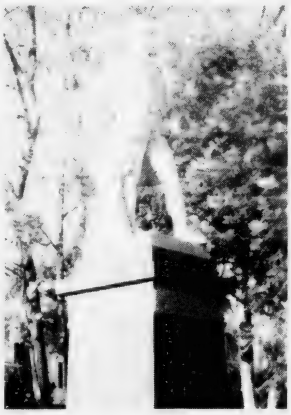
By GRAEME MARSDEN

"This is an exciting time for Quincy Freemasons," said Master of Rural Lodge Ron McKim Jr.. "Two old Quincy lodges are pooling their resources to make one, stronger lodge, and I'm tremendously proud to have been elected Master of the combined lodge."

Earlier this month, two old-established lodges joined in a combined meeting at the beautiful old Quincy Masonic Building on Hancock St. Wollaston Lodge was founded in Quincy in 1899, and recently celebrated its centennial. Rural Lodge is even older, having been founded in Quincy in 1801, a time when the Adams and Quincy families were pre-eminent in town. Rural was Quincy's first Masonic Lodge, and the name was selected to reflect the sylvan scene of Quincy as it was at the start of the 1800s. 200 or so Masters of the Lodge later, Ron McKim looks forward to the challenge. "Times have changed greatly since then," Master McKim reflects, "and peoples' lives are busier. Nowadays there are more options, but perhaps less time to ponder and to relax. This is a good time for people to find out about Freemasonry in their local community fanned to consider joining this worthwhile and ancient fraternity. We hold out a warm welcome to any who'd like to join us."



The two lodges will not assume a double-barreled name (such as Wollaston-Rural) but will preserve the historic 1801 name of Rural Lodge AF & AM. Naturally this is a time for some nostalgia for the Wollaston name, but members voted for the sheer simplicity of "Rural Lodge" for the new combined lodge name. Interestingly enough, Wollaston Lodge was originally formed by a group of Rural Lodge masons. Now it will merge again with its mother lodge.

On Friday evening, Jan. 23, the Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts and his suite of Grand Masonic officers pays a visit to the Quincy Masonic building, to formally preside over the merger of the two Quincy lodges. "This will be a great and ceremonial meeting," said Master Ron McKim at a recent committee meeting, "and I look forward to an exciting year."

Even though there's a prominent statue of him near the corner of Newport and Granite streets...

Scottish poet and active Freemason Robert Burns never visited Quincy.

But, many of his countrymen immigrated to America, with a large number of Scots settling right here in Quincy. One of their contributions was the statue of the immortal bard, Robert Burns, that stands today, overlooking the intersection of Newport and Granite Streets.

Freemasonry found its roots in Scotland many centuries ago and still flourishes there today...as it does here in the United States and especially here in Quincy. Many Scottish immigrants joined local Masonic Lodges including Rural Lodge of Masons that was formed in 1801. This was equally true of men who came from many countries throughout the world to build new lives in an environment of freedom and liberty. And they, too, became a part of the Masonic tradition in Quincy.

Freemasonry is the oldest and largest fraternity of men in the world with some 5-million members in Lodges in every country in the free world. One of the benefits of being a Mason is meeting Brother Masons wherever you go.

Freemasonry invites men of good character from all walks of life, from all levels of income, from every race, creed and culture to become Masons. To be a Mason you must profess a belief in God. But Masonry is not a religion. Masonry's traditions and teachings, endeavor to instill in its members the desire and means to improve themselves and the lives of others. It is said that Freemasonry makes good men better.

As a Mason, you'll be joining other men like George Washington, Harry S Truman, Benjamin Franklin, Paul Revere, Quincy's own John Hancock and, of course, Robert Burns. Great men who have made Masonry the focus of their lives.

For more information, without obligation, on how you can become a Mason, call Rural Lodge at the number below today.

Quincy Man Pleads Innocent In Shooting Of Boston Police Officer

A Quincy man was held on $500,000 bail after pleading innocent in Quincy District Court to charges in connection with the shooting of a Boston Police officer who was trying to arrest him last week.

Horacio Mays, 27, of 263 West St., pleaded innocent to multiple charges, including assault with attempt to murder, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, discharging a firearm within 500 feet of a building, and possessing a firearm without an ID, according to Robert Bloom, assistant clerk at Quincy District Court.

Boston police officer Scott O'Brien was shot multiple times last Friday while trying to arrest Mays on West St. Police said Officer O'Brien climbed a ladder and pushed himself through a small opening in the attic where Mays was hiding. At that point, Mays allegedly opened fire, striking O'Brien. The officer was pulled from the ladder by other officers, and rushed to Boston Medical Center. Mays fired more shots at officers but eventually surrendered, police said.

O'Brien has undergone at least three surgeries to his throat, face and arm. He remains in serious condition, according to police. Doctors said he may not talk for several months.

Bail was set at $500,000 by Judge Mark Coven. The case was continued to Feb. 6, according to Bloom.

Boston police wanted Mays for failing to appear in a Boston court on an attempted shooting charge.

Gem Auto Parts Does 'Whatever It Takes' To Earn Customers' Trust

GEM AUTO PARTS, 65 School St., Quincy, offers a long line of brand name automotive parts such as Auto Pride, Anco, Airtex, A-1 M. Cardone, Carlson, Fel-Pro, Gates, Modine, Monroe, Moog, Standard Ignition, Stant, Wagner, Walker, and Wix. Gem Auto Parts, which has served Boston's automotive needs since 1956, recently opened its Quincy store at the site of the former Johnson's Motor Parts. Quincy Sun Photo/Irish Bossart

By SHEILA HALLORAN

When Sales Associate Rafael Rodrigues says that Gem Auto Parts will do whatever it takes for their customers, he means it.

According to Rodrigues, during a recent snowstorm when conditions hindered Gem's drivers from going on the road, the Goodyear in Roslindale called for an auto part to be sent to them immediately. "We sent one of our guys on a train with the part and got the part to them," said Rodrigues. "We'll do whatever it takes to get the respect of customers and businesses."

Gem Auto Part's thinking outside the box tactics and above and beyond attitude is what Rodrigues and General Manager and part owner Ron Diorio claims separates Gem from other auto part stores. The eight-store Boston based chain recently opened at 65 School St., at the location of the former Johnson's Motor Parts.

Greg McMillen, manager of the Quincy location, previously worked at Johnson's Motor Parts, which closed in May of last year. Gem opened on June 1st and so far "business is picking up," said McMillen.

With so many existing auto parts and auto body shops in Quincy, Rodrigues and McMillen made gaining customer loyalty a top priority. "Some people are loyal to other shops," said Rodrigues. "We have loyal customers in Boston because we've been there for 45 years. Here it is new to us and we have to prove ourselves," he added. McMillen said they are already off to a good start. "We are earning the trust of our customers," he said.

McMillen, having worked with auto parts for over 20 years, said the prices at Gem Auto Parts is another strong selling point. "Our prices are competitive. They can compete with any other chain and people are impressed with them," he said.

Gem Auto Parts has been serving Boston's automotive needs since 1956, when Ed Kaplan opened his first store in Chelsea. In 1977, Kaplan, along with his sons, Joel and Michael, opened their second store in East Boston. Over the next few decades, the Kaplan family would open six more stores in Lynn, Wakefield, Medford, Dorchester, Maynard and Quincy.

According to Diorio, Gem's philosophy is the same today as it was in 1956, "to provide excellent personal customer service at a discounted price."

Another competitive advantage that differentiates Gem from other auto part stores is their "Task Force." The Task Force, comprised of Rodrigues and three other employees, was developed to help the company enhance customer service and better serve their customers and to act as a voice for their employees.

"The job of the Task Force is to make sure the entire focus of the company is on the customer," said Diorio.

Diorio opened the Quincy location because he found the Quincy trading area to be "very intriguing."

"We really liked the community and the people," said Diorio. "We also saw an opportunity because of the size of the trading area and the competitors that were in the area. We felt that we would be a good fit for the community," he said.

Gem Auto Parts offers a long line of brand name automotive parts such as Auto Pride, Anco, Airtex, A-1 M. Cardone, Carlson, Fel-Pro, Gates, Modine, Monroe, Moog, Standard Ignition, Stant, Wagner, Walker, and Wix.

Gem Auto Parts offers a convenient V.I.P. center based out of Chelsea. Wholesale customers can call in their orders on the V.I.P. line and Gem will deliver the order within the hour. The toll-free V.I.P. line is 1-866-884-7400.

Catholic Schools Week

January 25 – 31, 2004

A Faith-Filled Future

Catholic Schools

By focusing on the basics and demanding excellence, a Catholic education prepares your child for the future - in fact, a higher percentage of Catholic-educated students go on to college.

But Catholic education sheds light on more than just science or math. It helps instill the self-esteem, respect for others and real spirituality that tomorrow's adults will need to create a brighter future. Please contact a Catholic school near you today to learn more about the benefits of a Catholic education.

Relief Fund For Family Of Home Destroyed By Fire

vacant apartment in his duplex home next door.

The relief fund has been set up to aid Daniel Jr. his wife Christine and their two children who are now staying [illegible].

The [illegible] has [illegible] but [illegible] [illegible] Monday.

The cause of the blaze was still undetermined as of Tuesday.

Nearly 40 firefighters were hampered by the frigid weather – the coldest of the winter – as fire hydrants closest to the burning house were frozen.

Chief Paul O'Connell said firefighters had to carry hose some 1,000 feet to reach available water.

Water poured onto the house iced footing, ladders and firefighters helmets and clothing.

"They [illegible] their helmets gave them the appearance of halos," said Stathano. "That seemed appropriate because the firefighters are like [illegible] in time of need."

Deputy Chief Joseph Barron, Jr. said footing was slippery but as far as he knew no members of the fire department were injured although there were "a few slips and falls."

The next door home of Kevin and Barbara O'Malley was damaged by smoke and water, forcing them out. They were reported staying at the Marriott Hotel.

Stathano, who is now Deputy Director of Emergency Management and CERT program director in Braintree, obtained blankets there to help the Jenkins family.

Councillor Kevin Coughlin in whose Ward 3 the Jenkins home is located had praise for the family, the fire department and Stathano.

"I'm amazed at the positive outlook that the Jenkins family has been able to maintain, despite the tremendous difficulty and material loss the entire family has endured," Coughlin told The Quincy Sun.

"Gratefully, there was no loss of life. The Quincy Fire Department performed at a supreme level in the most adverse conditions, preserving adjacent properties and protecting neighbors' lives as well.

"I would encourage all people of good will to follow the compassionate example of Tony Stathano and contribute whatever they are able in order to aid this wonderful family in their time of need."

Rep. Tobin Receives 'Pillar Of Justice Award'

Rep. Stephen Tobin was recently honored by the Greater Boston Legal Services and the Boston Bar Association.

Individual members volunteer their legal services. The association as a whole awards grants to organizations that encourages access to justice for low-income families. It also funds programs that facilitate pro bono and community service opportunities for lawyers.

STEVE TOBIN

Tobin was presented with the "Pillar of Justice Award" for his role in h helping to preserve legal aid for low-income residents in the state budget.

"People in low-income households need access to legal advice and legal services," Tobin said. "Otherwise, they are effectively denied access to the courts and justice."

Greater Boston Legal Services provides free non-criminal legal assistance to those of low-income in the Boston and Quincy area. They also represent community groups and provide community legal education.

The Boston Bar Association, civically involved, provides public service through its charitable affiliate, the Boston Bar Foundation.

Equality Should Extend To Proper Healthcare, MLK Speaker Says

screened for the disease beginning at the age of 45, he said. Early screenings could prevent some 3,000 deaths annually, he said.

"I believe in my heart that this healthcare disparity would be a battleground for Mr. King," he told the audience.

Farrington thanked those in attendance for honoring Dr. King, "one of our country's greatest sons."

Calling Quincy "a true melting pot," Mayor William Phelan noted a dramatic change in the city's demographics over the past 20 years.

"Quincy is a welcoming city, which sees cultural differences not as obstacles, but as opportunities," said Phelan. "We seek to learn from each other and our differences make us better.

"As proud as I am of the strides we have made in understanding and celebrating our differences, I recognize that achieving Dr. King's dream is a constant effort. Even today, 41 years after his inspirational 'I Have A Dream' speech, we must still work together to make his words a reality," said Phelan.

The mayor, beginning his second term in office, said the tribute breakfast is a strong indication that Dr. King's legacy is alive and well.

"Ignorance and racism are no match against understanding, compassion and communication," said Phelan. "Through events like this morning's breakfast and other celebrations of our cultural understanding, we shall overcome."

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating praised the work of the human rights commission and said he will continue to pursue those who break civil rights laws.

"We all must work together to ensure that the civil rights laws on the books are not just empty words on a piece of paper," he told the audience. "The laws pertain to everyone."

Keating praised King for his courage in pursuing the cause of equal rights for all.

"A lot of times we tend to forget that Dr. King was a man," said Keating. "We have to look at him and remember not only the causes for which he died for, but the causes for which he lived for."

The Quincy Human Rights Commission recognized John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, for his work in aiding the homeless and needy.

Quincy Police Officer Kent Yee was also cited for his work as a community police officer.

John Cain Jr., the Martin Luther King chairperson, kicked off the event at 9:30 a.m. with a salute to the flag and the Pledge of Allegiance. Rev. Rachel Bickford conveyed a moment of silence and prayer.

The Germantown Neighborhood Center/Snug Harbor Brownie Troop 4116 delighted the crowd with various song-and-dance numbers dedicated to late the civil rights leader. The group performed renditions of songs such as "Amazing Grace" and "Let There Be Peace On Earth."

Fontbonne Academy's Select Chorus entertained the audience with various selections.

The two-hour event was attended by many state and local officials, including State Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Bruce Ayers, Police Chief William Falco, Councillor John Keenan and Ward Councillors Kevin Coughlin, Jay Davis, Alicia Gardner, Leo Kelly and Doug Gutro.

Neighborhood Housing Services 'Financial Fitness' Classes

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will sponsor a "Financial Fitness Club" class beginning Wednesday, Jan. 28.

Classes, which are also scheduled for Feb. 4, 11, 18 and March 3, will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

Cost is $25 per person.

The workshop is intended for consumers who have less than perfect credit, and feel they need to repair it before purchasing a home. Without good credit and sufficient income, many banks may not consider you a desirable customer for a mortgage, according to Neighborhood Housing Services.

The "Financial Fitness Club" is designed to help enhance money skills by correcting credit issues and maximizing income to access the best home mortgage.

Topics covered include:

- Developing savings
- Credit review/repair
- Banking services
- Mortgage process

Advance registration is required. To register or for more information, call (617) 770-2227 ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyer's Workshop Jan. 24, 31

Quincy Community Action Programs invites potential real estate buyers to a free two-session workshop to learn about buying a home.

The sessions will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturdays, Jan. 24 and 31, at Eastern Bank, Weymouth Landing.

Speakers are real estate professionals. Participants will receive a workbook with valuable reference material and a certificate, which is a prerequisite for favorable soft second mortgages, Mass Housing mortgages and downpayment closing cost assistance.

For more information and to register, contact Tristen Houlihan at 617-479-8181, ext. 172, or visit QCAP's Web site (www.qcap.org).

Neighborhood Housing Workshop Feb. 9 At Quincy City Hall

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer a free orientation session to assist first-time homebuyers with determining their level of mortgage readiness Monday, Feb. 9.

The meeting will be held from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Quincy City Hall, second floor conference room, 1305 Hancock St.

Topics include credit requirements, employment requirements, down payment requirements and affordable housing opportunities.

For more information or to register, call 617-770-2227, ext. 31 or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Set Tax Rate Before Elections, Raymondi Proposes

of an "extraordinary circumstance."

Raymondi said the measure also ensures that residents know their property tax rates prior to the November elections.

Last month, the council increased the city's tax classification to 175 percent, but residents are still receiving tax bills with an average increase of $550 over the previous year.

"Unless we modify the way we do business, residents will continue to have these problems trying to pay their bills. If we don't change where we are headed, we will keep going in the same direction," said Raymondi.

hours, he said.

Some visitors needed medical attention after being out in the elements too long, he said.

"We had a few people come in with purple hands and feet, we had to send them to the emergency room," he said. "We haven't lost anyone, but there's been a lot of referrals to the hospital."

Yazwinski said the community has responded to the challenge, with volunteers and contributions coming in faithfully.

"We have volunteers coming in every night, and we are very lucky for that," he said. "The South Shore community has been very good to us."

On a normal winter night, about 115 people stay at the shelter, he said.

All Night Eucharistic Vigil Feb. 6-7

The monthly all night Eucharistic vigil will be held at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Church, 26 Shed St., Germantown, Friday evening, Feb. 6, to Saturday morning, Feb. 7, ending at 5 a.m.

The vigils are for reparation and atonement to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Immaculate Heart of Mary. This apostolate is in its 31st year. The theme of this vigil is for the pro-life cause so that all human life is protected from moment of conception to natural death, for the intentions of the Holy Father, and for a Spiritual renewal of all clergy, religious and laity of this Archdiocese.

The vigil will begin with Mass of the Sacred Heart at 9 p.m. with Rev. Michael J. Kearney, pastor of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Church. Bring new baby clothes for the Quincy Babe project. Refreshments will be served throughout the night, and the vigil will end with Mass of the Immaculate Heart of Mary at 5 a.m. with Rev. Joseph K. Keville.

WINTER CAR CARE

In Cold Weather, Make Sure Your Car Is 'Healthy'

Are you and your family ready for the cold and flu season? How about your car?

"The same snowy, freezing, damp weather that brings on the sniffles for people lowers the resistance in cars," said Joel Burrows, the Car Doctor of Precision Tune Auto Care, in Leesburg, Va.

"Motorists are more likely to face car trouble in winter than any other time of year," said Burrows.

The American Automobile Association reports that of the 21 million emergency road service calls they receive, most are in late fall and winter. Of those calls, 30 percent involve problems that [illegible]

[illegible] suggests [illegible] with [illegible] is a signal [illegible] coming cold, rough [illegible] hard starts, stalling or decreased power are signs of pending car trouble. A thorough inspection and analysis by a trusted professional assures that your car is running at maximum efficiency and provides insight to potential problems. Pay special attention to replacing dirty filters for air, fuel and crankcase ventilation when necessary."

In addition to the basics, Burrows identifies critical areas that cause car owners the most headaches during winters. He advises giving special attention to:

• Oil. Oil changes should be more frequent in winter. As temperatures drop, oil thickens and provides less efficient lubrication. Use lighter oil (5W-30 or 10W-30 or try synthetic oil, which flows better in extremely cold weather, offering more protection at start-up. For specific recommendations for your vehicle, always refer to the manufacturer's service schedule.

• Antifreeze. "Permanent" does not mean forever. most antifreeze requires changing every 24 months. Antifreeze prevents ice from forming in the engine block plus inhibits rust and corrosion. Dirty antifreeze contains sediments that may plug radiator passages and cause overheating.

• Battery. At 32 degrees, a battery may have only 50 percent of its summer output but twice the need for starting power. Check connections to assure a tight fit. Remove corrosion from posts and cable connections. And have your auto care service provider perform a load test on your vehicle's battery.

• Hoses. Hoses should be inspected every year and changed every three. They wear from the inside out, so defects are not always visible. Squeeze to detect loss of elasticity. Look for cracked, bulging, brittle or limp hoses.

• Belts. Check overall condition and tension on the belt. Too tight a belt can ruin an alternator, too loose can result in a dead battery. Look for cracks in serpentine belts.

• Tires. When the temperature drops so does the air pressure in tires. Improper inflation causes premature wearing which, in turn, can cause an accident. Check tire pressure when the tires are cold, not after driving. Also check for cuts, abrasions and uneven wear.

• Brakes. Road contamination and moisture can affect your braking ability. This is especially true in winter due to salt and other materials used to battle snow and ice. A thorough brake inspection, particularly of friction materials, like pads and shoes, is just what the doctor ordered.

• Heater/defroster. The heater and defroster provide warmth and comfort as well as good visibility for safe driving. A screeching sound when you turn on the heater or a stiff control lever can mean trouble so have it checked out.

• Fuel. In cold weather, keep your gas tank full. Pour a bottle of fuel de-icer in the tank once a month to prevent moisture from freezing in the fuel line.

• Windshield. Invest in rubber-clad winter blades that can help prevent ice and snow build-up. Wipers work harder clearing snow, frost, ice and road salt.

• Exhaust system. Have a qualified technician check your exhaust system on a lift for leaks, soft exhaust pipes, small holes in trunk and floorboards, and cracked rubber hangers or broken clamps. Failure to replace faulty components could be deadly.

"Each car, just like each person, is a little different," said Burrows. "Learn about the needs of your own car. Everyone should begin a car preparedness inventory for each season by reading the owner's manual."

Strong Battery Boosts Winter Car Starts

One of the best ways to protect against winter car trouble is to be certain your battery is fully charged and in proper working condition, according to AAA Southern New England.

"When the temperature drops to near zero, the number of calls AAA receives from stranded motorists soars," said AAA Approved Auto Repair Manager Alfred Ruggiero. "The most common cause of these cold-weather breakdowns is a weak or dead battery."

AAA recommends motorists have batteries tested to closely monitor its condition, especially batteries more than two years old.

"Although batteries can carry warranties of four years or more, a warranty is no guarantee an older battery will continue to work in severe weather," Ruggiero said.

The most common sign of a weak battery is an unusual sound coming from the starter motor when the ignition key is turned, indicating difficulty in starting the engine.

If the vehicle is difficult to start, check that the battery connections are tight and no corrosion is present on the battery terminal. To remove corrosion, use an old toothbrush to clean the cable connectors and terminals with a solution of baking soda and water.

Next, inspect the tension of all drive belts. They should flex no more than one-half inch. If the battery's fluid level can be checked, make certain the fluid covers the battery plates.

If no problems are found and the vehicle is still difficult to start, drive to a service station or auto parts store to have the battery and charging system tested and, if necessary, replaced.

In addition to weak or dead batteries, starting problems can be caused by malfunctioning alternators or starter motors. A qualified repair facility can make an accurate diagnosis and repair.

If the vehicle will not start, use caution and follow instructions in the owner's manual when attempting a jump start. If unsure about the proper procedure, call AAA or another qualified professional for assistance.

Because of the difficult driving conditions often encountered in the winter, motorists should also be sure their lighting systems, brakes and windshield wipers are functioning properly.

Quincy Improves To 8-3 With Win Over Plymouth North

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Senior Bonnie Hirtle didn't set the career scoring record in the Quincy High School girls' basketball team's 50-34 win over Plymouth North Monday at home.

That day will come soon, however. And the Presidents hope she scores those 17 points, and more, in their next game — a showdown next Tuesday at Atlantic Coast League leader Whitman-Hanson.

The Panthers (6-5 overall) are undefeated in the league with a 5-0 mark, while the Presidents (8-3 overall) post a 4-2 mark in league play, having also lost to Nauset.

"It's going to be a big game," said head coach Jeff Bretsch, whose team dropped a 52-49 decision in the first meeting at home Jan. 5. "We've enjoyed some success already this year and there's a lot more to come from this team. We're just discovering how good we can be."

Ranked third in Eastern Massachusetts in scoring with 26.1 points per game, Hirtle scored only 11 against Plymouth North. The school record of 1,138 career points is held by Kerri Connolly (1992-1996).

Quincy struggled with its offense against the Blue Eagles. It took them three minutes before they scored their first points, a fast-break layup by senior Brittney Tobin. Tobin scored all eight of her points in the first half.

"She was our offense at the beginning of the game," Bretsch said. "She knocked down some big shots. She's a lot more confident now."

Although the Presidents were out of rhythm, Bretsch was pleased with the performance on defense. "We did a great job defensively," he said. "We didn't allow a lot of second shots. Our shots weren't falling for us, but the effort was there."

Quincy held a 22-14 lead at halftime. In the second half, junior center Alysia DiMuzio scored three quick baskets and Hirtle nailed a 3-pointer to put Quincy in front comfortably with a 31-16 lead. DiMuzio dominated the paint, scoring 10 of her team-high 13 points after the break.

Last Thursday, Quincy cruised to a 61-41 win at Plymouth North as Hirtle scored 22 points, DiMuzio 17 and Tobin eight to lead the attack.

Last Tuesday, the Presidents pulled out a 62-59 triumph at Sandwich. Hirtle poured in 32 points and DiMuzio tallied 19 points and 17 rebounds.

Raiders Dumped By Duxbury, 5-2

ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

Apparently the offense and defensive improvements made last week by the North Quincy High School hockey team were lost over the weekend.

On Monday afternoon, the Red Raiders took a step back with a 5-2 loss against a strong Duxbury squad (9-2) at Quincy Youth Arena.

Last week, North Quincy shored up its defense in a 1-1 tie with Barnstable and created some offense in a 4-1 victory over Plymouth South. So Monday's result was disappointing.

"I told the team that I hope they learn from this," said head coach Bob Doyle. "I told them we've had success in the past slowly getting better as the season goes on and we can't afford to take any nights off."

North Quincy (3-6-1) hosted Marshfield yesterday (Wednesday) and will travel to Silver Lake Saturday afternoon at 3:10 p.m. Next Wednesday, it faces off against city rival Quincy for the second time this season.

Against Duxbury, the Red Raiders skated sluggish for the first 30 minutes, falling behind 3-0 after two periods.

At 7:05 of the first, junior Alec Siefert netted a short-handed goal with an assist from junior Mike Kelly. Kelly extended to the lead to 2-0 when he converted a feed from senior Brook Romano at 11:13.

In the middle frame, Romano set up a break for Kelly, who trickled a shot past the North Quincy keeper at 4:50 for a power-play goal and a 3-0 advantage.

"We didn't have any spark," Doyle said. "We were flat for the first two periods. And penalties took us out of our rhythm. We weren't playing desperation hockey that we need to have right now."

The Red Raiders regrouped in the final frame. They almost scored nearly a minute in when junior tri-captain Paul Graham shot just wide of the net and two minutes later Matt Haskins clanked a shot off the crossbar.

North Quincy finally put a puck in the cage with an unassisted short-handed strike by Graham at 6:59. Graham skated up the left side, beat the lone defender towards the middle and roofed a shot top right corner past junior goalie Kevin Gould.

Duxbury, though, sealed the win with senior Mike Maguire and junior Bill Carroll potting goals less than a minute apart.

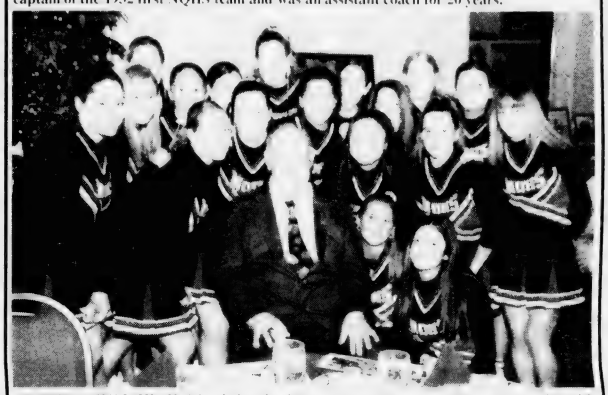
"Duxbury is a real strong team," Doyle said. "We beat them twice last year but obviously we had a real strong lineup. They have three solid lines and take pride in their team speed and great forechecking. The better team won but I was expecting more of a fight from us."



Against Plymouth South last Saturday, North Quincy's offense heated up with 42 shots (20 in the first period) and three power-play tallies.

Sophomore Chris Tufo deposited two goals and junior Pat Casper and Donovan each had a goal and an assist. Joe Norris and Josh McKeon notched assists and senior goalie Jon O'Driscoll recorded 21 saves.

A Tribute To Pete Zoia

FOOTBALL RIVALRY WAS put aside as NQHS legend Pete Zoia, "Mr. North Quincy," was honored at a recent dinner sponsored by the Quincy High School 50's Alumni Benefit Fund Committee at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. According to studies from Japan and Europe, only seat belts surpass electronic stability control (ESC) in safeguarding drivers and passengers. # Squirt B's Win Three Straight

The Quincy Squirt B travel hockey team started off the second half of the Greater Boston League season with a 7-2 loss to Brookline Squirt 2.

Quincy, though, rebounded with three straight wins over Parkway (5-0), Dedham (10-30 and Wellesley (9-0). It also defeated Canton, 8-0, in the first game of the Tier 3 State Playdowns.

Quincy will be playing in the Canadian Cup Tournament in Montreal Feb. 13-16 and the Cranberry Tournament in Pembroke Feb. 17-20.

Justin Keenan and Brian Grasselli are the two standout goalies. The strong defensive line consists of Robert Hudson, Rudy Tryon, Paul Mulvey, Aaron Marcel, Connor Flynn and Timmy Marks.

The powerful offensive lines include Kevin White, David O'Connell, Alex MacIsaac, Patrick Verhault, Andrew Rogantino, Michael Nelson, Myles Riddell, Joe Barton and Jimmy Vialpando.

Coaches Mike Wood, Timmy Wood, Chris Bigelow and Steve Verhault said they are proud of the team's accomplishments.

Mite A Travel Team Improving

Despite opening the season with a win against Wellesley, the Quincy Mite A travel hockey team (2-7) has struggled against quality Greater Boston League opponents.

This year's team is young and inexperienced but it has improved over the last two months. Forwards Joe Ingemi, Chris Andrews, Colin Donnelly, Ryan Martin, Mark DioGuardi-Leivi, Jacquelyn Eeley and Patrick Freeman have led the way with scoring and quality offensive play.

Defensemen Greg McKinnon and Patrick Buell have been solid at the blue line and have contributed to the score sheet as well. In the goaltender-by-committee department, Colin Shea, Donnelly and Matt Capobianco have taken turns manning the cage and performing admirably.

Ryan Mock, Steve Ross, Rob Harnais, Teddy Kelly and Jake Kelleher will also look to contribute to more victories this new year.

Quincy won its last game before the holiday break with a 4-3 triumph against Dedham. Ingemi notched two goals and Donnelly and DioGuardi-Leivi scored one apiece. Shea was steady between the pipes.

Old Colony League Honors 5 North Quincy Girls' Soccer Players

Five North Quincy High School girls' soccer players were honored by the Old Colony League this past season.

Senior midfielder Jenn Ryan and senior defender Sarah Gregory were named first-team all-stars. Ryan was also named to the Eastern Massachusetts all-star team.

Senior midfielder Ashley Ridge and senior forward Katy Faherty were honorable mentions and senior Breanne Therrien received the sportsmanship award.

Tips To Help Avoid The Common Cold

Workplace May Increase Risk Of Catching Cold

(NU) — It is essential to keep healthy and productive in the workplace, but avoiding illness can be difficult.

The common cold accounts for more than 58 million sick days taken each year by employees and can lead to serious secondary illnesses, such as upper respiratory infection and pneumonia. You don't want to be the person who starts the epidemic in your office.

Maximization of office space has led to more people in smaller spaces and less fresh air. This close quarter environment makes offices ideal places for the transmission of respiratory illnesses, such as the common cold. Couple that with cramped commuter favorites, such as carpools, subways and buses, and the typical workday is ideal for the transmission of the cold virus.

Unfortunately, no vaccines and no surefire solutions are available. You can take every precaution imaginable and still get a cold. However, you can find ways to decrease your chances of getting a cold.

Here are some tips to help you as you try to avoid the common cold, courtesy of Dr. Mark Roberts, an occupational medicine specialist and former medical director for several Fortune 500 companies:

• Washing your hands. Washing your hands is the single most effective way to keep from catching a cold or spreading one to someone else. Both colds and the flu can be passed via inanimate objects, such as doorknobs and telephones. If you come in contact with a contaminated surface and then touch your nose, mouth or eyes, the virus can enter your body.

• Cover your mouth and nose when you cough or sneeze. Giving germs a powerful launching pad into the air makes it easier for them to spread and infect. Using your handkerchief or tissue as a barrier will keep germs contained.

• Practice healthy habits. Eating a balanced diet, getting enough sleep and exercising can help you maintain a strong immune system to keep illness at bay.

• Avoid sharing with people who have colds. Sharing food, drinks, utensils, dishes or cups with anyone who has a cold will greatly increase your chances of getting a virus.

If despite these efforts you still come down with a cold, consider taking Cold-Eeze, which contains zinc gluconate glycine, proven in several clinical studies, including one published last year in the American Journal of Therapeutics, to reduce the duration of a cold by almost half. Taking products such as these will help you get better faster so you can return to your normal routine.

Weight Loss Fads Can Leave Dieters Feeling Discouraged

(NU) — We have all seen those ads promising that a certain product will make your legs firmer, your abs more defined or your buns as hard as a rock. Do they really do all those things they promise?

As many have learned, buying these products does not usually mean you will get the body you want. Why? If you are like most people, you will use a product a few times and then forget about it. Some people use their new equipment for six months to a year and stop the routine at the slightest sign of improvement or minimum distraction. Consequently, trendy workout equipment usually ends up collecting dust in people's basements.

While exercise is important for weight loss success, it is not necessary to buy costly equipment that targets one area of the body. Health experts believe that the best way to lose weight in one area of your body is simply to lose weight in general. That means eating healthy foods that are low in fat and calories. But for some, that is not enough.

Many people rely on supplements to give them the extra help they need to lose stubborn pounds. Now, Eurobotanicals Inc. says it has come up with a way to help people lose weight and avoid the hassles of expensive equipment and workout tricks.

Human growth hormone replacement therapy has been proven to help men and women lose weight and recontour their bodies by stimulating the pituitary gland with natural supplements.

The goal of Eurobotanicals was to develop a nutritional supplement product that would work in much the same way as growth hormone releasers — but naturally. The result is Sleep-N-Slim. Eurobotanicals believes that Sleep-N-Slim gives you the benefits of human growth hormone replacement therapy without the high cost.

When taken before bed on an empty stomach, three to four hours after eating, the ingredients in Sleep-N-Slim can work while you are sleeping to help you lose fat, build lean muscle, improve skin elasticity, strengthen the immune system and lower blood pressure, according to Eurobotanicals.

Sleep-N-Slim was developed using a complex of amino acids, natural vitamin C, collagen, pure honey and other ingredients to work with the body naturally.

THE RISK OF INFECTION

While there have already been studies that show a link between gum disease and a higher risk of heart disease and stroke, there is new research to show that people with gum disease are twice as likely to have the precancerous abnormalities in their mouths. Moreover, the study also indicated that people with gum disease have more than a four-fold risk of developing mouth cancer. These findings add to the mounting evidence that people with gum disease should be concerned with more than just chronic bacterial gum infection and the potential for tooth loss. The researchers found that people with periodontal disease have a 1.74-fold increased risk of precancerous mouth lesions and a 4.23 times greater risk of mouth cancer.

Gum disease is a preventible condition. When was the last time you had a dental check up? We invite you to call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. ## Faith Lutheran Church Annual Meeting Sunday

The Rev. James L. Kimmell of Faith Lutheran Church, 201 Granite St., Quincy, announces the annual meeting for the congregation will be held immediately following the regular 10 a.m. service Sunday, Jan. 25.

The meeting will include a review of committee reports, budget approval, and election of officers.

The L.I.F.E. group (church youth) will make sub sandwiches for this occasion (prior orders preferred). Subs will be made available for Super Bowl Sunday on request.

The Church Council will assist with refreshments.

Prior to the meeting, early morning services will be held at 8:15 a.m. and Sunday School at 9 a.m.

Interfaith Social Services Benefit Walk April 25

The 30th annual South Shore Walk to benefit Interfaith Social Services (ISS) will be held Sunday, April 25.

The 6.2-mile walk will help raise funds for social services provided by ISS in South Shore towns including a food pantry, clothing program, financial assistance and counseling program. The agency's programs assist people in Quincy, Cohasset, Braintree, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

The walk begins and ends at Old South Union Church on Columbian St. in South Weymouth.

Registration starts at 12:30 p.m. and the walk kicks off at 1 p.m.

The walk is essential in helping ISS meet its financial goals. Money raised over the years through the walk has helped ISS provide much needed services throughout the South Shore.

For more information regarding the annual walk, contact the ISS office at 617-773-6203.

Bethany Congregational

The Rev. Gary Smothers, Associate Pastor, will conduct the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center.

His sermon title is "God Helps the Brave." He will also have a moment with the children of the church school before they go to their classes.

Barbara MacFarlane will serve as greeter.

Scripture reader will be William Cosgrove.

The Chancel Choir will sing under the direction of Tom Boyer, organist and choir director.

Light refreshments will be available during the Fellowship Hour following the worship service. It will be hosted by Dan and Maureen Fish.

Childcare will be provided for infants and toddlers.

As a feature of Bethany's outreach, a worship service with Holy Communion will be held at the Eventide Home on Tuesday, Jan. 27 at 10:30 a.m.

The second annual Souper Bowl Sunday will be held Feb. 1 just after the morning worship service. Price of admission will be on or more non-perishable food items for the Interfaith Social Services.

St. Mary School Open House

St. Mary School, 121 Crescent St., West Quincy, will host an open house Jan. 25 from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

This is an opportunity to preview the school, consult with the faculty about curriculum and pre-register your child for the 2004-2005 school year.

St. Mary School is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all have heard the saying: "Today is the first day of the rest of your life." As long as we have life, each and every one of us must live within the confines of time – day-by-day. It is a precious possession. We can use it or we can waste it. At this very minute a life is being changed somewhere by someone or something, for better or for worse. A hope is being born, a dream being shattered. Pleas are being heard, accepted and rejected. Things happen every day.

This very minute, a part of today, will soon be gone. It can never be replaced. It can be used to advantage to bring happiness or it can be shunned aside to cause regret and faded hopes in the tomorrows to come. Yesterday is gone. There may or may not be a tomorrow. But we do have TODAY. A decision to write a letter, make a phone call, pay a visit, or whatever – can mean a lot to you and others on this – The first day of the rest of your life.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Presidential Medal Of Freedom

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you're getting kudos and other positive reactions to your suggestions, don't let the cheers drown out some valid criticisms. Better to deal with them now than later.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Following your keen Bovine intuition pays off, as you not only reassess the suggestions some people are putting in front of you, but also their agendas for doing so.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You continue on a high-enthusiasm cycle as that new project you've assumed takes shape. You're also buoyed by the anticipation of receiving some good news about a personal matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your eagerness to immerse yourself in your new assignment is understandable. But be careful that you don't forget to take care of that pressing personal situation as well.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to learn a new skill that could give a clever Cat an edge in the upcoming competition for workplace opportunities. Enjoy the arts this weekend with someone special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You could risk creating an impasse if you insist on expecting more from others than they're prepared to give. Showing flexibility in what you'll accept could prevent a stalemate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you can weigh all factors of a dispute to find an agreeable solution for others, you might need the skilled input of someone you trust to help you deal with an ongoing situation of your own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The good news is that your brief period of self-doubt turns into a positive "I can do anything" attitude. The better news is that you'll soon be able to prove it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time for Sagittarians to start making travel plans while you can still select from a wide menu of choices and deals, and not be forced to settle for leftovers.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Like your zodiacal sign, the sure-footed Goat, you won't allow obstacles in your path to keep you from reaching your goal. Don't be surprised by who asks to go along with you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Let your head dominate your heart as you consider the risks that might be involved in agreeing to be a friend's co-signer or otherwise act as his or her backup in a financial matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Prioritize: Resolve to close the door and let your voicemail take your phone calls while you finish up a task before the end-of-week deadline. Then go out and enjoy a fun-filled weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your capacity for care and compassion helps to bring comfort to others.

$7 Million Overhaul

Wollaston Beach Project Awaits State Funds

The $7 million Wollaston Beach facelift cannot begin until the state appropriates the money and puts the work out to bid.

Although the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers issued an environmental permit for the beach restoration last week, there has been no word from the state as to when the work can begin, according to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"We don't have a commitment right now, one way or the other," said Morrissey. "You cannot move ahead on the project until it goes out to bid."

Morrissey said Gov. Mitt Romney and the Secretary of Environmental Affairs must appropriate the money so the state can award a contract for the work to begin. The project is expected to take between 18 months and two years to complete, officials said.

The project calls for replacing sand on two sections of the beach, installing traffic lights and widening the sidewalks on the beach side of Quincy Shore Drive. Water fountains, shade covers and foot showers will be installed.

A drainage system along the beach will have approximately 142 new catch basins. Parking along the beach will be reconfigured.

Rep. Bruce Ayers said his office is pressuring state officials to move the project forward.

"These necessary improvements will make Wollaston Beach a cleaner, safer beach for all the residents of Quincy and surrounding towns," said Ayers. "My office will continue to let Gov. Romney know this issue is paramount to the City of Quincy and its residents."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he will work with the state delegation to facilitate the project.

"Everything that I've heard to date suggests that the project is on track," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro. "But the light at the end of the tunnel doesn't really shine unless the contract is awarded."

Zoning Appeals Board Rejects Dunkin' Donuts On Newport Ave.

The Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals last week unanimously rejected a petition for a special permit to convert the Zoots Cleaners on Newport Ave. to a Dunkin' Donuts Bakery Restaurant.

Converting Zoots to a Dunkin' Donuts would have caused many public safety issues, said Coughlin.

"I had tremendous concerns for the impact at this location where a fatal accident occurred less than two years ago," said Coughlin. "There are throngs of pedestrians who cross at this heavily traveled roadway and children, students were travel to area schools. MBTA passengers for the North Quincy T, customers of the Super Stop & Shop and other area stores."

Coughlin said he was pleased with the board's decision.

"As one constituent noted, this was about dollars and sense, dollars for the applicant, but no sense for the community," he said.

The proposed location served as a bank, under various names, in the 1950s and 1960s prior to its conversion to a dry cleaners.

Quincy 2000 Plans Meetings With Wollaston, West Quincy Businesses

Quincy 2000, Quincy's public/private economic development organization, will be holding meetings to which local businesses in Wollaston and West Quincy are urged to attend.

The purpose of the meetings, said Executive Director Dean Rizzo, is to offer businesses in those two areas a mechanism for establishing local advocacy and representation in partnership with Quincy 2000 to strengthen the economic viability and vitality of their respective business districts.

The Wollaston meeting will be held Tuesday, Jan. 27, from 8 to 9 a.m. at Wollaston Public Library, located at 41 Beale St. The West Quincy meeting will be Thursday, Jan. 29, from 8 to 9 a.m. at the Common Market Restaurant, 97 Willard St.

Quincy 2000 will provide administrative support to maintain the partnership, and assist in the implementation of the goals and objectives the local businesses establish to strengthen and enhance their business environment.

Quincy 2000 encourages all business owners, employees and interested individuals to attend the meeting to learn how easy it is to participate in the growth and prosperity of your business district.

Similar meetings will be held in North Quincy Tuesday, Feb. 3, at Best Western Adams Inn and Thursday, Nov. 5, at the Marina Bay Skilled Nursing & Rehabilitation Center.

For more information contact Quincy 2000 at 617-847-1454.

Those planning to attend either the Wollaston or West Quincy meetings are asked to call 617-984-5717, ext. 2.

Ward 5 Democrats To Elect Delegates Jan. 24

The Ward 5 Democratic City Committee on Saturday, Jan. [illegible] at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School Media Center, 75 Lanark St. to elect [illegible] delegates and six alternates.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 5. Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, sexual orientation or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

The Democratic State Convention will be held Saturday, May 8, at the Mullins Center at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

For more information contact the Democratic State Committee at 617-472-0637.

Investigator Says Tech Program Head Falsified Records

Quincy College Vows Corrective Measures

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The director of Quincy College's Surgical Technology program falsified records and knowingly allowed students to graduate without proper training, an investigator has concluded.

George Burke, hired by the college to investigate allegations surrounding the matter, said Faith Tucker, head of the college's Surgical Technology Program, falsified student records, forged the signatures of [illegible] students who actually completed the program without proper training.

Tucker was placed on paid administrative leave last month after two students from Plymouth, Dawn Spencer and Pamela St. Clair, claimed they did not receive required operating room training at Quincy Medical Center last year.

"In regards to Faith Tucker, director of the Surgical Technology Program, I hold her solely liable for everything that has transpired," Burke wrote in his final report.

Burke, a former Norfolk County District Attorney and city councillor, submitted his final report to the state Board of Higher Education, which oversees the one year certificate program.

Cites Manpower Shortgage

Engine 4's Fate Uncertain, Says Union President

The fate of Engine 4 in Wollaston is uncertain due to a lack of manpower for the coming fiscal year, according to the president of the Quincy Fire Fighters union.

Tom Bowes, president of the Quincy Fire Fighters Association Local 792, said the department would be left shorthanded and unable to staff each piece of apparatus beginning in July unless an additional 22 firefighters are hired.

Bowes said he was told by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell that Engine 4 would come out of service unless more firefighters are hired or there is an additional appropriation to cover overtime.

"Last week, the union was told by Chief O'Connell that Rescue 1 would continue to be used sporadically and Engine 4 would come out of service permanently," said Bowes.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, whose ward the engine resides, said he is receiving the same signals as Bowes.

"The information that I have been provided corroborates the information from the union," said Coughlin. "It leads me to believe that we will be down one full company of men by July 1, with the result being a piece of equipment will be taken out of service. All indications are the piece in jeopardy is Engine 4."

Calls placed to O'Connell were not returned.

Mayor William Phelan declined to comment.

Although the department hired additional firefighters last year, it was not enough to cover a gap leftover from retirements, Bowes said.

He said the department is currently undermanned by seven positions. An additional three firefighters are

Quincy Liquor Stores Can Now Sell On Sundays

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Starting Sunday, you will be able to run to the package store and buy a six-pack of beer right on time for the Super Bowl.

The hours on Sundays will be from noon to 11 p.m. The only days excluded from the law are Memorial Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day. Christmas Day falls on a Sunday.

On Tuesday, under Chapter 141, the License Board voted 4-1 to offer package stores in Quincy a license to sell liquor on Sundays. The motion was made by Fire Chief Paul O'Connell and seconded by Health Commissioner Drew Scheele.

Voting against the motion was Walter White, director of inspectional services. After the meeting, I asked White why he opposed the new law and he answered with one word: "nostalgia." then added, "we are a 24 " society -and commented that we once had Blue Laws that prevented stores from opening on Sundays and only certain trucks were allowed on the highways.

[illegible] Joseph Shea [illegible] "all out push" [illegible] service-anyone who wants to open on Sundays will be made this week," in time for the Super Bowl Sunday.

Shea said it will be known as a "stand alone" license. A one time application fee will be $25. Those holding all alcohol license fee is $300 and beer and wine licensees will pay $[illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

QTA Endorses Raymondi Plan To Set Tax Rate Earlier

DAN RAYMONDI

Cousin noted that setting the tax rate by Sept. 15 has three advantages.

"Right now," Cousin said, "Boston Edison and other companies that have filed petitions before the Department of Telecommunications and Energy to increase their rates are unable to do so because the tax rate is not set. Cities and towns also are unable to borrow money short-term right now, so 8 to 16 percent is completely unreasonable."

Raymondi's resolution also would require that Quincy's property tax rate be set by Sept. 15.

"We would have pushed for something like this ourselves if Dan hadn't introduced it," Cousin said in announcing the endorsement. "We would actually like to see the tax rate set by July 1, but Sept. 15 is a lot better than December."

Cousin also endorsed a home rule petition by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin to allow cities and towns to set the interest rates on property tax deferrals.

"Right now," Cousin said, "Boston Edison and other companies that have filed petitions before the Department of Telecommunications and Energy to increase their rates are unable to do so because the tax rate is not set. Cities and towns also are unable to borrow money short-term right now, so 8 to 16 percent is completely unreasonable."

Raymondi's resolution also would require that Quincy's property tax rate be set by Sept. 15.

"We have heard so many stories about flaws in the assessment and abatement processes that we are convinced Fiscal Year 2005 property assessments also deserved the QTA's endorsement.

"We have heard so many stories about flaws in the assessment and abatement processes that we are convinced Fiscal Year 2005 property assessments also deserved the QTA's endorsement.

"These are all things we would have requested ourselves, had Dan and Kevin not beaten us to it," Cousin said. "They're to be congratulated."

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a request of Pizza Hut of America, Inc., Dallas Tx, doing business as Pizza Hut, 627 Washington St. for change of corporate officers. Michelle Mirabile will remain as manager.

•Granted a common victualer license to Abderrahim Attab and Frederica Foskilos doing business as Washington Street Pizza, 379 Washington St. Hours will be from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. They plan to serve coffee and muffins early in the day.

•Granted a one day license to the Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St. for the eighth annual indoor yard sale Feb. 28 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave. (storm date is March 6).

•Granted a permit to the Lions Club of Quincy to hold the seventh annual Run/Walk for Sight Saturday, April 24 at Pageant Field. Children will run at 10:30 inside the field and adults will begin theirs at 11 a.m. A raffle will be held and a buffet from Outback Steak House will follow. The event will benefit eye research, eye exams, glass and minor surgery. Jennifer Logue is chairman.

•Granted a request of Kao Li a permit to hold the 16th Annual Lunar New Year Festival, Sunday, Feb. 1 from noon to 5 p.m. at North Quincy High School, to benefit the Quincy Asian Resources.

Ordinance Committee Approves

At-Large Vacancies Filled By Council In First Year

The city council's ordinance committee Monday night voted to allow the council to appoint a successor for an At-large seat if it becomes vacant during the first year of a term.

On a 5-3 vote, the committee approved Council President Frank McCauley's home rule petition allowing the council to fill a seat that is vacated in the first year of a term. If passed by the full council and signed by the mayor, the proposal would go to the Legislature for approval.

The council already fills vacant At-large seats during the second year of a term.

The city council is expected to vote on the matter this Monday night.

McCauley said special elections are too costly. City Clerk Joseph Shea estimated the costs to be about $60,000.

"It makes a little sense, particularly with what is going on with the city's finances," said McCauley.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro opposed the change, saying the matter should be left in the hands of voters.

"Whatever the elections cost I think it is money well spent," said Raymondi.

The proposal would not affect vacancies for Ward councillors, which are appointed in the second year, but elected in the first year of a vacancy.

Citizens Legislative Seminar To Be Held In March

State Senator Michael Morrissey announces the 56th Session of the Citizens' Legislative Seminar will be held in March.

The Citizens' Legislative Seminar was established in 1976 through a joint effort of the Massachusetts State Senate and the University of Massachusetts. This six-week program is designed to familiarize citizens first-hand with the Legislature and the lawmaking process.

Participants will listen to presentations from Senators and Representatives on the law-making process.

The seminars are scheduled for six consecutive Wednesdays from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. beginning Wednesday, March 24.

Space is limited. Anyone interested in attending the seminar should contact Alicia Gardner in Morrissey's office at 617-722-1494.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 29, 1845, Edgar Allan Poe's famous poem "The Raven," which begins "Once upon a midnight dreary, . . ." is published in the New York Evening Mirror.

• On Feb. 1, 1893, Thomas Alva Edison completes the first movie studio, on his property in West Orange, N.J. The studio, a frame cabin covered with black roofing paper, was built on a pivot so it could be turned to face the sun throughout the day.

• On Jan. 31, 1949, "These Are My Children," the first daytime soap opera, debuts on NBC. The show, only 15 minutes long, aired weekdays at 5 p.m.

• On Jan. 27, 1967, a launch pad fire kills astronauts Virgil "Gus" Grissom, Edward H. White II and Roger B. Chafee during Apollo program tests in Cape Canaveral, Fla. An investigation indicated that a faulty electrical wire inside the Apollo 1 command module was the probable cause of the fire.

• On Jan. 26, 1972, renowned gospel singer Mahalia Jackson, who sang at President John F. Kennedy's inauguration and at the funeral of Martin Luther King Jr., dies at age 61.

• On Jan. 30, 1972, in Londonderry, Northern Ireland, 13 unarmed civil-rights demonstrators are shot dead by British Army paratroopers in an event that becomes known as "Bloody Sunday." The protesters, all Northern Catholics, were marching in protest of the British policy of internment of suspected Irish nationalists.

• On Jan. 28, 1986, the space shuttle Challenger explodes after lifting off from Cape Canaveral, Fla. As a result of the explosion, NASA did not send astronauts into space for more than two years as it redesigned a number of features of the space shuttle.

A Road Race For Paul

Friends are busy planning The Paul Harold Memorial Road Race to help keep his civic causes alive.

And are inviting others to join them and seeking sponsors to make the event a big success to continue some of the good things Paul did in a life cut short by cancer.

HAROLD

The 3.5-mile road race and a 1.5-mile walk will be held Sunday, May 2 in conjunction with the dedication of the Quincy Center Concourse bridge in his name.

The runners and walkers will be the first over "The Paul D. Harold Memorial Bridge" after the 11 a.m. dedication ceremony.

Proceeds from the race and walk will go the "Paul D. Harold Memorial Fund" which has been established to carry into the future "the good works, civic support and generosity which characterized Paul's life."

He was a city councillor, state senator and Norfolk County register of deeds in a public service career spanning 27 years. He died in August of 2002 at only 53.

To his many staunch and loyal followers, he was both "the voice and champion of the people."

Among the causes Paul undertook during his life and which friends hope to continue in his name were:

Quincy and North Quincy High School scholarships, book awards to high school graduates planning to study American government or to go into public service, sponsorship of Quincy youth sports teams and donations to promote the teaching of the American democratic system in other countries.

The road race is an appropriate event in Paul's memory seeing he ran in many of them for other worthy causes and completed the Boston Marathon a dozen or more times.

The 3.5-mile route for the May 2 runners has an appropriate touch: it will take them by City Hall and the Adams Mansion, one symbolic of his political career and the other of his passion for Quincy's rich history.

Sponsors are being sought to help defray the cost of the race and to increase the size of the memorial fund.

Applications for the road race will be available in early March. But participants can also register the day of the event at the starting line on the concourse bridge.

The next meeting of the committee will be held Tuesday, Feb. 3. Anyone wishing to take part or to become a sponsor is asked the call Mike Linnane, Paul's long-time campaign coordinator, at 617-770-0166.

Working with Linnane in the planning of the road race are:

Ann Knafelz, Paul's secretary of 14 years while he was state senator; Robert Flavell and now Norwell Town Manager James Boudreau, his senate aides; Dana Ahern, Jay MacRitchie, Dave McGillvray, Boston Marathon race director; Janet Coughlin, aide to Senator Michael Morrissey; Paul Bregoli and Russell DuPuis, Sr.

Dave Murphy of Mayor William Phelan's office is helping them to plan the road race and also the dedication ceremony program.

MIKE LINNANE says Paul would have been right in the thick of this year's race for the Democratic nomination for President.

LINNANE

"He would have been out to Iowa and up in New Hampshire campaigning for John Kerry," Linnane says. "And helping to coordinate the Massachusetts campaign."

Kerry and Paul were long-time friends.

KERRY

"Paul was the first state senator to endorse Kerry for the U.S. Senate in 1986," Linnane recalls.

Kerry was already out raising money in 2002 for this year's Presidential bid when he heard of Paul's terminal illness.

Three days before Paul died, Kerry called Paul at his home to tell him how sorry he was to hear about his illness. And they chatted about the old days.

"Guess who called me this morning," Paul said to Linnane that afternoon.

"Paul was humbled by the call," says Linnane. "It really boosted his spirits."

This year's Presidential campaign brought back a fond memory of another campaign for Linnane.

He and Paul were in New Hampshire supporting Edward Kennedy in the latter's unsuccessful bid to wrest the Democratic nomination away from President Jimmy Carter in 1980.

"There was a lot of activity and reporters and television people everywhere," Linnane recalls.

And he remembers the night he and Paul wound up sitting at a hotel bar with Walter Cronkite.

Paul told Cronkite he was a Martha's Vineyard neighbor. He had just bought a summer place there not far from the one Cronkite had long had.

"Those were good old days," Linnane says wistfully, thinking how Paul would have loved this Presidential election year.

QEN Hosts Meeting Feb. 3 On New High School

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will host a panel discussion on the economic, environmental and education impacts of building new schools versus restoring existing structures, on Tuesday, Feb. 3 at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library's main conference room.

QEN has invited City Solicitor Monica Conyngham and School Committee Vice Chairman Mike McFarland to attend.

Panelists will discuss the city's plan if the state Department of Environmental Protection denies the permit to build on the Faxon Field site.

QEN spokesperson Steve Perdios will moderate the discussion.

For more information contact Gail MacDonald at 617-773-5120.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 POSTCARD view of some of the many granite quarries that once dominated the landscape and hills of West Quincy. For almost 150 years, tons upon tons of Quincy granite were shipped from here to around America and beyond. This scene doesn't show the typical deep quarry holes that pocketed the area but it is an overview of the eastern side of Quarry Street looking north. Hardwick Quarry is in the foreground and Sahlstens Quarry is in the distance marked by the derrick. Falconer Quarry was to the right just out of view of the picture. Taken for taxes, or otherwise, after they stopped operations, most of these quarries were eventually used as dumps or landfills by the city. The large outcropping of granite in the right center still exists across the street from the Sons of Italy Hall on Quarry St. But the construction of the High Point apartment complex along here has dramatically changed this terrain. From the Collection of Tom Galvin

Captured Enemy Is No Enemy Any Longer

President G. W. Bush did not learn a lesson from his father's political experience. When President George H. W. Bush waged a war against his former ally, Saddam Hussein, the American people threw him out of office.

I am shocked and surprised, more than ever before in my life, how the President of the United States, as well as the Democratic and the Republican dignitaries, as well as Chirac and Schroeder reacted with jubilation at the news of the capture of Saddam Hussein.

I have to confess that my Weltanshauung — the view of the world — is colored by my Serbian view of the world, which comes from the Teaching of the Christian Greek Orthodox Church.

In World War I, my father lost his father and two brothers defending their country from the Germans. In World War II, the Germans came again and one German unit was stationed, for a month, in our village (Bacina, Serbia). Half a dozen of the German soldiers were assigned to our home. My grandmother, Saveta, an illiterate Serbian woman, who lost in World War I her husband and two sons against the Germans, gave orders to her two daughters-in-law to treat the Germans as guests, because some of them will fall in the war and never see their mothers again.

Her son, my uncle Dushan Jovanovic, who served in World War II 10 years in the Serbian military, told his son Vlastimir, who at the end of World War II was drafted to fight the Germans: "My son, please, remember one thing as you serve your country in the military that captured enemy is no enemy any longer!"

Osama bin Laden on 9/11 killed 3,000 totally innocent Americans. In berserk reaction, the American troops in Iraq killed three times as many innocent Iraqis. How much I would wish that my illiterate grandmother Saveta and her peasant son Dushan, who had four years of schooling, could be President Bush's war advisors.

Mayor Escapes Helicopter Crash

This Week
1956
48 Years Ago

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and helicopter pilot Lt. Cmdr. Gerald Achin narrowly escaped a crash when their aircraft hit an air pocket while taking off from the roof of the new Supreme Market in Parkingway.

They had just delivered the first load of milk from Charlestown to the store but the television cameras had missed the original landing so they were asked to take off and land again.

The helicopter was a few feet off the roof when it dropped down suddenly, missing wires and trees by a few feet near the Granite St. entrance and narrowly missing the Granite Trust Building en route up.

"For a few minutes I thought we were goners," said Della Chiesa. "The pilot's face was white and mine was probably whiter. I don't know how we escaped. That pilot sure knows his business."

$52 MILLION CONTRACT

The U.S. Navy awarded a $52,429,000 contract to the Fore River Shipyard for construction of three frigates but General Manager Sam Wakeman said it will not mean an increase in the 2,500-man work force.

However, he added, there will be no further layoffs from the drafting room staff, which had lost some 100 jobs in the past four months, since it will take a year to prepare drawings and working plans.

PROM SITE QUESTIONED

The School Committee took under advisement a request by the senior class at Quincy High School to hold its prom at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate instead of the Quincy Masonic Temple. "The general atmosphere in the temple isn't ideal for an informal affair of 400 boys and girls of high school age," said Carl Scrivener, spokesman for the Prom Committee.

"We have hesitated to see the prom held outside Quincy at a distance of 12 miles," said School Supt. Gr. Paul Gossard.

NO END TO SERVICE

Edmund J. More, general counsel for the New Haven Railroad, said there are no plans to discontinue passenger service on the Old Colony Division despite $3.8 million in losses since 1947.

QUINCY-ISMS

William A. O'Connell, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, fired off a letter protesting a reference to Quincy as "dingy and unfashionable" in Sports Illustrated magazine. . . Mrs. Elizabeth Chella was elected president of the Bethany Players at Bethany Congregational Church. . . Asst. Director Bernadette Boutin said conditions had improved so much at City Hospital that patients were no longer bedded down in the corridors. . . Coffee was 69 cents a pound at Kennedy's, 1382 Hancock St. . . . Some 1,200 students remained in their classrooms as police and firefighters, acting on a telephone tip, searched Quincy High School for a bomb. . . Members of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church voted not to accept the resignation of the Rev. Peter A. Corea after an agreement was reached on the pastor-educational plans. . . The School Committee criticized City Manager Donald H. Blatt for his delay in seeking an appropriation from the City Council for a new junior high school in North Quincy on the site of the O'Neil playground. . . "Artists and Models," starring Dean Martin, Jerry Lewis, Shirley MacLaine, Dorothy Malone, Eva Gabor and Anita Ekberg, was playing at the Strand. . . Fourteen Marines, led by M/Sgt. Earl W. Shinn of Quincy, were on the last leg of their walk from Pittsfield to Copley Square, Boston, to publicize the Mothers March on Polio. . . Ground was broken for the new Broad Meadows Junior High School and Contractor James S. Kelliher said the school may be ready for Christmas. . . Alfred Raymondi, president of the Quincy City Employees Association, protested the proposed closing of the laundry at City Hospital. . . Archbishop Richard J. Cushing attended a dinner at the Quincy High School cafeteria to kick off a $200,000 drive to build a new St. Ann's School. . . Sandra Whitney was at stalled as worthy advisor of the Atlantic Rainbow Assembly.

Super Bowl Veggie Appetizers

At the last Super Bowl game, our house was filled with the kids who all came to watch the game. And before I served the main meal, I made several pickies – as an alternative to the usual popcorn, chips etc.

And so Sunday, we are expecting a larger crew since it's also a birthday celebration. I plan to make the same three vegetable appetizers. Here are the recipes for all.

Cauliflower Fritters

1 package of frozen cauliflower (or fresh equivalent)
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1-2 tablespoons Bisquick
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup grated cheese (either parmesan or Romano)
smidgen of water to blend
3-4 tablespoons oil (I use olive and vegetable oils combined

Cook the cauliflower as directed. Cut in small pieces and place in a bowl with all of the other ingredients except for the oil. Stir until mixture resembles pancake mix.

In hot oil in a frying pan, drop by tablespoons, turning until golden brown. Drain on paper towel and place in a warming oven before guests arrive.

String Bean Fritters

1 lg. can string beans
1 egg
2 tablespoons flour
same amount of Bisquick
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup grated parmesan or Romano cheese
smidgen of water to blend
3-4 tablespoons oil (I use olive and vegetable oil combined)

After beans are removed from the can, place in a bowl and cut them in smaller pieces either with a fork or a knife. Add all the ingredients except the oil and blend until mixture resembles pancake mix.

Fry in hot oil and drain on a paper towel. Place in a warming oven just before serving.

Corn Fritters

1 package frozen corn (or canned)
1 egg.
2 tablespoons flour
small amount of Bisquick (optional)
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup grated parmesan or Romano cheese
smidgen of water to blend
3-4 tablespoons oil (I use olive and vegetable oil combined.

After corn in defrosted if you are using the frozen, add all of the ingredients except the oil. Blend until mixture resembles pancake mix. An all of these fritters, if they seem too dry, add the little more water, and if you don't have Bisquick, don't worry, just add a bit more flour as you stir until it is the right consistency.

PS. I placed them in a three sectioned platter, and they went like 'hot cakes'. And if desired, zucchini, asparagus as well as other veggies can be used by following the same directions. In the case of zucchini, they have to be shredded and the asparagus, cut in bite size pieces.

"BEATLEMANIA LIVE" will be hosted by the Quincy School-Community Partnership Friday, Feb. 27, at Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel.

Quincy School Partnership To Host 'BeatleMania Live'

The Quincy School-Community Partnership will host its second annual concert, "Beatlemania Live" Friday, Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. at Boston Marriott Quincy, Marriott Drive.

Proceeds will benefit the Quincy public schools. Last year's event, with other fundraisers, :helped fund more than 40 mini-grants to teachers city-wide, directly helping students in classrooms.

Tickets are $30 and can be obtained at Central Middle School, 1012 Hancock St. or by calling 617-984-8725 or 617-984-8888/

Tickets are also available at other Quincy public schools.

Red Cross South Area Plans Valentine Gala Feb. 13

The American Red Cross South Area Council will hold a Valentine Gala Friday evening, Feb. 13 at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

The event, the 26th annual, will be a dinner and dancing to the swing style music of Majic.

Chairing the gala are Maryrose Sullivan-Mirick and Tom Accomando, assisted by members of the Quincy Chapter Council.

"The Red Cross is always there for families facing emergencies, such as fires and disasters," Council Chairman Jerry Dacey notes.

Last year alone the Massachusetts Bay Chapter aided more than 2,500 individuals, he said.

In addition through the Red Cross, hundreds have been trained to give first aid and CPR. Many have also been trained to save lives with automatic external defibrillators.

Last year, he said, 15,000

units of blood were collected at area bloodmobiles and nearly 20,000 students in local schools were awarded certificates from two youth programs, "Safe On My Own" and "Whales Tales."

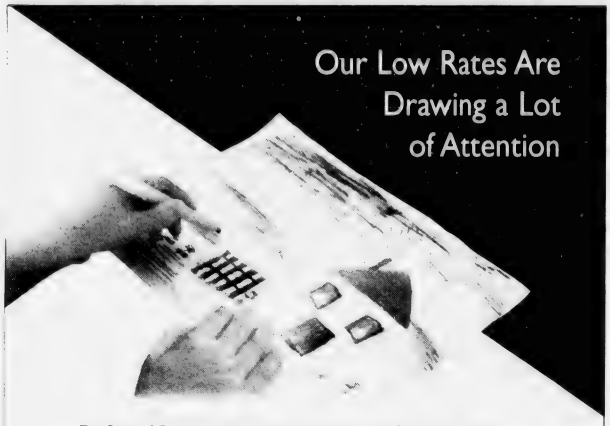
16th Annual Lunar New Year Festival Sunday

Quincy Asian Resources, In. (QARI) will host the 16th annual Asian Lunar New Year Festival - The Year of the Monkey—Sunday from 12 noon to 5 p.m. at North Quincy High School, Hancock St., North Quincy.

The festival to which admission is free, will start with an indoor fair from 12 to 2:15 p.m. Asian foods will be available for purchase featuring: Quincy Dynasty (Chinese), Ba-Le (Vietnamese), Little Duck (Thai) and Lollicup TeaZone. There will be children's arts and crafts coordinated by the Patriot Trails Girl Scouts along with exhibitors and gifts vendors. QARI will conduct an onsite voter registration drive.

"The emphasis of this celebration is culture and community" said Kao Li, executive director of QARI. "We are especially happy to work with volunteers from the Thomas Jefferson Forum and the Asian Culture Club."

The formal program will begin at 2:30 p.m. in the auditorium. Wah Lum Kung Fu will provide the lion dance and cultural performances will feature Wong's Academy Chinese Folk Dance, The Tsai Fung Dance Troup and Filipino dances. The program will culminate with the traditional presentation of lucky red envelopes for children under age 12.



Li said the event has already raised $14,000 through sponsors. "This is an 80 percent increase from last year, and an indication of the growth of interest in the Asian Community Resources."

He also assured those planning to attend Sunday's festival that the program will be completed before the Super Bowl kickoff.

"The event is made possible by the generous support of our sponsors," Li said.

Phelan Seeks Repeal Of Firefighter Ordinance

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Renewing one of last year's most contentious battles, Mayor William Phelan is seeking to repeal a controversial ordinance that establishes a minimum-manning standard in the fire department.

At last week's city council meeting, Phelan introduced a measure asking the council to rescind an ordinance that mandates the city to staff each piece of apparatus with one officer and three firefighters. The council placed Phelan's request into the ordinance and public safety committees for further review.

In general, the city staffs each piece of equipment with one officer and two firefighters. As a result, the city would have to hire anywhere from 20 to 40 additional firefighters to satisfy the measure.

The ordinance adopts a portion of the National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA) standard 1710. The city became the first in the state to adopt such an ordinance.

Proponents of the measure say it is necessary to ensure the safety of firefighters and the public. But Phelan and other opponents maintain the measure is too costly and would result in layoffs or cuts in fire services.

Despite opposition from the mayor and Fire Chief Paul O'Connell, the city council last year passed the ordinance on a 7-2 vote.

Phelan vetoed the measure, but the city council overrode it on a 7-2 vote. In both votes, Councillor Frank McCauley and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro sided with the mayor on the issue.

Three new faces are on the council this year, so the mayor is hoping the change will bring a different outcome.

"In light of the number of complaints about high taxes, it might be a good time to revisit this issue," said Council President McCauley. "I found it wasn't a very popular issue with taxpayers anyway. Whether or not there will be any change of minds remains to be seen."

McCauley said implementing the ordinance would cost the city more than $8 million over a five-year period.

Tom Bowes, president of the Quincy Fire Fighters Association, disputes that number, saying the costs would be about $1.5 million per year after the measure is fully implemented.

WILLIAM PHELAN

"The lives that are going to be saved and the injuries to firefighters that are going to be prevented are well worth this amount of money," said Bowes.

Councillor Joe Finn said he would not support Phelan's move to rescind the ordinance.

"We have some hard fiscal choices to make, but I'm not willing to risk firefighters' lives in making those choices," he said.

Finn said he is still waiting for the city to conduct a fire study that address the department's needs.

"The energy should be focused on conducting this fire study, but where is it?" Finn asked. "Let's get it out there. This fire study should move forward, because it will allow us to make sound staffing judgments citywide without putting firefighters or property at risk."

Bowes pointed to a newly passed, $7.7 billion federal law, called the Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response (SAFER) law, which allows cities and towns to hire 75,000 additional firefighters. The measure was part of last year's Department of Defense Authorization Act, S. 1588, which was signed into law by President George W. Bush in November.

The legislation is similar to the federal COPS program because it allows cities and town to hire additional personnel with the aid of federal grants, said Bowes. A city or town would pay only a portion of the costs initially, and the full costs would be phased in over a period of time, according to Bowes.

Engine 4's Fate Uncertain, Says Union President

out on injured leave, three others took the recent early retirement incentive, and another nine are scheduled to retire this summer, he said.

As a result, the fire department will be understaffed by 22 positions in fiscal 2005 unless the city hires more firefighters or appropriates additional funds to cover overtime, said Bowes.

Since last March, Rescue 1, the city's most active piece of fire equipment, was relegated to part-time status due to staffing problems. The vehicle continues to run only 30 percent of the time, said Bowes.

O'Connell has said that each piece of fire equipment requires a minimum of least three firefighters to run. If the minimum does not show up for duty, then Rescue 1 is sidelined.

"We are playing Russian roulette with the public safety," said Coughlin. "My concern is that we chronically underfund and understaff the fire department. We talk publicly about having it both ways, but the residents are the people who are getting it tucked to them, with dramatic increases in property taxes and a diminishment in one of the most crucial public services the city can provide."

It is widely believed that individual Masons were active participants in the Boston Tea Party...

So, what have Massachusetts Masons been doing since dumping tea in Boston harbor in 1773?

Massachusetts was the birthplace of American Freemasonry in 1733 and, indeed, many famous Masons such as George Washington, John Hancock and Paul Revere built the foundation on which our great country stands today. But, is Freemasonry relevant today? Yes, more than ever before.

Masons operate the Shriners hospitals where seriously injured kids receive state-of-the-art medical treatment for free. Masons are the largest group of blood donors to the Massachusetts Red Cross. We have one of the finest elderly care facilities in the state. And we operate and fund the Masonic Child Identification Program in which more than 175,000 kids have already participated. Yes, Masons, especially here in Quincy keep very busy...and we have fun doing it.

Maybe your dad, your grand dad, an uncle or a neighbor is a Mason. Masonry invites men of good character from all walks of life, all levels of income, from every race, creed and culture to join in its good works. Through its traditions and teachings, Masonry endeavors to instill in its members the desire and means to improve themselves and the lives of others. Our initation ceremonies are serious with no hazing or horseplay.

With Masonic Lodges in almost every community and every country in the free world, you'll have friends wherever you go.

You can go on and become a 32° Mason, a member of the York Rite and a shriner, if you wish. You will have a wide choice of opportunities for community service, personal improvement, leadership, and the fellowship and friendship of Brothers who share your commitment and ideals.

For more information, without obligation, on how you can become a Mason, call Rural Lodge at the number below today.

Eagle Scout Project To Aid Needy Youngsters

When Boy Scout Matthew Puleo, 14, of Quincy, was thinking of a possible Eagle Scout project, he knew that he had to do something to help his community.

"I wanted to help people who were having trouble helping themselves. It's all about giving back. That's what Scouting has taught me," Puleo said.

Puleo saw Quincy Crisis Center as the place where he could be of service. The center is in dire need of food and clothing for infants and children, especially baby food and formula.

"I think of all that I have, and can't imagine little babies being cold and hungry," Puleo said.

The drive will be held Saturday, Feb. 7, from 4 to 7 p.m. , and Sunday, Feb. 8, from 7 a.m. to noon, at St. Ann's Church, 757 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Upon completion of his project, Puleo will become the second in his family to attain the rank of Eagle Scout. His brother, Nicholas, attained the rank in 1999.

Matthew is a student at St. Ann's School and a member of Troop 5 in Milton.

The Eagle Scout Award is the highest honor given in Boy Scouts of America. Fewer than 4 percent of those enrolled in Scouting achieve this rank. Recipients must demonstrate leadership, a commitment to local and national community, and personal achievement.

For more information, contact Matthew Puleo at 617-328-0329.

Chinese New Year Celebration

The Chinese Culture Development and Promotion Council, Inc. and the Chinese Language School are sponsoring a Chinese New Year celebration on Jan. 31 at 6 p.m. in the International Buffet Restaurant, 237 Quincy Ave.

The celebration will feature Chinese folk dance, a children's choir, Chinese dulcimer, Chinese drum performance and a presentation of the Chinese Lion head to the schools which house Asian American students in the New England area.

Patriots Trail Girl Scouts To Host Father-Daughter Dance

The Patriots Trail Girl Scouts will host the Father-Daughter Dance Saturday, Feb. 7.

The event will be from 7 to 9 p.m. at St. Mary's Church hall, Crescent Street, West Quincy.

The cost is $7 per couple and $3 for each additional girl scout. The event is for registered Quincy girl scouts.

Jerry Gardiner Wins Bank Of Canton Holiday Sweepstakes Grand Prize

Jerry Gardiner of Quincy was a grand prize winner in The Bank of Canton's recent annual Holiday Sweepstakes.

Gardiner was among four grand prize winners who each received $500 in the sweepstakes. He was the winner in the drawing held at the Bank of Canton's Quincy branch located at 275 Quincy Ave.

Other winners were Frank Petitto of Randolph, Jack Rotondo of Stoughton and Clair Lund of Canton.

During the sweepstakes which were held in December, customers filled out free raffle forms at each of the Bank's four offices. Every Friday, drawings were held at the branches, and lucky winners were awarded cash prizes.

Each week the cash prizes increased. Grand prizes were drawn on Christmas Eve.

"Our holiday sweepstakes is a great way for the Bank to say a year-end thank you to our customers while giving something back to the communities we serve," said James E. Egan, President and CEO of The Bank of Canton. "It's not easy to find the right gift for everybody, but I think it's safe to say that all 19 raffle winners appreciated their unexpected holiday presents from The Bank."

The Bank of Canton has maintained its tradition as a mutual savings bank since it was incorporated in 1835. Today, the bank is a source of home mortgages and commercial lending programs, as well as offering customers a full range of home/consumer loans, commercial services, and personal banking options, including investment services through Infinex Financial Group.

For more information, call 781-828-1690.

Alert ID Service For Seniors 'At Risk' Being Expanded

An emergency service for Quincy seniors "at risk" is being expanded, reports Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood on the Bay.

For several years the Quincy Police Department, the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs and Beechwood Community Life Center have offered an emergency alert service, providing ID bracelets to Quincy seniors "at risk" with memory impairment.

Quincy Police Captain Al Gillan, Bill Murphy, chairman of the Quincy Commission of Handicapped Affairs; and Beals met recently to assess the program and plan for the future.

The Memory Alert ID bracelets are inscribed with an ID number. If a person wearing a bracelet is found wandering unconscious or unable to speak coherently, the person who finds them calls the police, reporting the

SHARRON BEALS

ID number on the bracelet. The Police Department then notifies the registered contact person's family, friend, doctor, etc., and assists as needed.

The Memory Alert bracelet is designed for all ambulatory persons with memory impairments," stresses Beals.

To date, the majority of participants have been seniors living in family homes.

"We now want to promote the bracelets to Quincy's assisted living facilities, rehab centers and nursing homes, wherever persons with memory impairments are ambulatory and potentially "at risk."

Captain Gillan will arrange for officers to visit facilities to further promote this expanding service."

All interested persons, families and facility directors are invited to call or visit Beechwood Community Life Center to register persons who may benefit by wearing an "alert" bracelet.

Registration cost is only $10, and is payable to the Quincy Commission on Handicapped Affairs. A completed, confidential information form and a current photo will be forwarded to the Quincy Police Department and entered into their central registry. The ID bracelet, with code number, is issued by Beechwood at the time of registration.

When A Memory Impaired Person Wanders Off

- Search the vicinity thoroughly.
- Notify the Quincy Police 617-479-1212.
- Report if the person is wearing an Alert I.D. Bracelet.
- Stay by the phone, or have someone else available to answer the phone.
- Keep the incoming and outgoing calls as brief as possible.

For more information, contact Beechwood Community Life Center at 617-471-5712

• Make sure that when doing the wash, you launder matched outfit sets together, regardless of whether you dirtied both pieces or not. For example, if you have worn the pants to a tracksuit but did not wear the jacket, you should put them both through the wash. That way they will fade evenly. If you don't, you may find they no longer match.

Interior Painting Tips: Premium Vs. Bargain Paint

By PAUL O'MALLEY

Question: What's the difference between a premium and bargain paint?

Answer: A good latex premium paint will contain 100% acrylic. Acrylic is a solid that provides coverage and helps the paint brush on smoothly. A bargain paint will have a less quantity and quality of solids. Usually you'll find more vinyl solids in a bargain paint. What this means is that you'll have to apply more coats and spend more time than you will with a quality paint. Spending the extra money for a quality paint can actually end up saving yourself time and money.

Q: When do I need to use a primer?

A: Use a latex primer on new plaster, wall board and unpainted old plaster before you paint. Some people like to prime over a dark color before they put on their new light color paint.

New wood? Some latex primers can raise the grain or slightly swell wood. This happens because latex contains water. An oil based primer will not raise the grain. I'm not saying you can't use latex on wood. There are some good quality latex primers that work great on wood with minimal or noticeable raising.

Using oil base would be my choice but depending on your situation, oil takes longer to dry and has an odor issue, especially in the winter when it's too cold to open a window. You can still put latex over an oil base primer.

Q: What kind of roller should I use?

A: For smooth walls I would use a short nap (3/16") For rough or textured surfaces I would use a deeper nap like 1/2" or 3/4". Don't use a thick nap roller on a smooth surface. You'll get lines on both ends of the roller.

For broad walls use a 9" wide roller. You can get 3" and 4" rollers for narrow areas.

Q: Is there anything to get dried paint off a hardwood floor?

A: I love to paint but I am the worst at covering up before I start. The best cure is prevention. There aren't too many "magic bullets" out there but there are a few products that could work like "OOPs" or "Goo-gone".

Try and take the time to cover floors, furniture. It will save you time and a headache in the long run.

Q: What's the best paint to use in a bathroom?

A: I would recommend using a latex paint made just for bathrooms and kitchens. These paints have an antibacterial quality which will fight mold buildup. I would suggest this paint if your bathroom has an inherent mold problem due to a lack of window or a poor exhaust vent. Bathrooms that never seem to have a mold issue, you can use a regular interior latex paint but keep it in the semi gloss or glossy sheen. This makes it easier clean. Flat sheens tend to collect dirt and are harder to clean.

Water Bill Deferrals Approved By Ordinance Committee

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The city council's ordinance committee Monday night approved Mayor William Phelan's proposal to allow senior citizens to defer their water bills.

By a unanimous vote, the committee approved the measure, which will be geared toward senior citizens age 65 or older and who have household incomes of $40,000 or less.

According to the Board of Assessors office, a senior citizen qualifies for the water bill deferral if they also qualify for the real estate tax deferral.

Also, seniors would have to own property in the state for at least five years to qualify, according to city officials.

In addition, the committee approved a proposal pushed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin that lowers the interest rate on water bill and property tax deferrals. Currently, the rate is set by state law at eight percent. The committee voted to tie the rate to the Prime Rate, effectively cutting it in half to four percent.

Deferrals would be placed as a lien on a particular property, according to the Board of Assessors office.

Another proposal submitted by Coughlin and Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner was met with spirited debate.

They are looking to take advantage of a newly-passed state law that allows cities and towns to shift even more of the tax burden onto businesses temporarily and give homeowners a tax break.

Two weeks ago, Gov. Mitt Romney signed legislation allowing cities and towns to increase their tax classification up to 200 percent. Since the city set the tax rate last month, it is unclear whether it can take advantage of the new law.

According to the law, a community adopting the legislation would have its tax classification rate increased to as high as 200 percent, and then decreased at increments over a five-year period. The rate would then be capped at 170 percent, which is lower than the city's current ceiling of 175 percent.

The measure was hotly debated Monday night, but no action was taken. The proposal could be headed for approval, based on comments from councillors. Either way, the vote will be close.

Supporters maintain the proposal provides much-needed tax relief for homeowners, while opponents claim the shift would drive away businesses.

Gardner pointed to a letter from South Shore Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Ronald Zooleck, who expressed support for the move, saying the end result would be beneficial to businesses.

Coughlin pointed to Zooleck's support as a sign of the dire situation.

"There is a benefit for the business community after the five-year run of the legislation," he said. "In essence, you have the business community saying, 'we understand.'"

But McCauley called it a bad idea.

"You can't help the homeowner by sticking it to the businesses," he said. "It's only going to get worse for homeowners."

In other news, the committee debated but did not act on Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi's home rule petition that seeks to set the tax rate no later than Sept. 15.

Alan Cousin, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, and Robert Haley, vice president, spoke in favor of Raymondi's proposal.

But Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the Board of Assessors, said the department would be hard-pressed to make such a deadline, given the huge amount of paperwork and analysis required for state regulators.

"It just can't be done, we don't have the manpower," she told the committee.

McCauley said the proposal makes sense, but estimating the city's receipts and new growth numbers that early might be difficult.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro asked committee Chairman Coughlin to invite a representative from the Department of Revenue to enlighten them on the issue.

Councillor John Keenan said one solution might be for assessors to send out estimated tax bills earlier in the fiscal year that would calculate increases.

Property tax bills are sent out quarterly, but the first two bills usually reflect the previous year's tax rate. The final two bills include increases for the entire year.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Fail-Safe Fitness

The start of a new year seems to trigger the exercise bug. Resolutions of a firmer, stronger, leaner and healthier self echo through homes and fitness centers across the country. Fitness and exercise equipment seems to fly off the shelves, and fitness facilities can anticipate the influx of current members returning and new members joining.

But as winter gives way to spring, there's a slow but gradual decline of member attendance. Why is this?

It could be tradition. It seems almost obligatory to include exercise and fitness in our New Year's resolutions, reflecting our desire to feel and look better. But what happens between January and April to derail the ambition and goals of leading a healthy lifestyle?

Often the culprit is, believe it or not, honesty!

Honesty? Yes, honesty.

Most issues that surround exercising and becoming fit have nothing to do with exercise itself. You can easily set yourself up for failure by setting [illegible] as well as [illegible] to maintain [illegible] a long period of time. It is where honesty with yourself can make the difference when maintaining your exercise program throughout the year.

Issues of poor self-image, happiness, disappointment, stress, poor time management, and depression can [illegible] struggling in matters [illegible] something a [illegible] However, not dealing with these issues individually can prevent you from reaching any exercise goal you set. Can exercise be used as a tool to help you cope with these issues? Definitely, but be honest with yourself and identify your exercise and fitness goals while understanding the other factors that can keep you from reaching them.

For example, say your goal is to exercise three times a week for one hour. If you know your time-management skills need improvement, be honest with yourself and understand that you'll not only have to work on completing the physical exercise, but you'll also have to manage your time effectively to get to the gym or complete an at-home workout. Working on your time-management skills could make reaching your exercise goals less stressful and more attainable.

This year, fail-safe your fitness, exercise and personal goals by identifying your true needs and setting realistic and attainable goals. Understand that the barriers to not reaching your fitness goals may stem from other sources. Take small but productive steps toward your goals that will continue throughout the year. Life is a marathon, not a sprint.

Protecting Skin From Harmful UV Rays

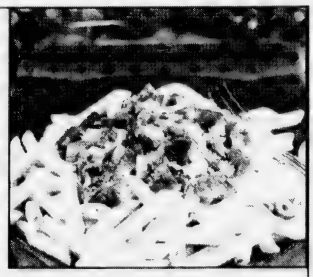
Skin cancer is the most common type of cancer in the United States. It can result from long-term over exposure to Ultraviolet Radiation (UV Rays). Having a tan, natural or artificial, is a sign that the skin has already been damaged. UV Ray-damaged skin cells can lead to one of three types skin cancer: basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma and melanoma. The American Cancer Society estimates there were 54,200 new cases of melanoma in the US in 2003. Fortunately, skin cancers are preventable and highly curable if found and treated early.

Since UV Rays penetrate cloud cover and are not affected by temperature, protecting skin is a must all year-round, not just in the summer months. UV Radiation is also reflected or scattered by different surfaces. Snow, for example, can reflect as much as 80 percent of UV Radiation and UV levels increase significantly as altitude increases. Winter sports such as skiing can present UV exposure as intense as a day at the beach.

Winter trips to tanning booths cause exposure to UV Rays just as the sun does. In fact, a recent study by the National Cancer Institute found that using tanning booths more than once a month could increase the risk of getting skin cancer by 150 percent.

Here are some tips to protect your skin from harmful UV Rays all year-round:



- Avoid exposure to mid-day sun, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when UV Rays are most dangerous.
- Use sunscreen with a sun protective factor (SPF) of 15 or higher whenever you spend time outdoors. Remember to re-apply sunscreen every one to one-and-a-half hours.
- Wear protective clothing, such as hats and long-sleeved shirts, that block the sun's rays.
- Protect young children from the sun's rays. The damaging effects of UV Radiation can begin in childhood.
- Be careful when taking certain medications that may cause the skin to burn more easily. Check with your doctor or pharmacist to determine if your medication could be a problem.
- Avoid sun lamps and tanning booths.

Skin cancer, especially melanoma, can be deadly. By taking steps to prevent sun damage and detect symptoms early, you can protect yourself. Remember to ask your doctor to evaluate your skin during examinations.

[illegible] CUT TOMATO [illegible] PEPPER PASTA

[illegible]

oil
1 small clove garlic, finely minced
1 large red bell pepper
3 cups chopped, fresh seeded tomatoes
1/4 cup non-fat half-and-half
1/4 cup freshly grated Italian Parmesan cheese
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1 pound penne pasta or bowties, cooked and well-drained

Over medium heat, saute onion in oil until translucent, stirring often to prevent browning. Add garlic, cook, stirring, until garlic is fresh, 1 to 2 minutes. Add bell pepper and saute until tender-crisp, about 2 minutes. Stir in tomato and bring to simmer. Turn off heat; let mixture cool 1 to 3 minutes. When cooled, gradually stir in half-and-half. Add Parmesan and black pepper; stir and turn heat to low. Cook, until heated thoroughly. Serve over hot cooked pasta. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

[illegible] potatoes, [illegible] drained
1 [illegible] can [illegible] [illegible] sodium vegetable broth
1 (32-ounce) carton low-sodium chicken broth or 4 cups homemade no-salt-added turkey broth
1 (15-ounce) can white beans, drained and rinsed
3/4 pound cooked white chicken or turkey meat, cut in small cubes
1/3 cup quartered dried cranberries
1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves, optional
3 tablespoons minced fresh Italian parsley
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper

Place sweet potatoes and vegetable broth in medium pot. Bring to boil; lower heat, stir and gently simmer until sweet potato is cooked, 10 to 12 minutes. (If using canned sweet potatoes, cook only until broth is thoroughly heated.) Add chicken broth, beans, cut-up chicken or turkey, cranberries, thyme, parsley, salt and black pepper; simmer, stirring occasionally, until soup is heated through. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D

CATCHING A CAVITY

Recent research reveals that, in effect, babies can "catch" cavities from their mothers. More correctly, when mothers have high levels of the bacteria that cause cavities (mutans Streptococci), the bacteria will be transferred to toddlers about one-third of the time. About half of moms have high levels of bacteria while fathers rarely transmit the bacteria – for unknown reasons. Once these bacteria establish themselves in babies' mouths, the incidence of cavities becomes more likely. If mothers are concerned about the transmission of bacteria to their babies, they can ask for a dental caries test, which measures the concentration of these bacteria in the mouth. If levels are above 1 million, steps can be taken to prevent transmission.

The ADA recommends that all pregnant mothers receive a check-up. We believe that with preventive dental care, daily brushing and flossing, and a well-balanced diet, people can maintain their teeth and gums in good health well into their later years. Let us help you keep that wonderful smile. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. # Sylvia Wants Presidents 'To Pick It Up A Notch'

ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy High School hockey team could've used the top scorer in Eastern Massachusetts Monday afternoon.

Minus senior Josh Giordani's 24 goals (41 points), the Presidents still generated a lot of scoring opportunities but couldn't complete the job in a 2-1 loss to Scituate at Quincy Youth Arena.

Giordani bruised his ankle crashing into the boards in last Saturday's 3-2 home loss to Plymouth North and is listed as day-to-day.

"It wasn't a good game," said head coach Bob Sylvia. "It was a good game in terms that it was two equal teams. But my feeling is that we have to be more scoring accountable. We have to put the puck in the net.

"We have a lot of kids out there that are getting significant ice time and that's not translating into goals. Obviously not having Josh in the lineup hurts. Josh is a natural scorer. But other people have to pick it up."

Quincy (4-8-1 overall, 4-3-1 Atlantic Coast League), which was scheduled to battle cross-town rival North Quincy Wednesday (7:10 p.m.), will travel to Randolph Saturday afternoon at 4. With seven games left in the regular season, its tournament hopes are slim.

"We were hoping at this stage in the game we were going to kind of start to pick it up," Sylvia said. "We haven't seen that yet."

The Presidents have been involved in many close games this season, with five of their eight losses having been decided by a goal. Surely, that's a sign of a young, inexperienced team.

"Most of the team will be back next year," Sylvia said. "There's a lot of young kids. That's why we have to stay on them and attack their pride a little bit. They have to pick it up a notch. It's going to take the weight room and it's going to take a lot of hockey in the offseason to get back into the winning column."

A scoreless first period, Quincy had a couple of solid chances to get on the scoreboard in that frame. Four minutes in, the Scituate goalie stuffed senior Brendan Craig's shot from the slot and sophomore Mike McPherson's follow-up rebound attempt. And with less than four minutes left, he made a nice save on senior Dan Sullivan's shot off a feed from sophomore Matt Giordani.

In the second, junior keeper Joe Daley weathered a Sailors' offensive storm for most of the period with a variety of spectacular saves. During a minute span midway through, Daley made a right skate save, denied a Sailor on the doorstep and stoned a breakaway.

Scituate finally struck with a breakaway shorthanded goal at 11:13 and quickly extended its lead to 2-0 with another tally at 12:30.

The Presidents answered before the end of the period

Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament Feb. 16-22

Several teams from the South Shore will compete in the 31st annual Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament Feb. 16-22 at Quincy Youth Arena.

Quincy, Norwood, Milton and Walpole will be participating in one of the most prestigious youth hockey tournaments in New England.

Other teams include Woburn, Dorchester, South Boston, California, New Jersey, Maine and an international squad from Ontario, Canada.

The Quincy Kiwanis Club has sponsored the tournament for 31 consecutive years with all the proceeds used to support local charities.

The committee, headed by Larry Kelly, is planning for another successful tournament and is looking forward to welcoming all participants, along with their families and friends to historic Quincy.

Admission is free for all games. For more information call Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

Matthew Rodriguez On Jr. Bruins All-Star Team

Matthew Rodriguez of Quincy Youth Hockey has earned a spot on the Greater Boston Junior Bruins All-Star Team.

The team will travel to Quebec City, Canada, in February to compete in the Quebec International Pee Wee Youth Hockey Tournament.

Son of Jay Rodriguez and Cyndi Ellis, the left winger is one of 18 Pee Wee major players from the Greater Boston League selected to the team.

The team is composed of players from Belmont, Allston-Brighton, Brookline, Charlestown, Dedham, Dorchester, Framingham, Tri-County, Triboro, Hyde Park, Needham, Parkway, South Boston and Quincy.

It will play teams from the United States, Canada and Europe during the 10-day tourney, which is expected to attract over 200,000 spectators to the Quebec Collsee. The games will be televised on national television in Canada.

The purpose of the tournament is to provide the players with competitive hockey and cultural exchange. The tournament plays a major role in the cultural exchange affording the players an opportunity to make new friends and gain insight into Canadian-American lifestyles and values.

The players will be staying with French-Canadian families during their visit to Quebec City and are expected to be exposed to many facets of Canadian heritage, including the French language.

MATTHEW RODRIGUEZ

The trip is very expensive, with the Boston team alone needing to raise $20,000 for the trip. To achieve the $20,000 goal, Rodriguez will be needing contributions from local merchants and residents as well as selling chances for a February raffle.

Small and large contributions will be greatly appreciated by the players. The non-profit tax deductible contributions can be made payable to Boston Junior Bruins, and given either to Rodriguez or mailed to Boston Junior Bruins, c/o Matthew Rodriguez, 82 Cliff St., Quincy 02169. The Boston Junior Bruins Tax ID # is 22-3214508.

North Quincy Turns It Over To Taunton

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Having scored only nine points in the first 10 minutes of the second half, there seemed no way the North Quincy High School girls' basketball team would be able to make up an 11-point deficit in the final six minutes.

Trailing 46-35 last Friday night at home against Taunton, the Red Raiders heated up with eight straight points to pull within three with just under two minutes left in the game.

Still down three with less than a minute left, they turned the ball over — for the 23rd time — and the Tigers held on for a 49-43 win.

"We needed this game," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "We turned the ball over too many times. Twenty-three turnovers. There were too many possessions in a row where we turned it over. We have to at least get a shot off."

The Red Raiders also didn't help themselves at the free-throw line, connecting on 10-of-18 shots. "We're not a good free-throw shooting team," MacFarlane said. "That's been killing us in close games. That, and turnovers."

North Quincy (4-7 overall, 3-5 Old Colony League) took on Falmouth Tuesday and will travel to Bridgewater-Raynham tomorrow (Friday) night at 6:30 p.m.

The start of game couldn't have been scripted any better for North Quincy.

After forcing Taunton to turn the ball over on a 30-second shot clock violation, the Red Raiders featured an aggressive offense. They took the ball strong to the hoop, scoring their first five points from the line and the next six in the paint.

"We do that every game," MacFarlane said. "And then I think we start to get tired and that's when the turnovers start to happen."

North Quincy continued to control play throughout the half. Down the stretch, though, Taunton went on an 8-3 run to take a 27-26 lead in the locker room. A lead it would hold on to for the rest of the game.

The Red Raiders came out sluggish in the second half, with too many trips up the floor without a shot. Defensively, they gave the Tigers wide-open looks from downtown and they drained four 3-pointers to build the 46-35 lead. Freshman Leah Harrigan hit three of them.

"I was talking to the coach and he said she was struggling," MacFarlane said. "They were begging her to shoot the ball more. She had a breakout game against us. Those 3-pointers really hurt."

North Quincy's trapping defense ignited the 8-0 run that got them back into the game as Taunton began to turn it over.

Junior tri-captain Sarah Goreham scored a team-high 16 points. Senior center Alyssa Dearani added nine and junior Shauna Kelly seven.

Last Monday, North Quincy knocked off Silver Lake at home, 51-41, for the second time this season. Goreham paced the Red Raiders with 17 points, Kelly scored 10 and Dearani eight.

"We were pretty much in control the whole game," MacFarlane said. "We had an eight- to 10-point lead for most of the second half."

SOUNDS ABOUT RIGHT

These days, upgraded vehicle audio systems with bass reflectors and subwoofers in the trunk are increasingly popular. Aside from evaluating their sound, vehicle owners should take the power demands of these systems into consideration as this after-market gear may overtax the factory-installed alternator and charging system. If so, the mismatch may result in an alternator that is unable to keep the battery charged. The drained battery leads to an inability to start the vehicle in the morning, frequent battery replacement, and even premature alternator failure. There may also be insufficient voltage to operate the electric fuel pump, fuel injection, and other systems. To avert these problems, consider installing a high-output alternator that is equal to the task.

Quincy Elks Crown Hoop Shoot Free Throw Winners

Six Quincy boys and girls have been crowned city champions and have taken the first step in the Elks National Hoop Shoot Free Throw contest.

The winners are champions in three age categories in the local competition, which is sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks and supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department.

The champions are Sara Ryan and Ryan Evans, 8-9 age group; Matthew Goreham and Kelsey Powers, [illegible] and Katie Sheridan and Michael Powers, [illegible].

They will compete in the Eastern Massachusetts Championship on [illegible]. The National Championship will be conducted at the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield.

There are over 5 million boys and girls involved in the first level of the shoot-offs, which involves shooting 25 free throws with the best shooters advancing.

"The youngsters in Quincy are fortunate to have such a generous organization as the Quincy Elks to sponsor this event," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "This program is a wonderful experience for the youngsters ages 8-13. The Elks always have the interest of our youth as a primary goal of its organization. I particularly want to thank Exalted Ruler Jim Ryan and Hoop Shoot Chairman Ed Miller for their work on the Hoop Shoot."

Over 200 youngsters took part in the contest starting in local neighborhood gyms. The Elks presented trophies to Quincy's all center champions and the first three places in each age group. Each gym winner received a trophy and was eligible for the city championship.

The runners-up in each age group were Tim Keenan and Abigael Yotts, 8-9; Liam Cain and MacKenzie Irvin, 10-11; and Rob Krueger and Devon McKay, 12-13. The third-place trophies went to Pat Gould and Taylor McKay, 8-9; Kyle McKay and Julie Ross, 10-11; and Dan Richards, 12-13.

Other center champions were: Jessica DiCarlo, Saman Marhamo, Jane Minton, Starliena Murphy, girls 8-9; Thomas Garland, Michael Murphy, Matt Roach, Patrick Verhault, boys 8-9.

Lauren Gendreau, Emma Manning, Juha White, girls 10-11; Nick Carbone, Paul Gould, Joe Kozlowski, Johnny Ly, Mahmoud Marhamo, Steve Peterson, Zach Stearns, boys 10-11.

Co Le, Kelly Manning, Sarah Minton, Eid Safwan, girls 12-13; Pat Dean, James Flaherty, Will Ruan, Tim Stille, boys 12-13.

Welch also commended recreation leaders who supervised center championship events at 13 school locations. "These leaders enthusiastically support this program and encourage each participant to enjoy the Hoop Shoot experience," he said.

Quincy 50s Alumni Benefit Fund Committee Retiring

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy 50s Alumni Benefit Fund Committee jokes that its meetings last only five minutes and the rest of the time is spent exchanging fabricated football stories.

Maybe [illegible] productive [illegible] Besides [illegible] committee [illegible] supported [illegible] high schools and the community, by sponsoring [illegible] fundraisers and other events and awarding many scholarships.

And now, after 10 energetic years, the committee has decided to step into retirement.

"We're up there in age where we can't do it any more," said Ron Ivil, committee president. "We're getting tired. We've been together a long time. It's been a great 10 years."

The last event the committee organized was the special tribute earlier this month for North Quincy High School football legend Pete Zoia — known affectionately as "Mr. North Quincy."

"It was a great time," Ivil said. "I've got a lot of calls about it. Pete is still in shock. He can't believe people would do that for him. His family was so excited."

The 50s group was born at the 1993 Thanksgiving Day football game. Ivil, a former Quincy High fullback, ran into former teammate Jackie Powers and the two talked about putting Ivil's film of their 1956 team on video cassettes.

Soon after, they organized a team reunion at Matt's Villa in Holbrook. And they later held another reunion at Caesar's in Weymouth, with coaches, cheerleaders and wives added to the event.

Others joining the committee over the years included: Eugene "Satch" Cavanaugh, treasurer; Vinny Moscardelli, secretary; George Mallett, Bob Derbes, Helena Veno, Nancy Kruger, Ron Leone, Jack Brown, Tom Connors, Anthony Oriola, Joe Chase, Bob Smollett, Ken Burgess, Dick Lombardi.

The 50s group is similar to the former Quincy Father's Club, which began in 1953. Matt Ivil, Ron's father, was president of that club for many years and it's the reason why Ron organized the 50s group — to carry on the tradition of the original founders.

"We wanted to renew the high school spirit that seemed to have been lost," Ivil said. "We wanted to continue to help the kids and the community really. Between me and my father we had over 30 years."

"This group was kind of unique," said Moscardelli, whose father, Armando, was treasurer of the Quincy Father's Club. "It's just a group of Quincy guys that the city and school had been good to. We just tried to give something back. We tried to help the students out in some way."

The 50s group held its meetings at Moscardelli's Central Real Estate office at 128 McGrath Highway — which used to be the home of the Ivils and the location the Quincy Father's Club would gather.

"Every meeting was fun," Ivil said. "It was great. The fellowship. Getting together with the guys and telling stories."

One of the first acts the group did was present all-scholastic plaques to both high schools at halftime of the 1994 Thanksgiving game. The plaques, which commemorated every all-scholastic football player at both schools from 1928 to the present, were placed in each school's pride room.

The following May the group organized a reunion for Quincy High football teams of 1950-59. Over 400 people, including players, managers, coaches, cheerleaders, flooded the Quincy Lodge of Elks for the event.

In 1999 the 50s group held a Halloween dance fundraiser for Kevin Moore, a former Quincy High student and athlete who was seriously injured in a car accident in May 1998. Nearly 700 people attended the event, with $14,700 in proceeds assisting the Moore family.

Other events the 50s Alumni Benefit Fund has sponsored are: annual Halloween fund-raiser dances, an 85th birthday party for legendary football coach Bill Sullivan who died last March, the number retirements of Sullivan and the late former coach Munroe MacLean, a Valentine dance, and a tribute to both Sullivan and Zoia during halftime of the 2001 Thanksgiving game.

The committee has established two scholarships. In 1998 they started the Coach William Sullivan Scholarship Fund, given to students for their outstanding academic and athletic achievements.

In 2001 they held a Valentine dance in the memory of the late Bob Papile, a teacher at North Quincy High. With the money raised, they established a music scholarship in his name given to a student at Quincy, North and Braintree.

For the past three years, the group has awarded a Bill Sullivan Trophy to a member of the Quincy High football team during its annual banquet. And this year it plans to award a Quincy Father's Founders Award. Ivil says the group will continue to award the trophies and scholarships.

"I can't thank the group I had to work with enough," Ivil said. "I really couldn't do it without them. I also thank all the sponsors and anyone that was involved with the 50s group."

when junior Pat Malone pocketed a rebound at 13:03.

Quincy almost evened the score on several occasions in the third. With just under eight minutes left, sophomore Steve Bythrow kept the puck in the Quincy zone with great forechecking behind the Scituate goal. The puck squirted out in front to freshman Bryan Gilligan, who shot just high over the crossbar.

And with four minutes remaining, Matt Giordani skated down the right side, beat two defenders with a great individual effort, but couldn't squeeze the puck past the Scituate goalie.

"I think it's just kids panicking down there in front," Sylvia said. "We work on all these things in practice. You have to put it away. If you can't do that, you can't expect to win. There's no question about our effort. I think Joe Daley keeps us in game after game. We just can't seem to find a way to score."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said, "A ship in a harbor is safe, but that is not what ships are built for." . . . No ship ever left its harbor, but what its mariners were taking a chance – a chance that their skills were more potent than the stormy waves.

For that matter, we would never have had a country if there had not been brave, adventurous souls who were willing to take a chance to see if there really was "a pot of gold at the rainbow's foot." In taking this chance . . . using their opportunities . . . they founded and helped make a nation. . . Charles F. Kettering put it this way – "There will always be a frontier where there is an open mind and a willing hand."

What do you want most out of life? Take a chance on going after it. "Set sail gallantly." And make the most out of your life and your talents and your opportunities. You are at the helm of the ship of your life. . . and only by taking a chance – well-thought out in advance - can you make "port at the rainbow's foot."

"There is no security on this earth. There is only opportunity." -- General Douglas MacArthur

WINTER CAR CARE

AAA Recommends Emergency Equipment Kit

Because even the best maintained vehicles can fall victim to frigid winter weather, AAA recommends every vehicle carry the following items to ensure safe winter travel:

Flashlight - A working flashlight should be stored where the driver can access it without leaving the vehicle. That will enable the driver to see obstacles and be seen by other drivers when exiting the vehicle in an emergency. Also carry spare batteries.

Jumper Cables - Jumper cables can be an essential tool for starting vehicles with weak or dead batteries, but they should only be used by individuals familiar with the proper safety precautions. Vehicle owner's manuals should be consulted for instructions.

Abrasive Material - Sand or non-clumping cat litter can be spread under the wheels to improve traction when a vehicle becomes stuck in snow or ice. Special traction mats and even floor mats also can be used for this purpose.

Shovel - A small shovel can be used to carefully dig snow away from the wheels.

Warning Devices - Flares or reflective triangles alert other motorists that you are broken down or stuck and helps give them enough time to slow down in order to pass safely.

Blankets - Cold weather can quickly turn an inconvenient breakdown into a life-threatening situation. Blankets can provide valuable protection against the cold and can help keep you comfortable until help arrives. Floor mats and newspapers can also be used to provide insulation in emergencies.

Snow Brush/Ice Scraper - It's important that windows and lights are clear of ice and snow in order to maintain adequate visibility. The entire vehicle should be brushed clear so blowing snow does not become a hazard for other motorists.

Cellular Phone - A cellular telephone comes in handy when a motorist needs assistance in the event of a vehicle breakdown.

Make sure your car also has insurance information and a valid registration. You may also wish to have a disposable camera to have a record of any vehicle damage if involved in a crash.

Advice For Parents Of Young Drivers

Winter driving can be challenging to any motorist, but slippery roads can be especially difficult for novice drivers dealing with ice and snow for the first time, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Parents need to work with their teens to help them gain the experience they need for safe winter driving in the safest possible environment," said John Paul, AAA Manager of Traffic Safety and Public Affairs.

AAA offers the following tips to help parents teach their teens to drive in winter conditions:

• Under close supervision, let your teen practice slow speed maneuvers on a wide-open snow- or ice-covered parking lot. Have him or her practice hard braking and steering in skidding conditions.

• A novice driver's first on-the-road experience with winter-weather driving should not occur during a major snowstorm. Wait until conditions are less severe.

• Consider limiting your teen's driving on slippery conditions to daylight hours until they have gained experience.

• Remind your teen that driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol is dangerous under any conditions, and that the risk is even greater on slippery roads.

• Make sure the vehicle your teen is driving is equipped with essential emergency equipment, including a cell phone, flashlight, blankets, jumper cables, sand or non-clumping cat litter and a small shovel or ice scraper.

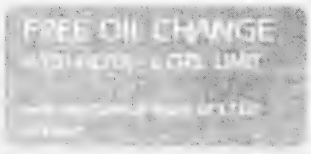
Helpful Cold Weather Vehicle Operation Hints

Cold weather can wreak havoc on your car. No surprise to the thousands of motorists across the nation that will try to start their car or truck tomorrow morning and hear painful ..."click"!!

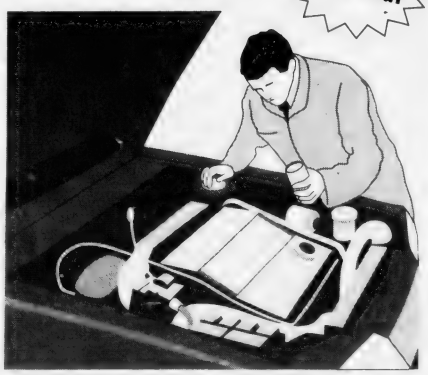
The Statewide Towing Association has some helpful suggestions for media and drivers alike in times of cold weather operation.

Maintaining your car is the first way to insure proper vehicle starts and operation. Lack of maintenance is one of the primary reasons why brutally cold or hot conditions cause vehicle failure. Following the recommended service intervals can prevent problems such as:

• Coolant failure: Coolant ages and can be diluted beyond the strength necessary for cold and hot operation. You can suffer a frozen radiator with the result an overheated engine on the coldest day.



• Oil failure: Old oil builds up sludge. This sludge can seriously affect viscosity and cause the engine to crank slower and wear faster.



• Battery failure: Always check your battery strength. One area frequently overlooked are the connections to the battery cables. They can become corroded.

• Frozen fuel line: Running your tank empty for extended periods of time causes condensation in the tank. This condensation forms water droplets in the gas, which in turn can freeze in your fuel line.

Another tip in cold weather: Always carry extra warm clothes and blanket in your car in case of a breakdown. You'll stay warmer while you wait for a Statewide Towing Association member to come service your vehicle.

Gas Additives

Q. Greg, I would like to know if the large grocery chains such as Costco, Safeway and Albertson's that sell gasoline have the proper detergents in it for helping to keep injectors clean? Or is the reason their gas is cheaper because they don't have additives? I have asked the station attendants and store managers, but nobody seems to know. I'm sure there are a lot of consumers out there are as interested as me. — *Bob R., Spokane, Wash.

A. Bob, first, I'm not sure what refinery fills the tanks at the places you mention, but most gasoline is basically the same and carries similar detergents. The United States demands that fuels burn similar in all engines.

Remember, too, that the low-cost no-name dealers have no affiliation with the major brands, forcing them to buy their gasoline from (guess who?) major refineries on the open market. Now, if you ask major brand suppliers about additives, you'll get a different story as they tout the impressive additives their gasolines contain.

However, make sure you keep asking questions about the gasoline you buy. If the attendant can't answer, call the main office, and I'll bet you'll uncover that the fuel does indeed have the correct additives. The companies you mention are quality companies, and I'll bet they purchase quality gasoline with the proper additives.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A misunderstanding about a colleague's suggestions could create a delay in moving on with your proposal. But by week's end, all the confusing points should finally be cleared up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel overwhelmed by all the tasks you suddenly have to take care of. But just say the magic word — help! — and you'll soon find others rushing to offer much-needed assistance.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Finishing a current project ahead of schedule leaves you free to deal with other upcoming situations, including a possible workplace change, as well as a demanding personal matter.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Turn that fine-tuned feline sensitivity radar up to high to help uncover any facts that could influence a decision you might be preparing to make. Devote the weekend to family activities.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A state of confusion is soon cleared up with explanations from the responsible parties. Don't waste time chastising anyone. Instead, move forward with your plans.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel obligated to help work out a dispute between family members. But this is one of those times when you should step aside and let them work out their problems on their own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to resolve an on-the-job problem without leaving too many ruffled feathers earns you kudos from co-workers. You also impress major decision-makers at your workplace.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Newly made and long-held friendships merge well, with possibly one exception. Take time to listen to the dissenter's explanations. You could learn something important.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be prepared to be flexible about your current travel plans. Although you don't have to take them, at least consider suggestions from the experts in the travel business.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A problem with a recent financial transaction could lead to more problems later on unless you resolve it immediately. Get all the proof you need to support your position.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Daydreaming makes it difficult to stay focused on what you need to do. But reality sets in by midweek, and you manage to get everything done in time for a relaxing weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to reach out to those in need of spiritual comfort makes you a much-revered, much-loved person in your community.

Tucker's lawyer called Burke's report laughable and said the college should be held accountable for understaffing the program.

"Is there anything in life that is solely one person's fault?" asked Attorney Thomas Gumey, representing Tucker. "This is a very distinguished woman with a great record and she's been hung out to dry. The easiest route for them was to blame it all on Faith Tucker, and that is exactly what the investigator, hired by the college, did."

For Outstanding Community Service

Edward Keohane Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Edward J. Keohane, a civic leader and activist with a life-long, deep passion for his native city, is The Quincy Sun Citizen of The Year for 2003.

Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership dedicated to promoting Quincy's historical, cultural and natural resources, was selected by a panel of judges from 36 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

Owner of the Quincy-based Keohane Funeral Service, he is the 19th recipient of the annual award for outstanding community service.

The award will be presented to him at a reception in April at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

"I am honored and appreciate being among the group of outstanding past recipients," Keohane said when informed by Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth of his selection.

Bosworth congratulated him and also the other nominees.

"Being nominated is an honor in itself," he said. "We again this year had a number of outstanding nominees."

Keohane was nominated for the award by Donald Uvanitte of Pelican Road, chairman of the Quincy Medical Center Foundation.

Uvanitte cited Keohane's "leadership of the Quincy Partnership and the sense of pride and spirit for the city of Quincy he instills in all residents for the Flag Day Parade and throughout the year."

Keohane has been chairman of the Quincy Partnership since it was formed in 1989 as a non-profit organization by a group of community minded individuals to enhance the quality of life in Quincy.

The group without fanfare has quietly raised many thousands of dollars for civic projects.

They include: Lighting the city's national historic landmarks such as United First Parish Church, Adams Academy, Thomas Crane Public Library and old City Hall.

Installing blue and gold "Welcome to Quincy" signs at the strategic gateways to the city.

Erecting a bronze statue of Abigail Adams and son John Quincy Adams beside United First Parish Church in 1997. The Partnership commissioned noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie to create the statue, which cost more than $60,000 and depicts Abigail about the age of 32 and John Quincy, the future sixth President, at age 10.

The Partnership turned to Lillie again for a life-sized bronze statue of second President John Adams, which was dedicated in November, 2001. The statue, which also cost more than $60,000, rests on the edges of City Hall Plaza. Adams appears to be looking across Hancock Street to his wife, Abigail, and son, John Quincy.

The Partnership's latest project is a large granite foundation which will be a focal point in the restored 80-acre Merrymount Park.

The group has raised $75,000 for the fountain which will have a 40-foot diameter pool at the bottom with a pedestal in the center and an 11-foot diameter, six and a half foot high bowl on it.

Recycled water will sprout 16 feet into the air.

Quincy's Ed Monti is the sculptor and the granite is from Stoney Creek, Conn.

Park Executive Director Tom Koch hopes to have the fountain dedicated by early June.

Council Moves For Homeowners' Relief On Taxes

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Seeking to provide greater tax relief for homeowners, the city council Monday night took the extraordinary first step toward temporarily increasing the city's tax classification above 175 percent, thus shifting a greater tax burden onto businesses.

On a close 5-4 vote, the council approved a home rule petition that seeks to take advantage of a newly-passed state law that allows cities and towns to reset their tax classification and shift more of the tax burden onto businesses and away from homeowners.

The proposal requires the approval of Mayor William Phelan, the state Legislature and Gov. Mitt Romney before it can be acted upon. If approved, the average homeowner in Quincy would save approximately $225 in their fourth quarter tax bill for this year, according to Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the Board of Assessors.

Dave Murphy, the mayor's director of operations, said Phelan has not made a decision on the proposal.

"He (Phelan) is considering the long-term and short-term impact of the proposal on the residential taxpayer," Murphy said Tuesday.

During last year's tax classification hearings, the mayor recommended keeping Quincy's tax classification at 169 percent.

If approved, the council would hold another tax classification hearing as soon as possible to set the new tax rate.

According to Fantucchio, the city could shift the tax

Councillors Criticize Mayor On White, Yip Dismissals

At Monday night's city council meeting, several councillors voiced their dismay with the way in which Mayor William Phelan dealt with the dismissal of two high-ranking city employees.

Phelan last week chose not to reappoint Walter White, the city's chief building inspector, and Jonathan Yip, Quincy's equal opportunity employment officer.

White, 50, immediately moved out of his office after being told by city Personnel Director Roberta Kety that he wouldn't be reappointed to another one-year term. He said no reason was given for his dismissal and was not aware that his job was in jeopardy.

JONATHAN YIP

Yip indicated he was given 40 minutes to clean out his desk and leave his office. He worked in the office of constituent services.

About 40 city officials, including many department heads, are appointed annually by the mayor with terms that start on Feb. 1. Phelan named Joseph Duca, a plan examiner in the building department, as White's interim replacement.

The council agreed it was

Cousin: Excess Spending The Culprit

QTA Membership Doubles In Response To Tax Hikes

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Membership has more than doubled in the Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA) since residents began receiving their latest property tax bills, according to the organization's president.

Alan Cousin, QTA president, said a growing number of frustrated residents are flocking to the group after receiving their most recent tax bills. Homeowners are facing an average 18 percent increase in their property tax bills, which translates into a hike of $550 per home.

The group claimed 66 members before the tax classification vote in December, said Cousin. That number has ballooned to 142 during the past month, he said. More new members are joining every week, he said.

"The sentiment I'm getting from people is that they are very angry about the magnitude of the tax increases," said Cousin. "They tend to feel pretty much the same as I feel, that there is plenty of room in city government to contain spending." QTA has declared a "tax emergency" and is putting together a plan to step up pressure on city officials. The group will hold a rally on Feb. 21 at City Hall, said Cousin.

ALAN COUSIN

The group intends to keep city officials' attention focused on the tax issue, and influence debate on the city's next fiscal budget, which will be proposed by Mayor William Phelan in the spring.

QTA recently ran an advertisement in the Sun asking residents to join the group as it steps up pressure to ease the property tax burden. Cousin said 20 residents joined the group after seeing the ad in the Sun.

More rallies and advertisements could be on the horizon, Cousin said.

He said residents had a similar reaction in 2002 when property taxes increased by nearly $500 a year, but this year's reaction has been more intense.

"We had a number of people joining up then too, but there is more passion now," he said. "When this happened two years ago most people thought it wouldn't happen anytime soon. We thought the mayor and city council got the message, but I guess not."

Cousin said the main culprit is runaway spending. Although the mayor complained about large cuts in local aid, the city's fiscal 2004 budget increased by more than $9 million, he said.

Much of the spending increase can be attributed to a $5.7 million hike for the school department's budget, said Cousin. Overall, the personal services budget approximately $1.4 million over the previous year, he said. Medical insurance costs and other employee benefits were up $3.6 million over fiscal 2003, he said.

The city is spending nearly $1 million more for waste collection, he said.

"The city made no substantial cuts to services and no layoffs," said Cousin. "Obviously, there is a need for public safety, public education and a good sanitation system, but they must be delivered as efficiently and cost effectively as possible.

"No department should be exempt from cuts," he said. "Every department needs to justify its level of staffing."

Overall, Phelan has done a good job in getting the city's financial situation under control, said Cousin.

"He's (Phelan) done a lot to stabilize the city's finances," said Cousin. "But I don't think he knew this was going to be the result. He should have been looking at other options for cutting spending."

Cousin said the city council shares the blame with the mayor.

"There's enough responsibility to go around," said Cousin. "The council did not do much in the way of cutting the budget."

A fire study is needed to determine whether it is necessary to consolidate fire stations, take equipment out of service or cut personnel, he said.

Cousin said the mayor should not implement the city council-backed ordinance that sets a minimum staffing level in the fire department. The measure is too costly, he said.

Another way to rein in spending is for the mayor to simply order each department to slash its budget by five percent, said Cousin.

Coughlin, Gardner Push Senior Safety

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner recently testified before the state Legislature's Joint Committee on Local Affairs in support of a home rule petition that would create Senior Citizen Safety Zones in Quincy.

Crafted last year by Coughlin, the measure will allow the city's traffic engineer to utilize special signage, signalization and road striping unique to the senior facilities including appropriately reduced speed limits.

Coughlin said the testimony was well received by the committee and Chairpersons Sen. Susan Fargo and Rep. Shirley Owens Hicks in particular.

Last year, Coughlin's proposal was adopted by the city council, signed by Mayor William Phelan and forwarded to the Legislature, where it was sponsored by Sen. Michael Morrissey. The Quincy Council on Aging supports the proposal also.

Successful enactment will require full legislative approval and the signature of the governor.

In their testimony, Coughlin and Gardner pointed out that Quincy holds the highest percentage of senior citizen resident of any comparable size city in the Commonwealth. According to the 2000 U.S. Census data, there are nearly 18,000 residents age 60 and over who reside in Quincy, many living in the 18 public and private senior residential facilities.

"Although mobile, these seniors are some of our most vulnerable residents," said Coughlin.

City Enforcing Overnight Parking Ordinances

The Quincy Police Department will be enforcing the city's existing overnight parking ordinances in neighborhoods throughout Quincy.

Residents should be aware that parking on a city street during the hours of 1 and 7 a.m. is illegal without an official city overnight parking permit.

The action comes in response to concerns that illegal parking may hinder emergency vehicles and concerns expressed by residents.

Overnight parking permits are available to residents without adequate off-street parking through the Quincy Police Department for an annual cost of $10. The department will investigate each application prior to issuing a permit.

For information on obtaining an overnight parking permit, please call the police department at 617-479-1212.

Council Votes Water Bill Deferrals For Seniors

The city council approved a number of items Monday night, including a measure that allows seniors to defer their water bills and a proposal that reduces the interest rate on those deferrals.

On a unanimous vote, the council approved Mayor William Phelan's proposal allowing certain seniors to defer their water bills.

According to the proposal, senior citizens age 65 or older and who have a household income of $40,000 or less will be able to defer their water bills. Seniors qualify for the deferral if they also qualify for the real estate tax deferral, according to the Board of Assessors office.

Also, seniors would have to own property in the state for at least five years to be eligible, according to city officials.

The council also approved a proposal that effectively lowers the interest rate on water bill and property tax deferrals.

Pushed by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the proposal ties the interest rate on deferrals to the Prime Rate.

Since state law sets the current rate at 8 percent, Coughlin's measure would cut the interest rate in half because the Prime Rate stands at approximately 4 percent.

The council also approved an amendment by Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis that lowers the interest rate charged to estates where taxes are deferred. Currently, state law sets the rate at 16 percent, but Davis' proposal also ties the rate to 200 percent of the Prime Rate, which would be 8 percent.

Councillor John Keenan, Council President Frank McCauley and Coughlin voted against the amendment, maintaining it would not help Quincy residents. Coughlin said the state Legislature may not look favorably on the amendment when it is submitted.

In other business, the council signed off on McCauley's measure allowing the council to appoint a successor for an At-large seat if it becomes vacant during the first year of a term.

McCauley pushed the home rule petition, saying special elections are too costly. City Clerk Joseph Shea estimated the costs associated with holding a special election to be in the $60,000 range.

Coughlin, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro dissented, saying voters should determine a successor.

The council already fills vacant At-large seats during the second year of a term. McCauley's measure would not affect vacancies for Ward councillors, which are appointed in the second year, but elected in the first year of a vacancy.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 8, 1692, Abigail Williams and Betty Parris are declared by a doctor to be "under an evil hand," precipitating a series of sensational accusations of witchcraft in the town of Salem, Mass. Williams and Parris were the teenage niece and daughter of local pastor Samuel Parris, who was immediately suspicious of the influence of his slaves, Tituba and John Indian.

• On Feb. 4, 1926, the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers forecasts the success of a group of young actresses. The group's published list of "Baby Stars" included Joan Crawford, Mary Astor and Fay Wray, all of whom became Hollywood hits.

• On Feb. 6, 1937, John Steinbeck's novella "Of Mice and Men," the story of the bond between two migrant workers, is published. The story brought national attention to Steinbeck's work, which had started to catch on in 1935 with the publication of his first successful novel, "Tortilla Flat."

• On Feb. 2, 1943, the last German troops in the Soviet city of Stalingrad surrender to the Red Army, ending one of the pivotal battles of World War II.

• On Feb. 3, 1953, French oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau publishes his most famous and lasting work, "The Silent World."

• On Feb. 5, 1994, Byron de la Beckwith is convicted of the assassination of civil-rights leader Medger Evers 31 years earlier, ending the lengthiest murder case in American history.

• On Feb. 7, 1999, King Hussein of Jordan, the 20th century's longest-serving executive head of state, dies, and his son Prince Abdallah bin Hussein ascends to the throne. King Hussein was a member of the Hashemite dynasty, said to be in direct line of descent from the Prophet Mohammed.

Kelly Thinks Hancock Slighted

Leo Kelly was browsing in a gift shop when he spotted it.

A multi-color embossed copy of the Declaration of Independence.

The bold signature of John Hancock – one of the most famous autographs in the world – caught his eye.

"It makes you think of the major roles these two men played in the creation of this precious document," Kelly says.

"Two patriots born right here in Quincy, just down the street from one another."

Kelly doesn't think Quincy does justice to Hancock and Adams for their part in this historic event.

Especially Hancock whom he thinks deserves more recognition overall then he gets.

"Unfortunately, John Hancock sort of walks in John Adams' shadow when it comes to promoting Quincy's history and tourism," he says.

He wants to do something about that.

And is.

He couldn't resist buying that 3 x 3 1/2 foot, matted and framed copy of the Declaration of Independence with the American flag superimposed.

And now, back as Ward 1 councillor, he is donating it to the city to be hung in the City Council chamber.

Kelly says City Clerk Joseph Shea is having a plaque appropriately engraved to be placed with it noting, in part, that Adams and Hancock were born in Quincy within a mile of one another.

Hancock, as president of the Second Continental Congress, was the first to sign the Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776. Adams, who would become the second President, was a delegate and signed later.

Hancock wrote his name with a flourish, supposedly according to history, "so that King George III could see it without his spectacles."

Thomas Jefferson was the author of the document of freedom. But Adams played a key role in getting it adopted. Jefferson himself acknowledged that when he praised Adams as . . . "the most efficient agent in procuring a public Declaration of Independence."

Adams was born Oct. 30, 1735 in the cottage that is now 133 Franklin St. It is a major tourist attraction as is the cottage next door at 141 Franklin St. where John Quincy Adams, his son and sixth President, was born July 11, 1767.

These are the only side-by-side Presidential birthplaces in the nation. And as such, a "must" for tourists coming to the city.

But Hancock's birthplace no longer exists.

The house was built by his father, Rev. John Hancock, fourth minister of First Parish Church, in 1733. His son was born there Jan. 12, 1737.

CITY COUNCILLOR Leo Kelly with the framed multi-color copy of the Declaration of Independence he is donating to be hung in the City Council chamber. He thinks John Adams and especially John Hancock deserve more recognition for their roles in the creation of the document of freedom. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

But the house was destroyed by fire in May, 1759.

The site is now that of the Adams Academy, a former boys school at 8 Adams St. and now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

The academy was deeded by Adams in July, 1822 with the provision that "it be erected over the cellar that was under the house built in 1733."

So, only the cellar of John Hancock's birthplace is still there.

And that may be the reason Hancock is hardly mentioned during the tourism season. There is no John Hancock Birthplace to visit.

Quincy is well promoted as the birthplace of father and son Presidents.

But Kelly thinks Quincy should do a little more about the fact that it is also the birthplace of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence who also was a Massachusetts governor.

And as governor in 1792, he signed a Massachusetts General Court act incorporating the North Precinct of Braintree as the town of Quincy, named for Col. John Quincy, great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Hancock signed it though there were many people who wanted the new town named for him instead.

Kelly says he would like to see a permanent John Hancock exhibit at the Adams Academy.

There is a bronze bust of Hancock on the lawn outside the academy presented to the city by the John Hancock Insurance Company.

But Kelly doesn't think that's enough.

"I just feel we could do more to recognize John Hancock than we do," he says.

And he hopes his copy of the Declaration of Independence hanging in the city council chamber will get things moving.

Technical Ed Center Forming Advisory Board For Marine Technology Program

The Quincy Public School's Center for Technical Education will be forming an advisory board to investigate the possibility of starting a Marine Technology program.

Since Marina Bay is the largest marina in the state and the Fore River shipyard may incorporate marine activities in its new form, the Center is looking to provide state-of-the-art, industry certified programs.

The Center is working with the South Coastal Workforce Investment Board (WIB) on the matter. Colleen Price, director of WIB, and Ed Lofgren, owner of 3A Marine Service, have agreed to sit on the new advisory board.

The board will be charged with surveying the community to determine the need; putting together a business plan to assess the curriculum, space, equipment, and staffing requirements, and investigating funding sources.

Anyone interested in working on the project should call the Center at 617-984-8731.

THIS IS A 1926 POSTCARD view of the gateway marking the foot of the incline of the Granite Railway in West Quincy. The first commercial railroad in America, it began operations in 1826. In 1926, Henry M. Faxon was president of the Railway Company which also included the Granite Rail Quarry. He organized a large celebration in West Quincy and East Milton Square to commemorate its 100th anniversary. The two granite obelisks with bronze plaques were erected by the railroad in 1921 at that time a motorized truck, seen at the top of the hill, was used to bring granite down the incline. The original granite tracks for the old horse drawn cars can be seen to the left of the truck roadbed. The idea of the railway was conceived and carried out by Gridley Bryant to transport the granite for the Bunker Hill Monument from the Bunker Hill Quarry through East Milton to the tidewaters of the Neponset River. Unfortunately, the current condition of this historic landmark is a disgrace to the city's heritage.

Cutting Bank On Firefighting Is An Insult

As a police officer with the Department of Mental Health police force for over 18 years, I believe public safety should be our first priority. Police and fire protection can not be had on the cheap.

The fire chief reportedly told the firefighters union that Rescue 1 would continue to be used only 30 percent of the time and Engine 4 most likely will be taken out of service.

In a city that has seen large property tax increases for homeowners, cutting back on firefighting is an insult.

I agree with Ward 3 Councilor Kevin Coughlin, "My concern is that we chronically underfund and understaff the fire department. We talk publicly about having it both ways, but the residents are the people who are getting it tucked to them, with dramatic increases in property taxes and a diminishment in one of the most crucial public services the city can provide."

Pols who play games with fire departments ended up playing with political fire. Taxpayers want spending cut but not at the firehouse. Such policies are penny-wise and pound-foolish.

Councilor Coughlin is right on target and has been an advocate for his ward constituency and for the entire city.

If City Hall can shut down Engine 4, it can shut down any engine company. Today it is Beale Street. Tomorrow, who knows?

Public safety, public works and public schools. If a pol fails in any of these, he can quickly become an ex-pol.

Taxpayers, homeowners, renters and business folks don't want engine companies closed. We pay enough taxes without losing fire trucks too.

Roadside Killings In Iraq

Every time I read the newspaper or watch the news about our servicemen being killed by roadside mines it irritates me because our so-called military geniuses can not stop the carnage.

Well, if they would look back at World War II on Omaha Beach in Normandy where I came ashore on June 6, 1944, they would have seen what I saw and heard.

As I came ashore lying in the sand I heard a sound of a treaded vehicle and rolled over fast. What I saw was a vehicle that resembled a tank, but this one had a 15-foot pole sticking out where a 75mm gun would be and attached to the upper part of the vehicle was this pole with flailing chains beating the sand and exploding the mines underneath. This vehicle moved up Omaha Beach exploding everything else that remained hidden.

Our "experts" over there probably never heard of a vehicle such as this. In addition, where self-prop grenades are used against our troops, the spot where the grenades land are useful to determine from what area they were launched, then napalm should be used against them.

Let our commanders get some "guts" and do what has to be done or more Americans are going to die.

Council Votes $4,000 For Jamaica Trip

This Week
1964
40 Years Ago

The City Council approved the expenditure of $4,000 for the purpose of inspecting first hand the composting plant of the National Organic Research Corp. in Jamaica. That company was the low bidder to handle the city's rubbish and garbage contract.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and all city councillors were scheduled to travel to the Caribbean, except David McIntosh who declined the trip. Health Commissioner Dr. Richard Ash also turned down the trip, saying there was no reason for him to go, since he already played his part, in approving a site for the facility.

Despite some telegrams critical of the use of public funds, the mayor said it was not a junket. He noted that he didn't even like to fly.

He said the quick two-day visit could result, in the long turn, in the saving of millions of dollars of taxpayers' money.

PEABODY SIGNS LAND BILL FOR VO-TECH

Gov. Endicott Peabody signed the home-rule petition filed by Mayor Della Chiesa that would allow for the construction of the new vocational technical school on Faxon Field. State legislation was needed because the land was originally given to the city by Henry M. Faxon to be used for park purposes only. Even though the Faxon heirs approved this new public use, a change in the law was still needed.

The new $3.6 million facility was planned to provide programs for 1,000 students.

RED SOX SALUTE AT ROTARY CLUB

The Quincy Rotary Club held a "Salute to the Red Sox" at the Neighborhood Club, with team players and executives in attendance.

Dick Radatz, top relief pitcher, said if the hitters kept up with the pitchers, the team would be in the pennant race.

Manager Johnny Pesky was asked why there were no trades during the off season. "It's simple," he replied. "They wanted all our top players, Bill Monbouquette, Radatz, Frank Malzone and Carl Yastremzki."

QUINCY-ISMS

Ralph Papile's nomination to the state Board of Registration of Barbers was sent to the Executive Committee for confirmation by Governor Peabody. . . . Some 400 production workers from Boston Gear Works attended a meeting at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus to protest the indefinite suspension by the company of the union grievance committee. . . Treasurer and Collector Thomas Sheerin borrowed $1 million in anticipation of tax receipts, to keep the city operating. . . Quincy High School basketball used the famous Quincy fast break to defeat Revere, 105-94. Top scorers were Captain Ron DiRamio, Jack McWilliam, Rob Gustavson, Ed Kusser and Tom Gurney. The JV team also won, 67-59. Top scorers in that game were Carl Scanlon, Mike Jordon and Jack Brennan. . . Sandra McDuff of Ruggles St., a senior at QHS, won the Betty Crocker "Homemaker of Tomorrow" award. . . The Quincy Veterans Council met at the Caddy Marine Detachment on Centre St. with Commander Lawrence Butler presiding. . . Gerald Wash was the fifth son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Walsh of Becket St. to be awarded the Boy Scout Ad Alteri Dei medal. . . Former pastor of Salem Lutheran Church, Rev. Carl Johansson, was reported safe following disturbances in Tanganyika where he was serving as a missionary. . . Ruth Pabst of the personnel department filled the position in the elections office of Ellen Colman who retired. Rose Rozner filled a vacancy in the building department. . . NQHS sophomore Martin Jacobs secured the loan of a $2,000 computer from the Digital Equipment Corp. for use in the science and math classes. Teacher Wilma Shields noted it was amazing what one had to know just to play with it. . . The Board of Appeals approved an addition to the Zildjian Company's plant at 34-36 Farrington St. . . . Trustees of large parcels of North Quincy marshland, Michael Verrochi and Fred Gardiner, opposed Rep. Joseph Brett's proposal to have the MDC take the 25 acres for recreation purposes. A letter from City Council President Joseph LaRaia, who also served as chairman of the Industrial Development Commission, was presented in opposition. . . Ninth grader Cheryl Volpe was on the high honor roll at Sterling Junior High School.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Stuffed Calamari

Do I talk about food while bowling in a league? Well, even it. I don't my bowling friends do especially when my friend Donna asks me "what's cooking."

And so it was last week when I told her I had made stuffed calamari for Christmas Eve, she said it was one of her favorites and used to be made by her aunt.

She asked me for the recipe, and even though I have printed this before quite awhile back I thought it bearted repeating. I

Incidentally, when our friend Karen came into our conversation and I mistakenly called the entree "stuffed squid"....she got squeamish until I changed it to "stuffed calamari" and then she thought that sounded better and remembered she enjoyed eating them.

Stuffed Calamari

6 to 8 calamari

6 slices white bread (soaked and squeezed)

3 tablespoons tomato sauce

1 cup seasoned bread crumbs

1 teaspoon fresh parsley

1/4 cup grated Romano cheese

First try to buy a larger calamari (easier to stuff). Then soak the bread. Add the tomato sauce, bread crumbs, parsley and grated cheese and mix until well blended. If it seems too dry, add a smidgen of water to it.

Season accordingly to your taste with extra salt and pepper if you prefer.

After the mixture is done, sit down on a comfortable chair because the stuffing of the calamari takes a little while. Stuff each one about three quarters full and then at the edge of each calamari slip a toothpick to close them.

The next thing is to make a quick tomato sauce with olive oil, garlic and onion and one large can of crushed tomatoes in a large frying pan so that the calamari can sit next to each other. Cook the sauce for about 15-20 minutes.

Now very gently, add the stuffed calamari one at a time and cook covered on slow heat stirring gently until done...Calamari will turn a light color. Once they are in the sauce, it does'nt take longer than 20 minutes to cook.

If you are not going to use it the day you prepare it, it can be stored in the refrigerator.

Serve it over a favorite pasta...I usually use either angel hair or linguine...and sprinkle grated cheese over them. The calamari should cut in nice inch pieces. It might seem like a lot of work, but it is worth it if you enjoy it.

P.S. Figure on one slice of bread for each calamari, so if you are only preparing a couple or so, figure accordingly.

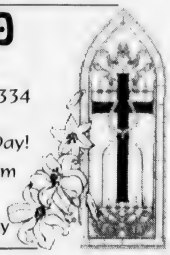
Open House Thursday At South Cove Center



South Cove Community Health Center, 275 Hancock St., North Quincy, will hold an open house today (Thursday) from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

South Cove was founded in 1972 by a group of community members who recognized a need for accessible health care for the growing immigrant and medically underserved population in Boston's Chinatown.

To meet the needs of the growing Asian population in Quincy and to increase accessibility a second clinic was opened here eight years ago.

At the present time South Cove serves 6,000 patients with over 27,000 visits. There are 165 bilingual staff members serving more than 14,500 patients a year at four locations in the state.

City Awarded $92,500 State Grant For Montclair Open Space

Quincy has been awarded a state grant of $92,500 which will enable the city to acquire open space in the Montclair area.

The Self-Help grant from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs' Division of Conservation Services was announced jointly by Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin.

"I am extremely pleased that during this time of great fiscal crisis the state was able to provide financial assistance to help acquire much needed and scarce open space in the city of Quincy," Morrissey said.

The property to be acquired is located adjacent to Ardell Street, Harriet Avenue and the President's Golf Course in Montclair.

"The grant will assist in acquiring 3.1 acres of additional open space for the so-called Gardner Project, a top acquisition priority contained in the city's Open Space Plan," Ayers said.

"I applaud the city's effort in aggressively pursuing state funding to acquire greater open space in the city," Tobin said.

The Self-Help program gives financial assistance to municipal conservation commissions to acquire property for passive outdoor recreation and for natural resource purposes.

What goes on inside the Quincy Masonic Building? Who are the Masons? What do they do?

The imposing Indiana limestone building at 1170 Hancock Street, has been a familiar landmark and the home of Quincy's Masonic community since it was dedicated in 1927.

To most people the Masonic fraternity is a mystery, and that's largely our own fault because, over the years, we have chosen to let our good works speak for themselves. But too many folks still believe that Freemasonry is a secret organization.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Yes we have some secret handshakes but, if we were truly a secret society, we would not have our familiar square and compasses emblem over the door and our members probably wouldn't wear lapel pins and rings. We're proud of who we are and what we do as Masons.

Masons have been helping to make Quincy a better community since the formation of Rural Lodge in 1801. And many of the things we do might surprise you.

Certainly you're familiar with the Shriners Burns Hospital in Boston. Every child receives treatment absolutely free. The hospital has no billing department. But, did you know that every Shriner first belongs to a Masonic Lodge?

Masons seek men of good character, who believe in God, to join in our good works. But, Masonry is not a religion. We are the world's oldest and largest fraternity of men based on a foundation of brotherly love, relief and truth. In fact, we like to say that Freemasonry makes good men better!

In future issues of this newspaper we'll be telling you more about the Masons of Quincy, what we do and how you can become a part of our good works while sharing fellowship and having fun. Yes, fun!

Masonry offers you the opportunity to improve your community and to improve yourself. For more information without any obligation, call the number below.

8th Annual Presidents' Day Winter Carnival Feb. 16

The 8th annual Presidents' Day Winter Carnival will be held Monday, Feb. 16 from noon to 4 p.m. in Quincy Center.

The event will feature live music, Presidential re-enactments, magic shows, hay rides, ice sculptures and more activities for children. There will also be an outdoor miniature golf course, a moon walk and free hot chocolate available at the skating rink on the Thomas Crane Public Library lawn.

"As the City of Presidents it is important to celebrate our heritage as the birthplace of John Adams and John Quincy Adams and honor the presidency and the men who have served in that position," said Mayor William Phelan. "This patriotic event promises fun, plenty of activity and also boasts an educational value making it the perfect way for families to start off school vacation week."

The National Parks Service will also be participating in the event with activities at the Visitors Center in Presidents Place. Children will be able to enlist in General Washington's army and partake in marching and drilling exercises as well as gain a better sense of what life was like in Colonial America through the many activities offered.

The majority of the activities take place indoors, but there will also be street performers, such as stilt walkers and a chain saw artist on hand for outdoor performances. Indoor activities and performances will take place at City Hall, Presidents Place Atrium and the Church of the Presidents.

Admission is free.

For more information, call the Park Department at 617-376-1254.

Seasonal Job Opportunities At Adams National Park

Adams National Historical Park announces season employment opportunities are available for the 2004 season as Park Guides and Visitor Use Assistants.

Park Guides conduct tours through the historic structures, participate in educational programs and special events, and perform other duties as assigned. Visitor Use Assistants staff Visitor Center information desks; answer visitor questions; assist visitors with tour planning; and collect fees for tours.

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of United States Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams; the "Old House," home to both presidents and their descendants; and a Visitor Center.

For more information regarding these positions, contact Adams National Historical Park Personnel Office at 617-773-1177, or the National Park Service Seasonal Employment Program toll-free at 1-877-554-4550. Adams National Historical Park, National Park Service is an equal opportunity employer.

36 Other Nominees For Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

There were 36 other nominees for the Quincy Sun 2003 Citizen of the Year.

They are, in alphabetical order with a brief description of their nomination ballot:

Paul Baharian, executive director of senior citizens housing at 1000 Southern Artery which is rated in the top 10 in the United States. He is dedicated to the health and happiness of the 643 senior citizens living there."

Steven Buckley because of "hundreds of community service, barbecues and community parties." Serves as president of the Quincy Community Police Auxiliary."

Alan Cousin, head of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, who has "sounded the alarm as the threat to working people's savings and way of life in Quincy."

The late Joseph Desmond for "his leadership, generosity and selfless contributions to the City of Quincy, to education, church and community that have no doubt made it a better place to live." Served as operations manager of a manor department store as well as president of St. Ann's Parent Teacher Organization and was active in St. Ann's Parish.

Charles W. Djerf, 50-plus years as a teacher in Quincy and public address announcer of Quincy and North Quincy football games for the last 37 years.

Frannie Donovan for "all his painting he has done at Father Bill's for nothing and for his work with Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services."

Ken Donovan for his "commitment to Quincy for life involvement with North Quincy High School sports. Always willing to give and help the need. Exceptional job with Christmas Parade."

David Ezickson who has "both individually and through his service in many, many organizations shows his concern and sensitivity for the well being and dignity of his fellow human beings."

Denise Fasoli, "the best mother in the world. She always goes the extra mile for you."

Robert Foley, a father of 8 children, grandfather of 30 and great-grandfather of 7, who has coached Little League Baseball in Quincy for more than 40 years.

John Gillis who has "always exhibited compassion for others" as the former Quincy city clerk and now a Norfolk County Commissioner. "John Gillis is about the little things that make the world a fun and better place to live. He does it without looking for public recognition or praise."

Bob Hanna, Quincy Crime Prevention officer for his many years of dedication to the prevention of crime in Quincy.

Frances "Jean" Kennedy, "an amazing woman, mother, role model but most of all 'friend.' An active member of the community who has involved with Girls and Boy Scouts, 4-H Clubs, Harbor View Residence Committee, St. Boniface Carnival Committee and Germantown Neighborhood Council.

Tom Koch for the "tremendous job getting Adams Field ready for this past summer's Babe Ruth World Series. Great representative of the City of Quincy."

Bettyanne Muir Lang and Matthew Lang. Bettyanne has been the dedicated director of the Interfaith Social Services, Pantry Shelf and Career Closet for many years. Her husband, Matthew, has devoted his retired years to the I.S.S. Pantry Shelf and Career Closet. They are always trying their best to make life better for everyone who enters the facility.

Jimmy Liang who as the first ever Chinese-American candidate for Quincy City Council has developed a strong following, nearly won and is a role model for area Asian-Americans.

Helen MacDonald, chairperson of the Quincy Housing Authority's Senior Residents' Council, for her genuine concern for the rights of seniors and the disabled.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, who works "diligently and effectively to bring business into Quincy Center as well as doing everything she can to help them remain in Quincy Center. She gives her time, expertise and energy to serve on various and diverse Boards in Quincy." (Manning removed herself from consideration to serve on the judging panel.)

Frank McLaughlin who "is responsible for beautifying Quincy with the flowers he selects and plants in the flower beds all over the city."

Richard Meade for four decades of community and volunteer efforts to his hometown. "He is truly a man for others. The recently retired Quincy planning director "has been an outstanding public servant to the taxpayers of the city."

Leonard Morris and John Donlon because of the "design and five years of work on the World War II Memorial Statue in front of City Hall. Both were D-Day soldiers and Battle of the Bulge veterans. Both active in veterans affairs."

Bob and Gloria Noble for "their tireless support and contributions to the City of Quincy."

John Noonan, a "wonderful advocate for the elderly, a good spokesman and always available to them."

Lawrence Norton, decorated disabled Marine veteran of the Vietnam War who has been active in veterans organizations for more than 30 years. He has also been active in the "Toys for Tots" program in Germantown and the building committee for the expansion of the Germantown Neighborhood Center, as well as other youth and community activities.

Anet Paglierani for her "40 years of unselfish dedication to the Quincy Art Association, along with her tireless efforts to bring art awareness to Quincy Public Schools and Quincy private schools."

Deacon John Salenius of Sacred Heart Parish for his "generosity, kind and compassionate care, quiet devotion and wise counsel to those in need, especially the sick, the youth, the poor, the elderly and those who grieve the loss of love ones."

Bonnie Seeley, pharmacist and owner of Blackwood Pharmacy in Wollaston, for her "dedication to her profession and her unstinting dedication to the senior citizens of Quincy shown by her compassion for the seniors and the time and effort she spends to improve their well-being."

Former Mayor James Sheets because "he did a lot of good for us Quincy residents. We was always available to hear our comments and complaints. Good to our seniors and made Quincy a nice place to live and visit."

Thomas Shepherd for his "unselfish commitment towards volunteering his time helping others, whether it is dealing with the veterans by assisting the V.A. hospitals every month, coordinating senior citizen dinners or assisting children with sporting events and Toys for Tots."

Dr. Domenic M. Strazzula who "takes care of my eyes. This eye doctor is nice. He got me my eye glasses. He is a kind man."

Zaida Shaw, as president of the Ward 2 Civic Association, she helps all ages in the community, especially with children and is a deeply religious and peaceful person.

Robert Troop, a beloved teacher at North Quincy High School since 1969 and has invested countless hours in young people as a football and hockey coach and as the faculty advisor for the Asian Culture Club. Also active at Union Congregational Church.

Stephen Verhault because he devotes a lot of time to Quincy Youth Sports, whether it's hockey, baseball or soccer. He is also a firefighter so he helps people.

John Yazwinski for his dedication in helping the poor and homeless. "There is no better work than this."

The late Anne Marie Zukauskas, former principal of Broad Meadows Middle School, who "believed in the abilities of each and every student and dedicated her life to teaching each student to use his/her ability to the fullest."

Edward Keohane Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

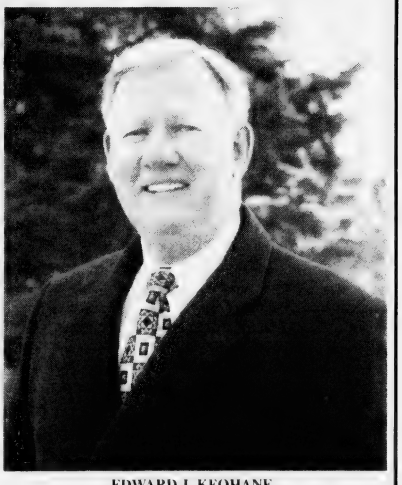
plays a major role in Quincy's widely heralded Flag Day Parade, joining the founding Koch Club as a co-sponsor several years ago. This year's parade will be the 53rd annual.



Keohane is actively involved in other community areas in addition to the Quincy Partnership and Flag Day Parade.

He is chairman of the Colonial Federal Savings Bank Board of Directors, past president of the Quincy Rotary Club and a Paul Harris recipient and Past Grand Knight of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus.

He is vice president of the Bosox Club, a member of the Quincy 2000 Executive Board, the Quincy Tourism Board, Quincy City Club, 100 Club of Massachusetts, and Presidents Circle at Providence College.

He is also a past member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and the Archbishop Williams High School Board of Advisors and former chairman of St. Ann's Parish Council.

A second generation funeral director, he is owner of Keohane Funeral Service, which includes the Pyne Funeral Home in Hingham and the Keefe Funeral Home in West Roxbury.

EDWARD J. KEOHANE
Quincy Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

He is a member of the National Selected Morticians, serving as president in 1994-1995, and a member of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors Association of which he was president in 1981-1982. He is also a member of the National Funeral Directors Association, a member of the International Order of the Golden Rule and a past board member of the New England Institute.

Keohane is a graduate of Archbishop Williams High School, New England Institute, Boston, and Providence College, where he received a Bachelor of Arts in Economics in 1965.

Keohane is married to the former Joan Hagan. They have four children, Kristin, John, Dennis and Joseph, and eight grandchildren.

Robert Curry, chairman of the Quincy Medical Center Board of Directors and a member of the Citizen of the Year judging panel has long known Keohane.

"Ed is a most worthy recipient of the award for all the good things we know he does," says Curry. "But he also deserves it for all the good things he does privately and quietly to help people and doesn't want anyone to know about."

QUINCY COLLEGE EMPLOYEES Janet McKeen and Susan DeStefano, sort through some of the more than 150 jackets that the college recently collected and delivered to the Saint Francis House in Boston. The charitable initiative, "Operation Cover Up," encouraged college employees to donate jackets, sweaters and vest to help those in need stay warm this winter.

Quincy College Delivers Over 150 Coats To The Saint Francis House

In the midst of some of the coldest temperatures in recent history, Quincy College recently delivered more than 150 coats to the Saint Francis House in Boston.

The clothing drive, known on campus as "Operation Cover Up", encouraged college employees to bring in warm jackets, sweaters, and vests to help those in need "cover up" and stay warm this winter.

Saint Francis House will distribute the articles of clothing to those in need in the Greater Boston area.

"Over the past several semesters there has been a great turnout for the community service projects coordinated by the College as public employees, faculty and staff have taken an especially aggressive role on campus," said Quincy College President Sean Barry.

"As is the mission of many institutions of higher education similar to Quincy College, community outreach is becoming increasingly important. I'm pleased to see our campus community taking action."

Since the campaign followed the holiday season, Barry noted many employees had clothes to spare and welcomed the chance to do some cleaning of closets along with a good charitable deed.

This collection could not have come at a better time, said Michael Collins, Director of Campus and Community Development. "With the recent temperatures dropping well below freezing, it is great to know that our college community is making a difference in the Greater Boston area."

The Saint Francis House, which distributes nearly 1,600 winter coasts each year, was very pleased to accept the donations from the college. Founded in 1985, the non-profit, non-sectarian organization is New England's largest and most comprehensive daytime shelter providing basic and emergency services, rehabilitative programs and job skills training as well as transitional housing for poor and homeless men and women in Boston.

The Saint Francis House is dedicated to caring for those who cannot help themselves, and to assist those who are able to take steps to move themselves up and out of poverty, unemployment, and homelessness to functional lives of self-respect and hope.

Quincy College has also just begun a fundraising campaign for the AIDS Action Committee.

Similar to the campaign run last month to raise money for the Quincy Interfaith Shelter, the College will have a "Jeans Day" tomorrow (Friday) to benefit the Aids Action Committee.

Employees who choose to make a donation may, on Friday, dress down and wear jeans to work.

Additional fundraising campaigns are being planned for the spring semester that began this week.

Exceptional Senior Living means an exceptional lifestyle

"My family and I wanted the best for our mom. We picked River Bay Club, not because I work here but because our family believes River Bay Club is the premier retirement community on the South Shore! Mom is enjoying the activities and friendship of those around her and she now has someone to enjoy meals with every day. And knowing when the time comes that mom needs a little extra help, we know she will be well taken care of. Stop in, we can give you the same peace of mind my family now enjoys."

Quincy Delegation Files Bill To Help Seniors Pay, Dispute Their Taxes

Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation has filed legislation to help senior citizens to pay property taxes and to dispute their bill and property values.

The legislation was filed jointly by Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ronald Mariano and Bruce Ayers.

The first piece of legislation would change the interest rate on seniors who decide to take advantage of the law that allows seniors to defer payment of taxes on their property.

Current law allows a senior citizen homeowner to defer up to 50 percent of his or her proportional share of the fair cash value of the property that is taxed to a future date provided that the homeowner or their heirs or assignees pay 8 percent simple interest on the amount owed.

"The high interest rate deters senior citizens from taking advantage of the law," Morrissey said.

The legislation, he said, would change the interest to be paid to that based on the United States Treasury Bills as of July 1 of each year. The legislation would limit the interest rate and cap at a rate not to exceed 8 percent. The United States Treasury Bills are substantially lower than 8 percent and better represent what bank loans are, Morrissey said.

"Also, by setting the interest rate cap at 8 percent, it prevents the interest from skyrocketing in case of high inflation as seen in the mid-1980s," Ayers said.

Another bill filed by the legislative delegation would reduce the financial burden to citizens who appeal the local tax assessor's tax decision. Currently, a homeowner can appeal the local assessor's assessment of his or her home to the state's Appellate Tax Board.

"However, the filing fee for the Appellate Tax Board is based on the valuation of the property and not a person's ability to pay or their income," Tobin said.

The Appellate Tax Board in conjunction with the Department of Revenue set the fees. Below is a table of the fees for property valuation.

The legislation establishes a flat fee for persons over the age of 65 who have a gross income of up to 200 percent of the federal poverty level.

"The fee would be $25," Morrissey said.

"The high property values have made it especially difficult on senior citizens because many live on fixed income," Mariano added. "The process of appealing a property assessment can be a costly endeavor."

"The legislation hopes to reduce the fee to a fixed rate, and give lower income senior citizens the opportunity to appeal the local board of assessor's decision for a reasonable fee," Morrissey said.

| Appeal from the Board of Assessors | Fee To be Paid |
|---|---|
| • All property with assessed value $20,000 or less - | $10 |
| • All property with assessed value over $20,000 and not in excess of $100,000 | $50 |
| • All property with assessed value over $100,00 and not in excess of $999,999 | $100 |
| • All property with assessed value over $1,000,000 | $0.10 per $1,000 of assessed value. Maximum fee: $5,000 |

WINTER CAR CARE

Different Vehicles Require Different Winter Driving Habits

Motorists should be aware that different types of vehicles have particular operating characteristics that change the way they handle on icy or snow covered roads, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Knowing the different winter weather capabilities of a vehicle can mean the difference between a safe trip and serious trouble," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Motorists should carefully read their owner's manual for information on their vehicle's equipment and handling characteristics."

Front wheel drive vehicles generally handle better than rear-wheel-drive vehicles on slippery roads because the weight of the engine is on the drive wheels, which improves traction. The back end of rear-wheel-drive cars tends to slide from side-to-side during turns on icy roads.

While many motorists are now driving sport-utility vehicles and light trucks that can be excellent for driving in difficult conditions, AAA warns drivers not to become over-confident.

"Sport-utility vehicles and pickup trucks with four-wheel-drive make it easier to get moving on snow-covered roads, but they don't stop any quicker than other vehicles," Paul said. "Drivers still need to slow down and keep a safe distance behind the vehicle in front of them."

Drivers of pickup trucks with rear-wheel-drive need to be especially cautious on slick roads because these vehicles have very little weight over the wheels that are propelling the vehicle and are prone to rear-wheel skids on slippery roads.

A vehicle's braking system also determines how motorists should operate in winter weather. Anti-lock brake systems (ABS) can provide a significant stopping advantage on slick roads, but are only effective if properly used. When stopping a vehicle with anti-lock brakes in slippery conditions, motorists should apply steady pressure to the brake pedal. The ABS will automatically pump the brakes to keep the wheels from locking and the vehicle from skidding.

Drivers of cars without ABS should gently apply pumping pressure to the brakes on slippery conditions to avoid wheel lock-up.

Additionally, many new cars feature traction control, which prevents wheel spin during acceleration. This is very helpful when initially trying to get moving on slippery roads. Many cars are equipped with stability control, which helps prevent skidding.

5 Things You Should Know About Auto Insurance

(NAPS) — Having a better understanding of some basic auto insurance principles and terms could help you be certain you're protected — and could even save you money.

According to a survey done by the Progressive group of insurance companies, most consumers don't take time to regularly review their auto insurance policy to be certain that it still reflects their needs. Auto insurance is complicated. Here are five things you should know:

Types of Coverage: There are two general "types" of coverage available. One, generally referred to as first party coverage, protects you and your vehicle. First party coverages include comprehensive, collision and primary medical, including medical payments and, in some states, Personal Injury Protection (PIP). The second type, called third party coverage, protects those to whom you might cause injury. Third party coverages provide protection for bodily injury and property damage you cause to others.

Use Your Deductible To Save Money: If you purchase comprehensive and collision coverage, you'll be asked to select a "deductible" amount — that is, the amount you'll pay on a claim before the insurance company begins paying. When selecting your deductible level, consider how much you could afford in the event of a crash. A higher deductible helps to keep overall cost of auto insurance down. According to the Insurance Information Institute, increasing your deductible from $250 to $500 can save you up to 20 percent on comprehensive and collision coverage.

Make Sure Your Policy Reflects Your Needs: Have you recently gotten married, divorced, moved, or have a teenage son or daughter who is now driving? Be sure to talk with your independent agent or insurance company to be sure that the coverage you purchased still reflects your needs.

Prices Vary: Auto insurance rates are based on each company's expected cost of doing business, which included the cost of paying claims. In a study of rates provided to more than 100,000 consumers, Progressive found that the average difference in premium based on a six-month policy for the same driver with comparable coverages was nearly $600 from company to company.

Go Online: A wealth of information is available on the Internet at sites like progressive.com.

Auto Tips

(NU) - A mechanical failure can be deadly in harsh weather, so preventive maintenance is a must. Here's advice from the nonprofit National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

Get engine driveability corrected at a good repair shop, and put a bottle of fuel deicer in your tank once a month to help keep moisture from freezing in the fuel line.

In addition, the cooling system should be flushed and refilled as recommended. A 50/50 mix of antifreeze and water is usually recommended.

Gas Additives

Q. Greg, I would like to know if the large grocery chains such as Costco, Safeway and Albertson's that sell gasoline have the proper detergents in it for helping to keep injectors clean? Or is the reason their gas is cheaper because they don't have additives? I have asked the station attendants and store managers, but nobody seems to know. I'm sure there are a lot of consumers out there are as interested as me. — *Bob R., Spokane, Wash.

A. Bob, first, I'm not sure what refinery fills the tanks at the places you mention, but most gasoline is basically the same and carries similar detergents. The United States demands that fuels burn similar in all engines.

Remember, too, that the low-cost no-name dealers have no affiliation with the major brands, forcing them to buy their gasoline from (guess who?) major refineries on the open market. Now, if you ask major brand suppliers about additives, you'll get a different story as they tout the impressive additives their gasolines contain.

However, make sure you keep asking questions about the gasoline you buy. If the attendant can't answer, call the main office, and I'll bet you'll uncover that the fuel does indeed have the correct additives. The companies you mention are quality companies, and I'll bet they purchase quality gasoline with the proper additives.

Council Moves For Homeowners On Tax Relief

classification to as high as 199 percent in fiscal 2004. The overall increase from 169 percent to 199 percent amounts to $281 savings for the average homeowner, she said.

If adopted, the city's tax classification would jump to 199 percent and then drop to 170 over a five-year period. The city's highest rate would be capped at 170 percent, according to the law.

In December, the city council voted to increase the city's tax classification from 169 to 175 percent, the highest under state law at the time. But Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi sought to delay a vote, saying the council might be able to take advantage of the state law if it were passed. The move was defeated, however, on a close vote.

This time, the result was different. Along with Raymondi, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner and Councillor Joe Finn voted in favor of the proposal.

"It's not often we get a second opportunity to correct something," said Raymondi. "This home rule petition recognizes the reality in Quincy that homeowners are paying a disproportionate share of the tax levy because of huge increases in real estate values. We need to focus on the tremendous amount of hurt out there."

Opponents of the proposal say it will drive away businesses and ultimately hurt taxpayers, who will be asked to assume an even greater portion of the tax burden.

"We took this vote last year and the majority voted against it," said Council President Frank McCauley. "I think this will cause some chaos down in the assessors office – they have their hands full now. It's just another kick in the pants to businesses."

McCauley said a continued erosion of business property values will hurt homeowners in the long run.

If Quincy adopts the new state law, taxes on a typical residential property valued at $289,700 would drop from its current $3,638 bill to $3,412. Taxes on a typical commercial property valued at $289,700 would jump from the current $7,598 to $8,641, or a $1,042 increase.

13 Quincy Youths Inducted Into The National Honor Society

Thirteen Quincy residents enrolled at Boston College High School were among 103 seniors and juniors recently inducted in the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society during a recent ceremony at the school's McNeice Pavilion.

They are:

Kevin M. Barry, John Chiu, Mark E. Costello, Jr., Elvis Ge, John A. Kozak, Derek C. Lee, Michael E. Lynch, Coleman A. McDonagh, Ryan S. Quinn, Daniel M. Rich, James T. Spellman, Steven H. Tran, and Vincent J. Zhu, all of Quincy.

The guest speaker was Judge Robert J. Kelly, United States Office of Hearings and Appeals, and an alumnus of BC High, class of 1957.

A reception for the inductees and their parents followed the ceremonies.

The National Honor Society is established under the National Association of Secondary School Principals to provide recognition to high school students who have clearly distinguished themselves in their school and community for scholarship, character, leadership and service.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 80 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

6 Residents On UMD Dean's List

Six Quincy residents have been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at the University of Massachusetts at Dartmouth.

They are: Christina A. Conley, Kimberly J. Holmes, Roger D. Layden, Christopher M. Lockhead, Michelle M. Shea and Caitlyn C. Slowe.

Caroline Maus On Holy Cross Dean's List

Caroline Maus has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at the College of Holy Cross in Worcester.

A sophomore chemistry major, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Maus of Quincy.

3 Residents On Framingham Dean's List

Three Quincy residents have been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Framingham State College.

They are: Nicole D. Swimm, Nancy M. Yankun and Julia G. Wilkinson.

Wilkinson also made the President's List, having been named to the Dean's List for three consecutive semesters.

Men Like To Say It With Flowers

(NAPS) - Love may be full of surprises - but there's one you may not have heard before.

According to a recent survey, 85 percent of men in America believe that simple romantic gestures - such as giving flowers - are important to a relationship, while only 75 percent of women feel that way.

In fact, men are two to one times more likely to buy flowers for a loved one on Valentine's Day.

• For the Valentine's Day season, most cut flowers come from Ecuador and Colombia. Those flowers are cut, packed and handed over to shippers such as UPS to transport and clear the blooms through the US Department of Agriculture, all within 24 hours of picking.

UPS is the largest cargo shipper through Miami International Airport, which as the major gateway for flowers from South America bound for the United States.

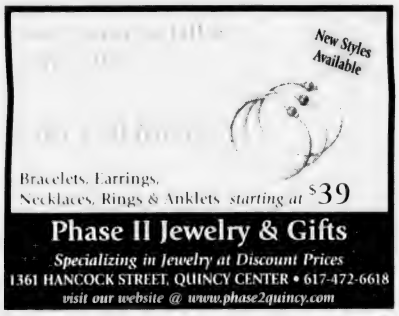
• America's florists report 130 million flowers were sold in the United States for Valentine's Day, 2003. UPS transported seven million pounds of roses alone.

• Because roses must be between 34 and 45 degrees Fahrenheit to stay fresh, UPS flies them in on special refrigerated cargo planes.

• The Valentine's Day order rush begins approximately three weeks before that most romantic day of the year.

• Almost 66 percent of roses purchased for Valentine's Day are red. Of the remaining Valentine's Day roses, 10 percent are a mix of colored roses, nine percent are pink, five percent are peach, four percent are yellow, one percent are white and two percent are other colors.

Studies show men respond well to vivid, crisp colors such as red, orange, purple and blue. Women tend to relish pastel tones of pinks, peaches and lavender.



• The 1990s spawned a virtual baby boom of rose varieties. Today there are close to 120 rose varieties commercially available—up from the few dozen choices found in flower shops in the 1980s.

MDA Mock Lock-Up Feb. 28

They Will Show A 'Big Heart For Jerry's Kids'

Prominent Quincy citizens, civic leaders and executives will be accused of "having a big heart for Jerry's kids," Wednesday, Feb. 28.

They are volunteering to be "arrested and serve time" in a mock jail at the Outback Steakhouse in an effort to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA)

The MDA Lock-up from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. will be hosted by the Outback Steakhouse, Quincy Police Department and the Quincy Firefighters Local 792. Several local businesses are supporting the community event: "jailbird" cellular phones are provided by Cingular, jailhouse "grub" provided by the Outback Steakhouse, as well as a variety of gift certificates donated by local businesses.

The one day event is expected to raise over $15,000, which will remain locally to assist those in the Greater Boston Area who are effected by a neuromuscular disease.

MDA is a voluntary health agency working to defeat neuromuscular diseases through worldwide research, comprehensive services, and far-reaching professional and public health education. In addition to funding groundbreaking research, MDA maintains some 230 clinics nationwide, including 5 local area clinics, local support groups, and a summer camp program for kids with muscle-wasting diseases. MDA is a nonprofit recognized by the American Medical Association with a Lifetime Achievement Award "for significant and lasting contributions to the health and welfare of humanity." MDA does not take United Way or government funding.

Anyone interested in making a contribution to "bail out" a current jailbird or participating themselves in a MDA Lock-up can contact the local MDA office at 781-575-1881.

As Tax Time Nears

Take Advantage Of Home-Ownership Tax Breaks

By CHRISTOPHER HARADEN

It's almost tax time, and as you prepare for the Internal Revenue Service's April 15 filing deadline, don't forget to take advantage of all the tax breaks that come with owning a home.

As a homeowner, you can deduct mortgage interest, points paid in conjunction with obtaining a loan to purchase or refinance your house, as well as property taxes paid to your city or town.

Mortgage interest

The largest tax break from Uncle Sam is the interest you pay on your mortgage each month. For loans up to $1 million, all of the interest you paid in 2003 is deductible, as is interest paid on home equity loans and lines of credit.

Mortgage interest on second homes is fully deductible. However, the IRS establishes a usage test – you must spend at least 14 days at your vacation home, or more than 10 percent of the number of days it's rented out (whichever is longer), or it could be considered a rental property and not a second home.

Points

If you paid mortgage points when buying or refinancing, they are fully deductible in the year paid if they meet certain requirements, including: - The loan is secured by your primary residence.- The points are not paid in place of other fees, such as in exchange for lower appraisal costs, inspection charges, title searches, and legal fees.-

Points are computed as a percentage of your mortgage amount.- The amounts are noted on your the settlement statement as points, although they may be paid by either the buyer or seller.

A homeowner can fully deduct points in the year paid on a refinance loan if he or she uses the cash to improve his primary residence.

The same rules apply to home equity loans or lines of credit.

Points paid on a loan secured by a second home or vacation property, however, must be amortized over the life of the loan.

Taxes

The other large deduction homeowners are entitled to comes from municipal property taxes. Taxes are an annual deduction each year you own your home.

Selling Your Home

If you sold your primary residence and want to move into a larger home, the profit from the sale could be exempt from taxation.The law exempts up to $250,000 in gain ($500,000 for married joint filers) as long as the taxpayer owned the property for at least two years and lived in it for two of the five years prior to the sale.

If the sale occurs before the ownership and residency requirements are met, a tax may be due on sale profits. The IRS provides some tax relief if the sale is because of a change in the owner's health, employment, or unforeseen circumstances, such as a death, a divorce or a legal separation. In these cases, the tax-free gain amount is prorated.

What's Not Deductible

Some of the costs of home ownership cannot be written off, however. The largest non-deductible expense is insurance.

Private mortgage insurance required by the lender for loans with less than a 20-percent down payment is not deductible. Nor can you deduct any of your hazard and flood insurance premiums.

Other nondeductible expenses include homeowner association dues, any prepayments of loan principal, depreciation of your home, general closing costs and any local assessments or betterments.

Repairs are not deductible.

Neighborhood Housing Services Workshop Feb. 7

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in collaboration with Rockland Trust, is sponsoring a first-time homebuyer workshop Saturday at the west branch of the Brockton Public Library, 540 Forest Ave., Brockton.

The one-day workshop will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend this educational workshop. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate professionals. Participants will have the opportunity to be prequalified by a lender at this workshop.

Downpayment grants up to $10,000 per family are available for first-time buyers who are purchase-ready and income eligible. Participants must complete this workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $10 fee per person to cover the cost of workshop materials. Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31, or visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org.

Dishwasher Tips

Q: When the dishwasher is running, water droplets leak from around the door. Is this normal in older washers (i.e., condensation), or is the seal broken? — *Lacy T., Valdosta, Ga.

A. Water leaking around the door of a dishwasher is most likely caused by a worn or cracked gasket. However, the door itself may be at fault, too — and in older models both these problems may be evident.

Find out by inspecting the gasket for cracks, warping or other damage. (If it's gunky or moldy, wipe it down with a vinegar-water solution first.) A gasket that shows signs of deterioration must be replaced. Find the correct replacement by 1) looking up the dishwasher model number on the Internet, 2) calling the manufacturer or dealer with the problem, or 3) by removing the gasket and taking it to the home-improvement store to find a match.

To remove the gasket, turn off electrical power at the main circuit and remove the bottom dish rack. Use a screwdriver to remove the screws (or pry up the tabs, if those are used) and to help detach the gasket from the door.

Check the door catch as well. If this is loose, leaks can occur around the top and upper sides of the unit. Readjust the catch by loosening its retaining screws, repositioning the catch, and tightening the screws.

Q: My dishwasher won't drain all the way at the end of a wash cycle — water is still pooled in the bottom when I open the door. How can I fix this? — *John L., Reno, Nev.

A. The first thing to check is the drain hose leading from the bottom of the dishwasher to the sink drain. If the hose is damaged or has a kink or clog in it, replace it.

Turn off the electrical power at the main circuit and cut off the water supply to the dishwasher. Remove the dishwasher's lower panel by taking off its fasteners — either retainer clips or screws — and lifting it away.

The drain hose is the clear or opaque plastic tube clamped to the pump assembly. This tube runs from the dishwasher to the underside of the sink, where it's attached to either the sink drain or, if you've got one, the garbage disposal.

Place a shallow bowl or pan beneath the pump assembly to catch any water that may spill. Using pliers or a screwdriver, loosen the clamp and remove the drain hose from both the pump assembly and from underneath the sink. Drain extra water out of it, and install a replacement using new clamps. (A replacement hose typically comes with clamps, but bring the parts with you to the store when buying new items.)

Restore water and electrical power, and test the dishwasher. If water still doesn't drain properly, contact a repair technician.

Quincy's Bonnie Hirtle Sets School Scoring Mark

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

When she was just a timid freshman, Bonnie Hirtle was hesitant to pull the trigger with her outside shot.

"She was nervous because she didn't want to step on the toes of the upperclassmen," said Bob Noble, who coached her that season. "You could see her potential. I encouraged her to shoot the ball."

And four seasons later, she's made history with her sweet shooting touch.

Last week, the senior guard became Quincy High School's all-time leading scorer when she scored 16 points in a 50-44 loss at Whitman-Hanson — eclipsing the previous record held by Kerri Connolly (1992-96) by a point with 1,139.

"It's a tremendous achievement to be the leading scorer all-time," said head coach Jeff Bretsch, who was an assistant in Hirtle's first season. "It's a testament not only to her talent but her consistency. She's gotten it done year after year."

"I'm happy for her and what she's accomplished," said Noble, who also was the coach when Connolly reached the milestone. "She's come a long way. She was a shy freshman when I had her. She was obviously a very good player. We needed her abilities out there on the floor. There was no sense in waiting so we put her out there. It's all come to fruition."

Hirtle's arrival has coincided with the revival of the program. The Presidents went from zero wins her first year to qualifying for the tournament last year for the first time in 20 years. And they're on the verge of locking up another postseason appearance this season.

Quincy (9-5 overall, 5-3 Atlantic Coast League), which needs one more win to secure a spot, played Nauset Tuesday and will host Sandwich Friday night at 6:30 and Randolph Saturday.

Hirtle pumped in 26 points to lead the Presidents to a 57-45 win at Dennis-Yarmouth last Friday night. Senior guard Sarah Shea scored nine points and dished out six assists. Junior center Alysia DiMuzio added nine and senior forward Brittney Tobin eight.

BONNIE HIRTLE, shown here driving to the hoop against Plymouth North Jan. 19, is Quincy High School's new all-time leading scorer. The senior scored 16 points in a loss to Whitman-Hanson last week to break Kerri Connolly's record of 1,138. She has 1,186 career points as of last Friday.

Quincy Sun photos/Trish Bossart

"We were real sloppy in the beginning," Bretsch said. "We started to execute better in the second half. We controlled the play. We did what we wanted to do, instead of what they wanted to do. It was a big win on the road."

Last Thursday, Quincy suffered a heart-breaking 67-66 loss to Hingham — a team that routed them in the first round of the tournament last year.

The Presidents played a flawless first half, building a 43-24 lead heading into the break. "That was the best half I've ever seen the kids play," Bretsch said. "We didn't miss any shots, passed well, moved without the ball. In the second half we just fell apart."

Quincy turned the ball over 20 times in the second half, and its 19-point lead disappeared with seven minutes left in the game.

"I was calling a timeout every 30 seconds to try to calm them down," Bretsch said. "We just kept turning the ball over. We had trouble getting into our half-court offense. It was the same thing last year. We didn't respond to their pressure."

Hirtle tallied 21 points and sophomore Jessica Page scored a season-high 14 points. DiMuzio added 13 and Shea nine.

In Hirtle's record-setting game against Whitman-Hanson last Tuesday, Quincy stayed close but tired down the stretch against the league's first-place team. DiMuzio registered a double-double with 13 points and 16 rebounds and junior forward Nicole O'Sullivan added six.

"It was a disappointing loss," Bretsch said. "They are a very deep team and they just wore us out. They made it their mission not to let Bonnie get the record against them. That motivated them."

BONNIE HIRTLE, the school's all-time leading scorer, has been just as successful on defense over the course of her career.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL students last Friday held a Patriots Tailgate Party as part of Catholic Schools Week to show their support for New England in Super Bowl XXXVIII, which the hometown team won, 32-29, over the Carolina Panthers. # Raiders Need Rally To Make Tournament

ICE HOCKEY

By CHRIS POISSON

As has been the case the past several seasons, the North Quincy High School hockey team needs to make an improbable late-season run to qualify for the state tournament.

"We have our backs against the wall, so we'll see what happens," said head coach Bob Doyle.

North Quincy (5-8-1 overall, 2-5-1 Old Colony League) needs to go at least 4-1-1 in its final six games to earn a postseason ticket. It hosted Bridgewater-Raynham Wednesday and will travel to Barnstable Saturday night at 8.

After pulling out consecutive late-game victories, the Red Raiders were hoping to catch Falmouth off guard last Saturday night at Quincy Youth Arena.

Instead, they spent the night just trying to catch up with the speedy Clippers and were shut out, 2-0, and outshot, 47-7.

"We exhausted a lot of energy trying to corral a fast-skating team," Doyle said. "It's frustrating because I thought we should have come out with more of a chip on our shoulder, more of a spark."

After a scoreless first period, Falmouth scored the only goal it needed with about eight minutes left in the middle frame. Peter Drumgole beat goalie Jon O'Driscoll with a power-play tally. North Quincy tried to open the game up in the third period but to no avail.

"That didn't work out well," Doyle said. "The puck was in our zone for 90 percent of the game. We couldn't do much of anything. Jon O'Driscoll gave us everything he had. We kind of let him down."

Last Wednesday, North Quincy faced off against cross-town rival Quincy and escaped Quincy Youth Arena with a 6-4 victory to complete the season sweep.

The Red Raiders dominated the opening period, outshooting the Presidents, 20-2, to build a 3-0 lead.

Senior tri-captain Rich Stone struck at the nine-minute mark with assists from Kyle Carmody and sophomore Andrew Donovan.

Late in the frame North Quincy scored a pair of goals in a 49-second span. Sophomore Chris Tufo pocketed a power-play goal with an assist from junior tri-captain Paul Graham with 2:45 left and Stone netted his second with 1:56 left as Graham and Tim Sommers assisted.

"We came out flying, just like in the first game," Doyle said. "We got off to a quick start and that's what we were hoping for."

Quincy showed its resiliency in the second as it closed the gap to 4-3 by the end of the period.

Giordani made it 3-2 with about three minutes left as McKeon assisted.

With 1:17 left, Graham stole the puck at the blue line, split a pair of Quincy defenders and rooted a shot under the crossbar for a 4-2 advantage.

The Red Raiders, though, quickly gave the goal right back. Senior Jake McQuinn converted a feed from sophomore Mike McPherson just 30 seconds later to make it a one-goal game heading into the final frame.

"We kind of laid down," Doyle said. "But I have to tip my hat to Quincy, they did a tremendous job of fighting back. I don't know what (coach Bob) Sylvia said to them between periods."

The Presidents potted the equalizer less than a minute into the third when senior Brendan Craig scored with junior Matt Graham and McKeon assisting.

They continued to hound North Quincy and almost scored the go-head goal midway through but a shot sailed wide of the cage.

After Carmody was called for his third penalty, Doyle called a timeout with 6:30 left in the game to try to restore order.

"Quincy was all over us," Doyle said. "We played kind of tense. We relinquished the lead and we were flat-footed. We were rattled. The timeout calmed us down."

North Quincy killed the penalty, and with 1:50 left on the clock Graham delivered the game winner with Carmody and Stone assisting. Stone added an empty netter to finish with a hat trick.

"We were down 3-0 and to the kids' credit they came back," Sylvia said. "It showed our kids have a lot of spunk. The game was decided in the last two minutes. North has an abundance of seniors. They're a veteran team. I thought our kids hung well with them."

Quincy was without senior captain and 24-goal scorer Josh Giordani, who injured his ankle Jan. 24. He has missed four games and probably the rest of the season.

"Obviously we're hurting without Josh," Sylvia said. "He's the guy the kids look up to and he's the one that can put the puck in the net. Would he have been a factor in the North game? All I can say is 4-4 going into the last four or five minutes I would've liked to have had him on the ice."

Quincy has had a tough season to this point, posting a 4-10-2 record. On Monday afternoon, a talented Duxbury squad routed them at Quincy Youth Arena. Freshman Bryan Gilligan scored the lone goal.

"We just ran into a real good hockey club and we have too many young kids out there," Sylvia said. "What we try to say to the kids is, 'Use this as a measuring stick. If you want to play with the big boys, then you better make the sacrifices in the offseason. That comes to weightlifting and playing hockey.' We're just trying to get the kids to believe in themselves and to keep working."

Recreation Dept. Offering Girls' Soccer Skills Program

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer two soccer skills programs for girls as part of its expanded after-school and evening activities utilizing neighborhood school gyms during non-school hours.

The program, offered free to Quincy residents, will be held on two separate days and for two separate age groups. Both programs will be at the Broad Meadows Middle School gym.

On Mondays beginning Feb. 9, the program is for girls in grades 5 through 7. There is a session from 5:45 to 7 p.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m.

On Thursdays beginning Feb. 12, the program is for girls in grades 8 through 11. There is one session from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Both sessions will offer the same instructional material. Participants may register for only one session. Registration will be held on the first night of each program. After registration period there will be a full program of skills on the first night. Participants are asked to wear sneakers and appropriate gym attire.

Each program will feature activities and instruction designed to improve the fundamental soccer skills of each youngster. Participants will also take part in mini-games and contests.

The program will be directed by Paul Bregoli, head coach of girls' soccer at North Quincy High School, and Don Martin, head coach of girls' soccer at Quincy High School. They will be assisted by members of the Recreation Department staff.

For more information call the Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Quincy-North Girls' Hockey Can Drive

The Quincy/North Quincy High School girls' hockey team will hold its annual can and bottle drive Sunday, Feb. 8, from 10 a.m. to noon in the North Quincy High School parking lot.

Cans and bottles can be dropped off during those hours, or if more convenient, call 617-328-6466 by tomorrow (Friday) to arrange for a pickup.

Basic Boating Courses

The Quincy Police Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, announces the first of three basic boating public safety courses will be held Saturday, March 13.

Scheduled for three consecutive Saturdays, the course will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, 137 Bayview Ave., next to the Quincy Yacht Club.

Two additional courses will be held April 10, 17, 24 and May 1, 8, 15.

For course information or to register, contact the Massachusetts Environmental Police Department Boat & Recreational Vehicle Safety Bureau, 1019 Route 132, Hyannis, MA 02601, at 617-727-8760 or 508-790-9360.

Sculpted Legs

Q: I understand that spot training in one particular part of the body won't necessarily reduce body fat in that area. I am having difficulty seeing results with my glutes and hamstrings. Is it possible for me to sculpt and define my glutes and hamstrings without the rest of my legs getting too big? — W.A. *Hartford, Conn.

A: Yes, you can sculpt and define your muscles without them getting too big. The type, intensity and frequency of the exercise routines you complete is one factor that will determine the results you receive. Other factors include genetics and proper nutrition.

That being said, spot training cannot produce every desired result. It is not possible to control the location of where we lose body fat. Choosing workouts that keep your total body strong and muscles in balance is the only way to achieve overall body fat loss. Scott's important [illegible] and resistance [illegible] yourself.

[illegible] to be trained [illegible] people [illegible] target, take the [illegible] real progress. You have to become creative. Try new forms of exercise. Switch out your workouts. Keep an exercise log so you can see what might be working and what isn't.

If you're worried about developing too much muscle mass in your legs, combine strength training with classes such as kickboxing, yoga and Pilates, all of which engage the hamstring and glute areas. Swimming is also a great workout for your total body, legs included.

Due to the high repetitions of the those activities, you should see great results. Remain patient and give your body a chance to change — it will not happen overnight.

Finally, don't underestimate the significance of genetics and proper nutrition when focusing on toning and losing body fat. You can't control your genetic makeup, but you can prepare yourself for setting realistic expectations by understanding how you are built and how your body responds to exercise. Without proper nutrition, you are hindering your ability to see great results. A very large part of body fat loss is achieved by practicing a balanced nutrition plan that supports an active lifestyle.

A complete exercise and nutritional program is truly the key for reaching your fitness goals.

Do's And Dont's Of Weight Loss

Whether your goal is to get rid of a little holiday weight gain or to improve your health in the New Year, sticking to a weight-loss resolution post-January can be a challenge.

Below are 10 real world "Do's" and 10 real world "Dont's" from Karen Miller-Kovach, M.S., R.D., chief scientist at Weight Watchers International, to help keep your New Yea's weight-loss resolution:

Do . . .

• Monitor your progress. Weighing yourself once a week, logging your food and activity, and monthly sessions with a tape measure record your progress to keep you motivated.

• Choose to eat healthful, wholesome foods from all the food groups. That's the only way you're assured of getting the essential nutrients you need.

• Exercise. While a recommended goal for weight loss is about an hour a day of moderate activity, anything more than what you're doing now is a plus.

• Eat breakfast every day.

• Take a multiple vitamin-mineral supplement that provides about 100 percent of the % Daily Value.

• Eat plenty of fruits, vegetables, low- and non-fat dairy products, and whole grains. They enhance weight loss, provide eating satisfaction, and provide lots of health benefits.

• Learn positive coping skills so that you don't turn to food for comfort.

• Drink at least six cups of water every day.

• Eat the foods that satisfy you — some people are satisfied with a piece of chicken, while a baked potato satisfies others. Find what satisfies you and include it in your food plan.

• Benefit from the experience of others. You can never have too many tips and strategies in your weight-loss tool kit.

Don't . . .

• Forget that calories count. With all the hype about weight loss, eating fewer calories and exercising more calories away is the bottom line in losing weight.

• Follow a diet. Learning and sticking to healthy habits is what ultimately gets you to and keeps you at a healthy diet.

• Risk your health to drop a few pounds. Losing weight improves your health — but not if you do it with a crash diet or one that promotes depriving yourself of essential foods.

• Go it alone. Getting support from others — family, friends or a weight-loss group — makes the weight-loss journey less lonely.

• Be duped by the latest fad. Find what works for you and stick with it.

• Obsess. The most successful weight losers have learned the skill of flexible restraint — limiting what they eat, but doing it in a way that allows for the ups and downs of daily living.

• Drink your calories, eat them. Solid food provides greater eating satisfaction.

• Let others tell you what's right for you. You need to lose weight for yourself, at your own pace, and in your own way.

• Set unrealistic goals. Shoot for an initial weight-loss goal that's about 10 percent of current body weight and expect to lose 1-2 pounds per week.

• Get distracted. Losing weight takes time and it's easy to let life derail your efforts. Take the time to re-commit yourself to losing weight on a regular basis so that it stays on your "A" list of priorities.

More than 20 years after the epidemic began, AIDS is one of the leading causes of death among Latinos ages 25 to 54. For more information, call 1-800-342-AIDS.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

NO MORE SUGAR TO HELP MEDICINE GO DOWN

Dentists have welcomed recent moves to remove sugars from medicines in an attempt to reduce the associated risk of tooth decay. At the same time there was some question as to whether the replacement sugar free alternatives may, themselves, cause tooth decay. This concern arose out of the fact that some sugar free products require the use of weak acids in their ingredients to make them more palatable and optimize their formulation properties. In the case of long-term use of such medications, it was wondered if they might erode dental enamel. Fortunately, new research on the matter concluded that the sugar-free medicines (including liquids/syrups, effervescent tablets, and chewable tablets) were no more acidic than the sugar-containing counterparts and were no more erosive.

For years people have known that sugar is not healthy for teeth. Has sugar done damage to your mouth? We are trained to detect and treat any decay sweets may have caused. We will discuss your particular problem and recommend the treatment that is right for you. Be sure to visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we feature state of the art treatment procedures for your entire dental needs. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

Florence Pomfret, 83

Retired Secretary

FLORENCE POMFRET

A funeral Mass for Florence (Doyle) Pomfret, 83, of Quincy, a retired secretary for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, was celebrated Jan. 30 at Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

She died Jan. 26 at Quincy Medical Center.

Mrs. Pomfret worked for the state social services and welfare departments for 20 years. She retired in 1985.

She was a member of the Sacred Heart Travel Club.

Born in Boston, she was raised in South Boston and graduated from South Boston High School in 1938. She lived in Quincy for 50 years.

Wife of the late Joseph L. Pomfret, she is survived two sons, James J. Pomfret of Baltimore and William L. Pomfret of Weymouth; a daughter, Joyce M. Maxwell of Milton, New Hampshire; a brother, George "Whitey" Doyle of South Boston; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Donations may be made to the Sacred Heart School, 20 Glover Ave., North Quincy, MA 02171.

Donald R. Ferguson, 45

State Trooper

A funeral service for Donald R. Ferguson, 45, of Quincy, a state trooper, was held Jan. 31 at Shepherd Funeral Home in Kingston.

He died Jan. 26 at Quincy Medical Center just days before he was to retire from the State Police and move to Florida. He was assigned to the governor's office.

Born in Framingham, Mr. Ferguson lived most of his life in Kingston and graduated from Silver Lake High School in 1976. He earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Curry College and graduated from the Massachusetts State Police Academy in 1992.

He was first assigned to the State Police barracks in Foxboro. He spent the last 10 years at the State House providing security for the governor.

He completed the Boston Marathon four years ago and ran in several other road races. He was also a certified physical fitness instructor.

He is survived by his parents, Donald T. and Joyce E. (Eales) Ferguson of Kingston; a sister, Penny Aldrovandi of Plympton; two nieces and a nephew.

Burial was private.

Joseph P. Malvesti, 92

Retired Quincy Fire Lieutenant

JOSEPH P. MALVESTI

A funeral Mass for Joseph P. Malvesti, 92, of Quincy, a retired Quincy Fire Department lieutenant, was celebrated Jan. 31 at St. Agatha's Church in Milton.

He died Jan. 28 at Weymouth Healthcare Center after a long illness.

Mr. Malvesti was one of five brothers on the Quincy police and fire departments who served a combined 150 years with the city. In October 2001, a plaque honoring their service was dedicated at the West Quincy fire station, from which Mr. Malvesti retired in 1975.

He was appointed to the fire department in January 1944 and served 32 years.

In 1968 he received the Cyril P. Morrisette American Legion Post's first Heroism Award for rescuing a drowning victim from Black's Creek while he was off duty.

Mr. Malvesti was past president, vice president and longtime treasurer of the Quincy Firemen's Relief Association. He also headed the Quincy Fire Department's Blood Bank for the American Red Cross.

As a young man, he played semi-professional football for the Quincy Manets from the mid-1920s through the mid-1930s. He captained the 1932 City League championship team.

Born in Milford, he was educated in Quincy and was a lifelong resident of the city.

He is survived by his wife of 64 years, Delia R. (Lombardi) Malvesti; a son, William M. Malvesti of Weymouth; a daughter, Joan P. Malvesti of Quincy; three brothers, John Malvesti, retired Quincy police sergeant, of Weymouth, and Louis Malvesti and Anthony Malvesti, both retired Quincy fire lieutenants, of Quincy; three sisters, Mary Purpura of Weymouth, and Rose Carella and Amelia Mattes, both of Quincy; and three grandchildren.

He was the father of the late Army Col. Richard J. Malvesti and brother of the late Nicholas Malvesti, retired Quincy fire lieutenants.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to Boston Shriners Hospital, 51 Blossom St., Boston 02114.

Rev. George Hodgkins

Pastor Emeritus Of Quincy, Scituate Churches

REV. GEORGE HODGKINS

A Service of Thanksgiving for the Rev. George A. Hodgkins, 80, a retired minister who served for 50 years in churches in Massachusetts and Connecticut, was held Jan. 31 at Bethany Congregational Church.

Rev. Hodgkins died Jan. 27 at Hancock Park Nursing Home in Quincy after a long illness.

A Quincy native, the Rev. Hodgkins was a member of the Quincy Point Congregational Church when he was a boy and played organ and sang in the choir.

He graduated from Quincy High School in 1941 and entered Northeastern University. After a year in school, he joined the Army Air Corps. He served nearly four years during World War II as a radar instructor.

After the war, he was one of four "seagoing cowboys," representing Heifer Project International, bringing 50 cows to needy German refugee families. Later he traveled to, and participated in, numerous conferences and demonstrations in pursuit of solutions to these fundamental social and international problems.

After completing his service in the military in 1945, he transferred to Boston University where he studied philosophy. He entered the Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Center, immediately after graduation in 1949.

His marriage to Connie (Forrest), of Quincy, in 1950 was the first wedding ceremony held in the newly-located Quincy Point Congregational Church.

In 1952, he graduated from divinity school and was ordained at Trinitarian Congregational Church in Wayland.

He left Wayland after four years and was a minister at First Congregational Church in Stratford, Conn., and later in Auburn, Conn. He also served congregations in Scituate and Auburn.

In 1963, the Rev. Hodgkins attended the Rev. Martin Luther King's march on Washington. He supported the movement by forming the Stratford, Connecticut Interfaith Human Relations Council, an organization promoting dialogue and action toward the elimination of racial prejudice.

He moved to Scituate in 1969 to preside over First Trinitarian Congregational Church and stayed for 17 years.

He had planned on retiring in 1985, but was instead convinced to serve as interim minister for a church in Halifax. This started a series of interim minister posts at a number of churches throughout eastern Massachusetts.

Rev. Hodgkins retired from service in the church in 1996. He was the only UCC minister to have been named Pastor Emeritus of two churches.

He is survived by his wife, Constance (Forrest) Hodgkins; four sons, Donald Hodgkins of Wakefield, Robert Hodgkins of Quincy, Forrest Hodgkins of Newton and Mark Hodgkins of Randolph; two daughters, Carol Waddell of Quincy and Wendelyn Salisbury of Sharon; a brother, Alfred Hodgkins of Scituate; and 11 grandchildren.

Burial will be in Scituate at a later date.

Arrangements were made by the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, Quincy.

Donations may be made to the ALS/Compassionate Care Inc., P.O. Box 1052, West Falmouth, MA; Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St., Quincy MA 02169; Heifer Project International, 216 Wachusett St., Rutland, MA 01543.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

February marks the birthdays of two of the world's great figures: George Washington, who gave us our nation, and Abraham Lincoln, who preserved it for posterity.

Let us remember that they captured the imagination of the world by their characters, their principles, their philosophies and profound achievements. Their names are forever linked with man's eternal struggle for freedom.

As we pay homage to these great Americans – Washington and Lincoln – let us remember that they more than any others embodied and exhibited our distinctive civilization. We honor them for the virtues that made them great. We honor them for their unswerving loyalty and patriotism. Both represented the cause of freedom. It is with deep respect and admiration for their leadership that we pay tribute to them in this month that marks their birthdays.

One does not recall that any nation in history produced two men 87 years apart, who indubitably determined the nation's destiny. America was indeed very luck to have produced two such towering men in the compass of a century...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Seeing the silly side of some really ridiculous situations helps give the Lamb a new perspective on how to handle them. Some important contacts can be made this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Try to complete your outstanding tasks by midweek. This leaves you free to take advantage of new possibilities — both professional and personal — opening up by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With both your creative side and energy levels rising this week, you should be able to tackle that too-long-neglected project again. A family member might have important news.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An explanation you requested seems to be more confusing than enlightening. You should insist on clarifications now, rather than deal with problems that might arise later.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your energy levels might be ebbing a bit. But that's no excuse for taking catnaps when you could be working on those unfinished tasks. There'll be time to curl up and relax by week's end.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to get those ideas out of your head and into a readable format if you hope to have them turned into something doable. A good friend is ready with worthwhile advice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Careful — you might be stepping into dangerous territory if you decide to "exaggerate" the facts too much. Remember: The truth speaks for itself and needs no embellishment.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your workplace successes have earned you many admirers, there are some colleagues who are not among them. Be careful how you proceed with your new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to go into great detail to explain why you're currently reluctant to make changes to an already prepared plan. Be sure you have all the facts to back yourself up.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel plans might still be uncertain. But instead of getting upset about the delay, open yourself up to other possibilities, and begin checking out some alternative destinations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing conditions might require you to alter some of your plans. While you might be agreeable to this, be prepared with explanations for those who do not want changes made.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you might have to deal with some detractors who aren't too kind in their critiques, you gain points in your favor when you're willing to stand up and defend your work.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for creating a warm and loving environment between yourself and others.

Fallon Ambulance Receives Beechwood Center Award

Fallon Ambulance was recently recognized by the Beechwood Community Life Center for providing essential services to South Shore senior citizens.

The Corporate Service Award was accepted by Peter Racicot, Fallon Ambulance administrator, at a meeting of the Beechwood Board of Directors.

Making the presentation were Beechwood Board President Helen Irvin and board member Don Uvanitte.

Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood, cited the Fallon blood pressure clinics conducted weekly at the Beechwood Senior Center.

"Several time this past year, Fallon blood pressure checks have identified dangerously high blood pressures," Beals said.

"In each case the pre-stroke/pre-heart attack intervention was credited by hospital emergency staffs as life-saving."

She also noted that Fallon provides educational services for Beechwood toddler/pre-school children and families.

"We are most appreciative for and reliant upon the professional services of Fallon Ambulance," Irvin said at the presentation of the award.

Councillors Criticize Mayor On White, Yip Dismissals

the mayor's prerogative to replace the employees, but criticized the way in which it was done. Some suggested the mayor should have informed White personally, rather than sending someone else to relay the message.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi led the rebuke, saying the mayor's actions were disrespectful.

"These are high quality individuals," Raymondi said of White and Yip. "I was very troubled by the way this was handled. People were guarding them like they were some sort of criminals."

Dave Murphy, the mayor's director of operations, said Phelan's decision was a difficult one. "This wasn't something that came easy for the mayor," he said. The mayor and White had "philosophical differences," according to Murphy.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said he was angered by the move and sent a letter to the mayor asking him to reconsider his decision.

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner said she has received several phone calls from constituents registering their opposition to the dismissals.

Council President Frank McCauley tried unsuccessfully to prevent debate on the matter, saying the issue is not within the council's scope of authority.

"It's not an easy thing to do, but it's the mayor's prerogative," said McCauley. "We cannot do anything about it. It would be wise to stay out of this."

But McCauley was overruled on a 7-2 vote, with Councillor John Keenan supporting him.

After the meeting, Coughlin said the mayor has demonstrated a similar pattern of activity in dealing with city employees.

"If you did exit interviews of people who have left this administration, you would find that one common theme is a feeling of disrespect," said Coughlin.

McCauley, a former four-term mayor, agreed that Phelan should have dismissed the employees in a face-to-face encounter.

White, a former state trooper and building contractor, was hired in 1997 to a newly created position of director of inspectional services. The job pays $80,000 a year and put him in charge of the city's building, wiring and plumbing inspectors. The job also made him the chief zoning enforcement officer and a member of the license board.

Several of White's supporters attended the council meeting.

DEP Has Concerns On New QHS Plan

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has cast doubts on the city's current plan to construct a new high school on Faxon Field.

But DEP left the door open for alternatives, including destroying fewer protected wetlands and locating the athletic and parking facilities elsewhere.

After reviewing the city's Draft Environmental Impact Report (DEIR) for the reconstructed Quincy high school project, DEP expressed concerns regarding the ability to build over certain lands at the Faxon Field site. DEP's assessment is critical to the project as the city seeks to obtain the necessary environmental permits to build on the site.

"While there are some issues with the site, we will roll up our sleeves and work with DEP on this issue," Mayor William Phelan said Tuesday. "The city will do everything it can to continue to move this project in a positive direction."

The city is already under the Quincy Conservation Commission's jurisdiction to [illegible] Faxon Field. [illegible] Commissioners [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Fred Calef Studying In Alaska

Former Quincy Resident Analyzing Mars Data

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mars may be 100 million miles away, but Fred Calef can see it as clear as day.

The former Quincy resident, now a student at the Planetary Lab in the Geophysical Institute at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, is playing a role in the advance of human space exploration by analyzing the surface of Mars.

Calef is one of five students serving as the eyes of the Mars mission. He is assisting in remote sensing, which is "complicated rapmaking of soils using a variety of sources to explore the surface of planets or other interstellar features. Currently, they are exploring impact craters, impressions left on Mars after an asteroid or meteor collision.

When NASA launched Spirit, they aimed it at the Gusev impact crater. Named after a Soviet planetary scientist, Gusev is 100 miles across and probably was formed during the first billion of Mars' 4 1/2 billion years of existence.

FORMER QUINCY resident Fred Calef, pictured here at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, is working alongside NASA in studying data from the Mars rovers. Calef conducts research at the Planetary Lab in the Geophysical Institute at the University of Alaska, Fairbanks.

Calef and fellow students are helping NASA identify more craters from objects that hit within the boundaries of Gusev.

"In a way, meteors are planetary drilling rigs, boring into the surface and throwing out rocks below the surface," said Calef. "These rocks cover the surface, usually in a star-like pattern that we call 'ejecta.' This ejecta can be identified to tell us how the planet evolved."

Many scientists believe evidence of water can be found in or on the edge of many of the small impact craters near the terrain around the rover, which began sending pictures back to Earth recently.

Since wind is one of Mars' main features and it has been blowing dust into the region for millions of years, finding chemical evidence of water is not going to be easy.

Even a few inches of dust would be too much for Spirit to analyze, so scientists need help analyzing data that is available but just out of reach.

That's where Calef and his colleagues come in. They are helping NASA to identify more recent craters from objects that hit within the boundaries of Gusev. Those impacts could bring long buried evidence of water - in the form of carbonates or some kinds of rust buried in the sediment – to the surface.

"My research is just beginning, but the MER rover data and continuing data will make my research move along quite fast," said Calef.

He became interested in planetary geology as a child, when his grandfather would take him for walks near the Quincy quarries.

"My grandfather used to take me for walks when I was little," he said. "He would tell me about the rocks, how they formed, and how you could tell all this history about the Earth from just picking up a few rocks. Needless to say, my career in geology started there."

Calef pursued his interests while attending UMass Boston. Other research opportunities came about and he earned his Masters degree by studying ancient cirque glacier basins in Greece.

His research in Alaska is allowing him to pursue his Ph.D.

Eventually, he wants to work for NASA or at a university conducting planetary science.

"The field is very exciting right now and there are many opportunities to get instruments to Mars and learn more and more about other planets and our own," he said.

Hopefully, his research will take him to a warmer climate.

"Alaska is a beautiful and unique state. The aurora during the winter is magical and the moose are literally on your doorstep," said Calef. "The state is indescribably picturesque. However, I suspect I'll be heading to a warmer latitude in a few years, but I'll never forget the great adventure it is to live in Alaska."

Ward 1 Neighborhood Meeting Tonight At Adams Shore Library

There will be a Ward 1 Neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the Adams Shore Library to address a proposal to demolish the former Dunkin' Donuts building at 399 Sea St. and construct six residential town home there.

The meeting will allow residents to meet with the developer and project architect to review the proposed development and discuss the project plans, according to Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly. After a short presentation by the developer, neighbors and interested parties will have to opportunity to ask questions, obtain additional information, voice concerns and provide local input, said Kelly.

Three City Employees Cited For Outstanding Service

Three city employees were honored for their dedication and outstanding performance during the 1st annual Pride In Public Service Recognition Program.

In a ceremony held Tuesday at New City Hall, Mayor William Phelan praised Carol Block, William Chase and Warren Sproul for their dedication and hard work.

Sproul works in the Information Technology Department, Block is in the Treasurer's office and Chase works for the DPW.

"One of the things we don't do enough is pat people on the back and let them know what a good job they are doing," said Phelan. "The overwhelming majority are underpaid and work extremely hard and are good people who care about the community. These three folks are tops as well."

Phelan said the city would put up a plaque in City Hall with the names of recipients from each year.

The employees were chosen by a selection committee for the program. The committee was made up of a representative from each municipal union whose members were eligible.

Carol Block, assistant treasurer, has been working for the city for nearly 12 years. She was first hired as clerk typist in the election department and was promoted to senior clerk typist in the Treasurer's/Collector's office in 1993. She was promoted to her current position in 1995.

Prior to coming to City Hall, she was a business manager/administrative assistant at the Woodward School from 1980 to 1992. She graduated from the Woodward School and earned a degree from Quincy College.

William Chase is an 18-year city employee and currently works in the DPW as a Laborer/Motor Equipment Operator (MEO). He began his tenure for the city as an MEO in the School Department.

Warren Sproul has worked as a Systems Analyst in the Information Technology/Data Processing Dept. for 20 years.

Prior to joining the city, he worked for Pilgrim Health of Arthur D. Little as a consultant. He also worked for the US Congress/House Committee on Administration where he designed and implemented financial and budget appropriations systems for the House Committee on Appropriations.

Sproul is an Army veteran and served as a Captain/Systems Analyst for the US Army Defense Intelligence Agency at the Pentagon from 1971 to 1975.

School Committee Warns Over Rent Dispute

Eviction May Be Issued To Quincy College

The school committee may issue an eviction notice to Quincy College this week after the college missed a Feb. 9 deadline for payment of $424,500 in rent owed to the school department.

The committee was scheduled to address the issue at last night's (Wednesday) meeting. At press time, the college Board of Governors was scheduled to discuss the issue at a meeting Tuesday.

Quincy College President Sean Barry could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

In a letter dated Jan. 26, Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the college faces legal action unless it

Sacred Heart School Receives $1,500 Donation

Sacred Heart School in North Quincy recently hosted a book fair as part of its week-long celebration of "a faith-filled future."

Each of the 21 teachers at the school received $50 to purchase books for the classroom and the library, and computer labs shared $500 for new books and software.

The $1,500 donation was made to the school by the Sacred Heart PTO.

"The students love to shop for their own books and teachers really appreciate being able to add new books to their classrooms, too," said PTO President Cindy Brandi.

Christine Koch and Susan O'Connor chaired the event and more than 20 volunteers helped to make this book fair a success.

"Is it too late for me to refinance?"
(The surprising answer? Probably not!)

If you just go by what you hear or read in the mainstream media, you might think that the refinancing "window" has slammed shut. But that's a simplification that's simply not true. Here are the facts: Mortgage rates are still bouncing around near 50-year lows. So if you want to refinance for whatever reason – to be mortgage-free before you retire, to pay for tuition, to consolidate other loans and debts or just to lock in a low rate before the window does close – you still have time. But possibly not much. So don't wait. Come see us or call 617-471-0750.

Some additional facts: Annual Percentage Rate (APR) applies to 15-year owner-occupied home loans and assumes a maximum 80% loan-to-value and first mortgage position. A 15-year home loan would be repaid in 180 equal monthly payments of $7.93 per $1000 borrowed. The rate is effective as of 02.06.04 and may vary by property type, loan amount, credit worthiness and loan-to-value ratio. Other rates & terms are available including 10-year and 20-year loans. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 14, 1779, Captain James Cook, the great English explorer and navigator, is killed by natives of Hawaii during his third visit to the Pacific island group.

• On Feb. 9, 1900, the solid silver trophy known today as the Davis Cup is first put up for competition when American collegian Dwight Filley Davis challenges British tennis players to come across the Atlantic and compete against his Harvard team.

• On Feb. 10, 1941, the first highway post office service is established along the route between Washington, D.C., and Harrisonburg, Va. Mail was transported in buses equipped with facilities for the sorting, handling and dispatch of mail.

• On Feb. 15, 1942, in one of the greatest defeats in British military history, Britain's supposedly impregnable Singapore fortress surrenders to Japanese forces after a weeklong siege. More than 60,000 British, Australian and Indian soldiers were taken prisoner.

• On Feb. 11, 1960, Jack Paar, host of NBC's "The Tonight Show," walks off the program to protest censorship. Infuriated when censors cut a joke about a "water closet," claiming it was in poor taste, Paar stormed off the set and did not return to the show for a month.

• On Feb. 13, 1991, Sotheby's announces the discovery of a long lost manuscript of "Huckleberry Finn" by Mark Twain. The first half of Twain's original manuscript, heavily corrected in his own handwriting, had been missing for more than a century.

• On Feb. 12, 1999, the five week impeachment trial of President Bill Clinton comes to an end, with the Senate voting to acquit the president on both articles of impeachment: perjury and obstruction of justice.

Take A Bow, Point Webster

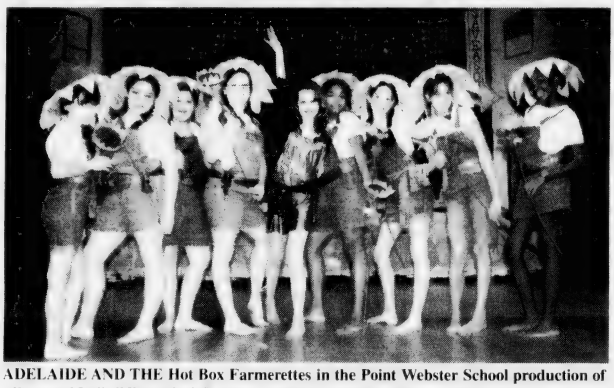
It was one of my most enjoyable time-outs ever the other morning at Point Webster School.

It was the school's production of "Guys and Dolls" with a cast of nearly 50 talented youngsters from grades 5 through 8.

And I really do mean talented.

All nicely jelled together by Lorie Hammerstrom, fifth grade science teacher as director; Amy Rogers, music teacher as music director; and Daniel Gilbert, eighth grade social studies teacher and basketball coach as stage director.



The program (in green, of course) called it a Gilbert, Rogers and Hammerstrom Production. Sounds almost like Rogers and Hammerstein. And you know, the show did, too.

The kids had been in rehearsal since last October for the three performances, two morning, one evening. Parents and other adults attending the evening show gave the cast a standing ovation.

Students from the Marshall, Atherton Hough and Point Webster schools were invited to the morning performances and did their share of applauding. They appreciated the treat.

SKY MASTERSON, NATHAN DETROIT and other dice rollers in the Point Webster School's "Guys and Dolls" production. From the left Brian Repetto, Chino Mapa, Richard Ash, Asha Waterhouse, Zach Dwyer (Sky Masterson), Derek McFarlane (Nathan Detroit), Liam Keogh, Andy Quach, Kyle Freeman and teacher Dan Gilbert as Big Jule.

ADELAIDE AND THE Hot Box Farmerettes in the Point Webster School production of "Guys and Dolls." From the left, Joan Camillo, Emma Smith, Maureen Randall, Samantha Reynolds, Amanda Shiner (Adelaide), Treylin Miller, Meghan Robinson, Marita MacKinnon and Joanne Ellis. Lorie Hammerstom photos

It was a fun show with all those colorful Damon Runyon characters roaming around.

And with some good musical numbers like "A Bushel and a Peck," "Adelaide's Lament," "If I Were A Bell," "Luck Be A Lady," "Sit Down You're Rockin The Boat," etc.

It's not an easy show to put on. There's a lot of lines, lyrics and movement – in 15 scenes.

But the kids were up to it.

Like Zack Dwyer as Sky Masterson, Derek McFarlane as Nathan Detroit, Catey Santon as Sarah Brown and Amanda Shiner as Miss Adelaide. Amanda kind of caught your eye singing "Adelaide's Lament" and later in a wedding dress after finally landing Nathan Detroit.

And that "big kid" Dan Gilbert, playing Big Jule. He finds it helps to direct a play by also being in it. And the kids like him on stage with them. Gives them acting and moral support.

There was a lot more talent. Like:

Brian Repetto (Nicely Nicely), Liam Keogh (Benny Southstreet), Asha Waterhouse (Rusty Charlie), Sal Tortomaski (Harry The Horse), Ryan O'Toole (Lt. Brannigan), Chino Mapa (Angelo The Ox), Richard Ash (Scranton Slim), Kyle Freeman (Brandy Bottle Bates), Andy Quach (Packin' Paul), Katie McCarthy (General Cartwright), Lisa Tammaro (Arvide Abernathy), Dara Brancaccio (Calvin), Kim Papile (Agatha), Treylin Miller (Mimi), Destiny Popeilnicki (waitress and announcer).

And the Mission Band Members: Kellie Newman, Leslie Garcia, Sara Elder, Julie Echeverri and Jaida Almeida.

The Hot Box Girls: Maureen Randall, Samantha Reynolds, Marita MacKinnon, Joan Camillo, Meghan Robinson, Joanne Ellie, Emma Smith.

The Dolls: Nicolette West, Vi Nguyen, Cassie Foran, Anjie Parker, Kelsey Ingemi, Ashley Ingemi, Haira Alves.

And, of course, you can't put on a hit show without a good stage crew: Destiny Popielnicki, Kim Carthcart, Stephen Kozlowski, Anna Masalin; sound: Brian Bowe; set design: Chris Meyers.

And, last but certainly not least, the costume and hair department: Courtney Mitchell, Meghan Sullivan and Julianne Hickey.

Principal James McGuire and Assistant Principal Peter Chella, both of whom attended the school as youngsters, had plenty to beam about with all this talent displayed by today's students.

And for this old Point Junior grad, it was like going home. So many fond memories. Going back to when Henry Prario was principal and urging us to "always give that extra ounce." That extra ounce of effort.

Memories of that tremendous Point school spirit. It's still there.

And for me there was something extra special about being there that morning. My granddaughter, Kellie, was one of the fifth graders in the cast.

It's a nice feeling having a granddaughter going to your old school. Especially a school like Point Webster. And I'm sure many of you feel that way about your old school.

It was nice to see Point is still Point. And may it always be.

There's something very special about it.

Something that has stayed with me all my life.

It was a great morning. And a great play.

Take a bow, kids. A big one.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 POSTCARD view of Billings Road looking east from its intersection with Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs. The commercial buildings here today replaced these houses, most of which were moved elsewhere. Twenty years before this picture was taken, this area was farmland. In 1892 the real estate development company that had earlier laid out the Wollaston Park section of Quincy decided to develop another "suburb" to the north. They set out the boundaries with Sachem Brook on the south and Glover Avenue on the north, and from Quincy Bay west to the railroad. To bring attention to the new suburb they held a contest for a suitable name, with the prize a $1,000 house lot. A young schoolteacher won when she submitted the name Norfolk Downs. Norfolk for the county, and Downs for the resemblance of the low lying land to the area known as The Downs in southwest England. Today, some prefer to call this the North Quincy business district but to the generations who have lived here, it will always be known as The Downs.

Praises Firefighters, Pastor During Carlson St. Fire

The Quincy firefighters fought a tragic fire recently at Carlson St. with no help from the frigid temperatures. Pastor James Kimmell of Faith Lutheran Church opened the church doors early that morning and stayed throughout the day serving donuts and hot coffee to the workers. He kept the ovens hot so firefighters could try to thaw out their hands and gloves. One said a cup a coffee slipped right out of his hands because they were without feeling. They were just dripping with ice. They could have passed for walking ice sculptures. They fight fires with their whole being, both physically and emotionally. One firefighter said he couldn't remember what he had for snack.

The members of Faith want to thank Pastor Kimmell for sharing and caring as the Jenkins family lived through this tragedy. The fire department sent their thanks to Pastor Kimmell. His reply was, "Be proud of your fire department."

Quincy Should Be Quincy, Not A Mini South Shore Boston

Quincy is starting to look like Charlestown. Where are the politicians? The overdevelopment is getting worse. Condo after condo, luxury apartment after luxury apartment.

Working families don't seem as welcomed as they once were. The problem is city-wide impacting in every ward and neighborhood in the city.

The latest news on the future of downtown Quincy doesn't look that great to me. City Hall is talking about re-creating the downtown area with residents. Everywhere I look I see it.

Importing young Bostonians will not save Quincy. It will push rents and house prices higher and higher.

Quincy doesn't have to become a mini-South Shore Boston; it should just want to be Quincy.

Where is a real master plan on growth? Where is the hindsight and foresight needed?

Rather than overdevelopment, why not control everything and ask Quincy residents what they see the Quincy of the 21st century to look like?

Quincy's retail district is history. We can't bring yesterday back no should we want to.

Let us build a future city, a future downtown and future neighborhoods that represent us and our needs.

Affordable housing that is real. Attracting working class families and keeping them here. Build good schools. Hire good teachers. Have enough fire apparatus. Have enough police officers. Good streets. Open space. Things that make us a good place to call home.

Quincy will be as good as we want it to be if we make sure those at City Hall who represent us truly represent us and our common interests.

Perhaps, 2004 will be the year Quincy finally gets its communal act together.

B-r-r-r! 18 Degrees Below

This Week
1934
70 Years Ago

An all time record cold gripped Quincy, sending the mercury down to an official 18 degrees below zero and freezing over Quincy Bay and most of Boston Harbor for the first time in years.

Unofficial thermometers showed 25 below in South Quincy and the short order cook at Monroe's Diner on Southern Artery reported the temperature was down to 22 below when he left at 2 a.m.

Some 100 cars had be to abandoned after a Wollaston Legion play at the North Quincy High School auditorium and playgoers, some of them from Brookline and Hingham, were put up for the night at nearby homes.

By noon Friday, Feb. 9, under a blazing sun and cloudless sky, the temperature in Quincy Square rose to zero, as outside work was suspended and elementary and junior high schools were closed.

City Hospital treated scores of cases of frostbite and Patrolman Maurice Cahill had to be relieved of duty when parts of his froze while on patrol in the frigid weather.

RADIOS LICENSED

Chairman Emery L. Crane of the Licensing Commission announced that under a new policy Quincy bars that permitted radios to be played for their customers would have to have cabaret licenses.

Crane said it had come to the attention of the Board that many men and women were gathering in the bars to listen to broadcasts by radio priest Father Coughlin and remaining to drink more than they should.

Feb. 27 At Lombardo's

Heart Dinner Dance To Benefit Fr. Bill's Women's Shelter

The Women's Shelter of Father Bill's Place will benefit from the "Open Your Heart" dinner dance Friday evening, Feb. 27 at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The event, hosted by Gay Vernon, newscaster for Magic 106.7, will feature The Ovations, a 10 piece orchestra and a silent auction.

Tickets are $50 per person or $75 per couple. A table of 10 may be reserved for $400.

The tickets are available by calling Erin or Janice at 617-376-2255. They may also be obtained on the website, www.fatherbillsplace.org

The event is being planned by Father Bill's Place Women's Committee, a group of business women from the community who were instrumental in the renovation of St. John's Shelter for Women. Loretta Oliva of South Shore Savings Bank headed the volunteer effort that transformed the basement of the 100-year old former school into a shelter comfortable for women.

The Women's Shelter provides emergency shelter for up to 40 homeless women nightly. It offers a safe, supportive environment that motivates and assists women to move beyond homelessness to a life in the community with dignity and self-determination.

The purpose of a separate shelter for women is to accommodate the rise in homeless women. They now represent 25 percent of the Father Bill's Place guests—up from 12 percent three years ago. The shelter also better addresses women's needs.

Bishop Margaret Payne To Visit Good Shepherd Lutheran Church Sunday

Bishop Margaret Payne of the New England Synod will preside at a Service of Holy Communion this Sunday at 10:30 a.m. in the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 308 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

Bishop Payne will participate in a question and answer session following worship. The visit, her first to the congregation, is part of the congregation's 2004 Outreach Plan.

Bishop Payne was elected in 2000 to oversee the ministry of the 192 congregations of the New England Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. A graduate of Muhlenberg College in Allentown, Penn., she began her career as an English teacher in Punjab, India on a Fulbright grant.

She was ordained in 1984 and served as a parish pastor at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church in Princeton Junction, New Jersey for seven years. Following this assignment, she served as an assistant to the elected bishop. Her office is in Worcester, and she lives with her husband John in Shelbourne, Mass.

For more information contact Pastor Nathan Pipho at the church office at 617-328-8348 or visit the congregation's website at www.goodshepherdquincy.org.

Ron McKim, Jr. Installed Master Of New Rural Lodge

By GRAME MARSDEN

Freemasons and visitors filled the large room in the Masonic Building on Hancock St. for the visit of Grand Master of Masons in Massachusetts in a recent formal ceremony that installed a new presiding master of Quincy's Rural Lodge.

The Grand Master and his suite placed Worshipful Ron McKim Jr. in the position of Master of the new combined Rural Lodge.

RON McKIM, Jr.

For those unfamiliar with the ancient order of Freemasonry, honorifics are still used to revere those with lofty positions. Similar honorifics are still in use in churches, such as 'Reverend' and 'Monsignor'. If you watch on TV the proceedings of British Parliament, you will hear similar titles in use.

In Masonry, a Master of a lodge is spoken to as 'Worshipful', to show that he has earned the respect of others.

Rural Lodge's new Master, is yet in his 20s, and is shown respect by other masons - some of whom are 50 years his senior - by the title of 'Worshipful' before his name. Men who attain higher office are referred to as 'Right Worshipful', while a Grand Master enjoys the respectful title of 'Most Worshipful'. All are historic titles, reflecting the ancient foundation of Freemasonry.

Most Worshipful Donald Gardner Hicks, Jr. is the current Grand Master. When paying visitations to lodges, all Grand Masters of North America wear shiny top hats, but the Grand Master of Massachusetts is different. This reflects the fact that Massachusetts was the first Grand Lodge to be founded in America back in 1733. Massachusetts' Grand Master is the only one to wear a colonial style gold-trimmed tricorn hat, redolent of his illustrious predecessor, Paul Revere who was Grand Master in the years 1795.

Girls from the Order of the Rainbow and boys from the Order of DeMolay attended. The young ladies were attired in floor length white gowns, the young men in long cloaks. As all stood in reverence, the combined color party presented the flags of the USA and of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The Grand Master thanked all the boys and girls by name.

The Grand Master took the opportunity to present a high award to one of the new Rural Lodge's members. Worshipful Lonnie Piper was recognized with the award of the Joseph Warren Medal, for his services to Freemasonry, to the cause of Scouting, and to his synagogue. Piper has been a Scoutmaster for all of his adult life, and is a regional officer of the Old Colony Boy Scouts. He received a standing ovation. The Joseph Warren medal is named for General Joseph Warren, Grand Master of Masons in 1775, who was mortally wounded by a musket bullet as he stood in the front lines at the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Earlier in the evening, the Grand Master was the guest of honor at a banquet held in the lower ballroom.

The ceremonial part of the evening cemented the relationship between two Quincy Lodges: Wollaston Lodge and Rural Lodge. Wollaston Lodge was founded in 1899, and Rural Lodge almost a century earlier. The new combined lodge will preserve the historic name of Rural Lodge AF & AM - a name known in Quincy since 1801. In a quiet and poignant ceremonial, unobserved by most of the guests, a group of Past Masters of Wollaston Lodge retired to the third floor rooms, which are adorned with photographs of every one of the Past Masters of the lodge, from 1899 to the present. Seemingly observed by the many and varied faces in the fading photographs, the Past Masters present remembered those who had served the lodge in the past, and drank a solemn toast to all the lodge's Masters.

John Hancock was born in Quincy in 1737. How did his Masonic connection influence him and other great Revolutionary patriots?

Many of the patriots that played a decisive roll in the formation of the United States were Masons. Surely you recognize George Washington, Paul Revere, Benjamin Franklin and Quincy's own John Hancock.

It is true that many of these great men were indeed Masons but it was their fervent love of liberty, justice and freedom of thought...concepts embraced by Masons for centuries...that induced them to act as individuals in forming the foundation of this great nation. These men made a positive difference in their community and in their country, much as Masons do today. But, it might surprise you that political discussions are forbidden in the Masonic Lodge room.

The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts was formed in 1733. Paul Revere was our Grand Master in the 1790's. Rural Lodge of Masons was formed here in Quincy in 1801. The goal of Masons then, as it is today, is who can best work and best agree. And we apply those principles to the work we do today. More than 175,000 children have taken advantage of the Masonic Child Identification Program with Toothprints™, introduced to the world right here in Quincy. Masons contribute more than 20,000 pints of blood collected by the Red Cross each year. Masons operate the Shriners Hospitals for Children. And contribute millions of dollars to worthy causes each day...most of which is never publicized.

Today, as we did more than 200 years ago, Masons are making a difference in our nation and right here in Quincy.

See for yourself how the members of Rural Lodge are working to make our community a better place.

See how you can be a part of it while sharing the fellowship that Masonry offers to all good men.

State Delegation Announces MBTA Bus Improvements

Quincy's state delegation announces major improvements to the MBTA bus service, which will benefit riders in Quincy and surrounding communities.

The entire rehabilitation and replacement process is expected to be completed by the end of the year and will cost approximately $250 million. There are 82 buses stationed at the Quincy garage.

MBTA has begun the process of rehabilitating current buses and riders should see a gradual change in the buses servicing them in the near future, according to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

"The MBTA is rehabilitating 12 buses at this time. MBTA has suggested each of the buses renovated will go through extensive safety testing and will be returned to service," he said.

Rep. Ron Mariano said half of Quincy's buses will be replaced. By the end of the year, the average age of the buses in Quincy will be reduced from 14 to four years, said Mariano. All buses will be equipped with new emission control devices and operate on ultra-low sulfur diesel fuel, which will significantly reduce air pollution, said Mariano.

"Both MBTA customers and the general public should benefit from the improvements to the new fuel emission's system," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

In addition, Ayers said, all buses will have air conditioning, automatic trip announcements and other improvements.

"We expect that in one year, the entire MBTA bus fleet operating out of Quincy will meet the same quality of buses that are found in other major cities," said Morrissey.

RYLEY McCARRON, 4, found the wind a little challenging as she took a bicycle ride on Agawam Road near Merrymount School Tuesday. With her is her mother, Karla McCarron.

Former Students Of NQHS Learning Center Hold Reunion

More than 100 former students of the North Quincy High School Learning Center recently met for their first reunion, which was held at the Knights of Columbus on Hollis Ave.

For 25 years, the Center has been teaching everyday skills to the learning disabled.

A number of area residents and businesses helped to make the reunion a reality. Outback Steakhouse, Pepsi Cola, Roche Brothers, Ginger Betty's, Charlie's Market, Chris Ackett, Rep. Bruce Ayers, Phyllis and Cheryl DiBona, WJDA and the Quincy Sun assisted with the reunion.

Kathy and Mary Ellen Birchmore coordinated the event.

"It was a wonderful event and we hope to do it again next year," said Kathy Birchmore.

RITA CARROLL, teacher at the North Quincy High School Learning Center, receives flowers from former student Mary Ellen Birchmore during the center's first reunion. More than 100 former students attended the reunion, held at the Knights of Columbus in North Quincy.

KaBloom Brings European Style To The Mainstream

By SHEILA HALLORAN

As florists prepare for the busiest week of the year, Mary Barton of KaBloom takes it all in stride, smile on her face, and ready to help unsure customers pick the arrangements ideal for each of them specifically.

Barton has owned and managed the Quincy KaBloom franchise for over a year. She purchased KaBloom after deciding to make a career out of her hobby.

"Since I'm going to spend most of my time at work, I want it to be doing something I love," she said. "So I took my passion and made it a profession."

Owning and managing a florist shop is a far cry from her previous retail career. Barton previously worked for 20 years in department store retail before first managing the KaBloom in Boston's North End and then owning and operating the Quincy franchise.

Barton takes pride in what she does. "Its rewarding to see people's expression when we deliver something," she said. "When you sell what you make, its very personal."

She also enjoys the positive reinforcement that she receives. "One women liked her arrangement so much that she blew up a picture of it," said Barton.

While the Quincy KaBloom has only been open for over three years, the first KaBloom opened in December of 1998. The corporate franchise was co-founded by Thomas G. Stemberg and David Hartstein. Stemberg is Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Staples, Inc. and Hartstein, KaBloom's president and CEO, co-founded Super Office, the first office superstore chain in Israel. Today, KaBloom has dozens of locations throughout the country. The opening of the KaBloom's distribution center in May of 1999 facilitated their already impressive growth.

KaBloom's goal was to bring the European style of florists to the mainstream. KaBloom believes that flowers should be enjoyed everyday rather than solely on special occasions. According to Barton, in most European cities, there are flower stands on every corner and flowers are purchases daily. KaBloom has expanded on this style by locating their full service florist shops in areas highly accessible to both pedestrian s and commuters."

According to Barton, KaBloom's success is due to their "approachable" environment, their impressive variety of on-hand flowers and plants and to the quality of their product.

"I use to shop here. I loved the idea of KaBloom. It's so customer friendly," said Barton. "We have a large walk-in cooler and we encourage our customers to see, touch and select their own flowers.""

Barton noted that florist shops can be intimidating for some customers, especially for those who do not have expert knowledge of flowers. KaBloom strives to make their customers as comfortable as possible and educate their customers about their selections.

"We want customers to be very comfortable with their experience with us. We work with customers to discover what they want whether it's a bride seeking a particular look for her wedding or someone looking for a favorite flower," said Barton. "We are also open in the evenings until 7 p.m. to give customers the opportunity to purchase florist quality flowers after work."

KaBloom get many of their flowers directly from growers in Holland to ensure fresher quality and unbeatable prices. The flowers are shipped directly to the Woburn distribution center. Because they are shipped directly, they last longer and KaBloom offers a five day guarantee on all arrangements. At any given time, KaBloom carries between 150 to 200 varieties of flowers and plants on hand.

The Quincy KaBloom is open Monday- Friday 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday 9 a.m. - 7 p.m. and Sunday 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Phone number is 617-479-9350.

New Clinical Cancer Trials For South Shore Residents

Board Continues Request For Later Closing Hour At Brigadoon's

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In what seemed like a court room rather than a meeting of the License Board at City Hall Chambers, the board on a 4-1 vote Tuesday agreed to reconsider a request from Brigadoon's, 520 Washington St. Quincy Point to closing hours of 1 a.m. instead of 11 p.m.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell voted against the reconsideration and said he thought the board did not have to take any action at Tuesday's meeting.

The meeting will continue on March 9.

Atty. Louis Cassis, representing George and Peter Pepdjonovic, owners of Brigadoon's, and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi appeared to be trying to convince the board about procedures.

Questions arose as to whether or not the board had the jurisdiction to roll back the hours came under fire as Raymondi read a report concerning Yerati's Restaurant in Randolph the early 1980s in which their license board rolled back their hours.

Cassis claimed that when the board voted for the transfer, they immediately rolled back the hours to 11 p.m. , which Cassis said was unlawful.

On an appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission, the commission stated that the matter should be a local issue, and so it came back to the board.

After a couple of intermissions, Raymond suggested the board should take away Brigadoon's common victualer and alcoholic license. However, when City Solicitor Monica Conymyham cautioned the board that that kind of a decision would be hard to defend.

Conymyham said that the owners should be treated fairly and in order for any decision be made, records would have to be considered.

At one point, Conymgham and Cassis were in conversation at the podium, when Raymondi started to speak again. Raymondi was offended and said "maybe what she is discussing with Cassis is more important than what I have to say."

After seeing several of the same abutters in the audience, Chairman Joseph Shea, seemingly frustrated because the matter of Brigadoons has been before the board several times said, "we do not want to hold this up any longer."

Police Chief William Falco commented that the case has become "more complex" while reading the report that Raymondi stated about Yerati's.

Fire Chief O'Connell, questioned whether the board acted appropriately when they voted to roll back the hours, and asked again for legal counsel on the matter.

According to Cassis, the Pepdjonovics' have a "good track record" first with the ownership of the 8 Ball, then the Mystic Lounge, next door to Brigadoon's.

He said there have been "no problems" at the restaurant.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said there are many family restaurants situated near a residential area that are allowed to remain open until 1 a.m. He said he didn't think Brigadoons should be forced to close at 11 p.m. He said he would "like to see closure today."

After he made the motion to reconsider, Scheele commented that it would be unfair for Jay Duca, the interim Director of Inspectional Services, replacing Walter White to have to vote without full knowledge of the case.

During the lenghty meeting, the board stopped a couple of times for recesses.

While Raymondi contuned to pursue the matter, board members were in the middle of discussing the motion. At this moment, George Pepdjonovic stormed out of the meeting.

Cassis indicated that he would take the case to Superior Court if necessary.

For Many, A Dog Is Truly A Best Friend

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE

Madison is a regular at the neurosurgery clinic at Massachusetts General Hospital.

Each day she bounces into work, lighting up the faces of the staff as she enters. Her days are filled with visiting patients and entertaining children in the waiting room as their parents talk to doctors.

Madison is a service dog. She is one of hundreds of dogs trained by the National Education for Assistance Dog Services (NEADS), a national non-profit that provides dogs for the deaf, physically disabled and those in hospitals, group homes and other facilities.

NEADS provides service dogs to people in order to give them greater independence over their lives.

Dr. Mia MacCollin, Assistant Professor of Neurology at Massachusetts General Hospital, is Madison's owner and has been part of NEADS for seven years. Accompanied by Madison, she talked about NEADS and her work with the organization recently at a meeting of the Quincy Jewish Committee in Roche Brothers' Community Room.

A five-year old Iranian refugee with a deliberating disease of the nervous system prompted MacCollin to become involved in NEADS. The severity of the boy's health had driven him to elective mutism-a condition in which one voluntarily gives up speaking.

DR. MIA MACCOLLIN talks about NEADS as Madison, a service dog, takes a break from her work.

MacCollin visited the boy in the final stages of his disease, and brought along the dog, Timaku. The dog jumped onto the boy's bed and lay next to him. The boy picked up his arm and threw it over Timaku's fur. He then did something he had not done in months; he laughed.

"Timaku had reached (the boy) in a way I couldn't," said MacCollin.

Inspired by her experience, MacCollin joined NEADS. Madison was the first puppy she trained.

NEADS obtains puppies to be trained as service dogs from two sources. Half are adopted from shelters when they are between 18 months and two years old.

Breeders donate the other half of the puppies. These puppies enter the "Puppy Program," in which they are taught rudimentary skills -to pay attention and to have fun.

Of these puppies, volunteers like MacCollin teach half.

The other half spends their days with prisoners in minimum-security facilities. The inmates teach the dogs to pay attention and sometimes, more.

"Some dogs come out knowing how to turn on and off light switches," said MacCollin.

Volunteers take the puppies in the prison program out on the weekends. MacCollin said this allows the puppies to become socialized. Paul and Kumiko Lieber of Brookline donate their weekends to Savanna, a puppy in the prison program. They brought her to Sunday's meeting.

In the spirit of her job, Savanna has been of service to the Lieber's as well. Kumiko, who is from Japan, said Savanna has helped her overcome her shyness, caused by her perceived unease with the English language.

"Since I started volunteering with NEADS, people ask me, 'Why do you have this dog, and I cannot just be quiet,'" said Kumiko.

After learning rudimentary skills, puppies learn a skill set-fetch, sit and stay-for three more months.

NEADS matches potential candidates with puppies. The puppies are trained for the specific needs of that person for the last three months.

In what MacCollin describes as "kind of like those reality TV show," clients choose the dog they want out of two or three dogs trained for their disability.

The dog's new owner is then required to come to "boot camp" located at NEAD's headquarters in Princeton, Mass. Disabled people come for two weeks and deaf people come for one week. During this time they learn how to take care of the dog and how to issue commands that will enable the dog to help them.

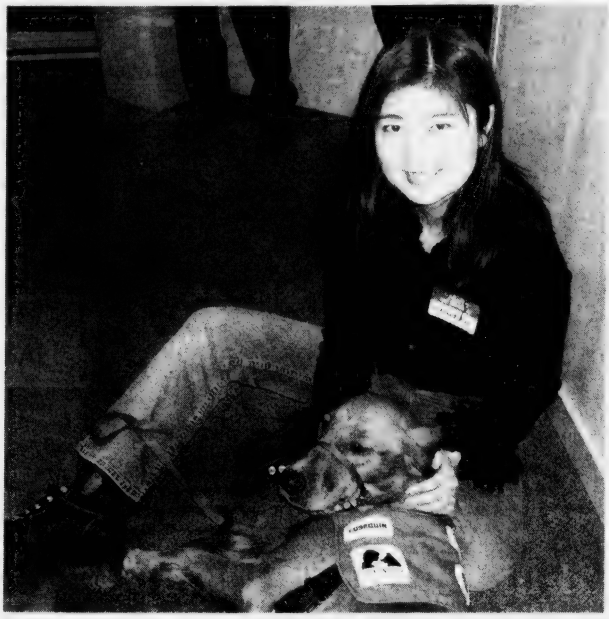
"It's much harder to train people than it is to train dogs," laughed MacCollin.

MacCollin said the total cost of putting a dog into someone's hands is $15,000, but NEADS only requires clients to pay $500. NEADS encourages the client to fundraise up to the $6000, but will never deny a person a dog on the basis of finances.

NEADS graduates 50 dogs a ;year in three ceremonies. However, 50 percent of dogs that begin the NEADS program do not graduate.

MacCollin said NEADS must pass extensive health and "personality" screenings before graduating.

"Some dogs don't like to work," said MacCollin.



There is a long waiting list to adopt dogs that do not become service dogs. One "failing" student went on to become a US Customs Service. dog.

Jack Foley of Milton attended the meeting with his dog Jake. Foley himself trained Jake and said he regularly brings him to nursing homes and transitional care units to spread some cheer.

MacCollin said Madison puts her patients at Massachusetts General Hospital more at ease.

"Madison is a stress reliever. She takes the emphasis off of us and lets people focus on her," she said.

As Madison, Savanna and Jake frolicked with each other, every face in the room had a smile. All 30 pairs of eyes in the room were fixed on three dogs.

Quincy Jade Restaurant Moving To Cottage Ave.

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

After 15 years, the owners are moving the Quincy Jade Restaurant, 1486 Hancock St. to 20—22 Cottage Ave. to open a 22 seat eatery.

The License Board granted them a new common victualer license for the 22 seat restaurant. They also voted to cancel the one at 1486 Hancock St.

Dennis Harrington, counsel for Quincy Jade told the License Board at Tuesdays meeting that new equipment would be installed and that the owners would take over two condominiums next to the Granite Rail Restaurant.

He said that the front of the restaurant would be rebuilt also.

As Harrington showed the plans to the board, he explained that although there are 22-24 seats, the restaurant can accommodate 35 patrons.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said she supported the move, and added that she had some concerns over the restaurant at Hancock St.

Harrington said that the landlord and tenant decided to "agree to disagree" and move on.

The hours would be from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. seven days a week.

Fire Chief Paul O'Connell told the owner to make sure the sprinkler system is a director connection to the fire department.

Health Commissioner Drew Scheele told the owners to make sure they use the back alley for their dumpster.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Continued until Feb. 24 a hearing regarding a request of Fallon Ambulance for a fuel storage license at 115 Brook Rd.

•Granted a common victualer license to the Ming Star Cafe and Sui Lam Gu, manager at the premises at 299 Newport Ave. Hours would be from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week.

•Granted a gas/repair license to Scott Ritz, doing business as Affordable Engine Service, 222 Willard St.Board recommended no more than six cars to be shown on the lot.

•Granted a full entertainment from a cabaret license to the Holy Ground, 1600 Hancock St. The Yard Rock Band has changed their location, and performs there each week.

•Granted a common victualer license to Fenno House, 540 Hancock St. The second floor has been converted to 39 assisted living quarters and will have a professional kitchen distributing their meals.

•Granted a cabaret license to Coffee Break Cafe, 77 Parking Way for open MIC night held the last Sunday of each month.

Lawrence Butler Memorial ScholarshipDance March 6

The Lawrence "Larry" s Butler, Jr., Memorial Scholarship Fund will host a benefit dance, featuring DJ Franny Sullivan, Saturday, March 6 from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Elks Hall, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

Tickets are available at the door with a $25 donation.

The fund honors Larry Butler, a life long Quincy resident. As director of registration and outreach services at Quincy Medical Center for more than 20 years, Larry led efforts to provide access to health insurance for under-or uninsured Quincy residents.

Established by Larry's family, the scholarship fund awards a $1,000 scholarship for a Quincy resident, in their junior year at an accredited college, who is pursuing a major in Health Care Administration or a major in business with an interest in Health Care Administration. Donations to the scholarship fund can be made to the Quincy Medical Foundation.

$250,000 Appropriated To Start Work

Wollaston Beach Project Takes 'Big Step Forward'

The state has agreed to appropriate funds to begin work on the $7 million Wollaston Beach project.

In a letter to Sen. Michael Morrissey, Environmental Secretary Ellen Roy Herzfelder said $250,000 will be spent in fiscal 2004 to start the facelift, which could take up to two years to complete.

"This is a big step forward," said Morrissey. "The administration is not abandoning the project. We are very encouraged by it."

Funding for the rest of the project is not guaranteed, but Morrissey said it wouldn't make sense to appropriate money and then not follow through in subsequent years.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

The project will go out to public bid in March and work will begin before July 1, according to Herzfelder.

"It's paramount that we make these capital improvements for the future of the City of Quincy and for the benefits that Wollaston Beach will offer its residents," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"This is enormously encouraging," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro. "For all of us who have been holding our breath for quite a while, we can now exhale. When the contract is signed the train will leave the station."

A number of improvements are scheduled to be part of the multi-million project.

Sand will be placed in two areas below the high tide line that have experienced erosion, from West Elm Ave. to the Strand and from Morse St. to Rice Rd.

Traffic lights will be installed and sidewalks will be widened on the beach side of Quincy Shore Dr. In addition, foot showers, water fountains and shade covers will be installed.

A drainage system along the beach will have 142 new catch basins, and parking along the beach will be reconfigured.

The city is also in the midst of a $12 million plan to replace aging sewer lines.

Aimed at improving water quality, the sewer project calls for replacing deteriorating pipes that allow sewage to escape and enter the sea. The problem increases bacteria counts in Wollaston Beach, forcing city officials to close it periodically.

The first phase of the project should be completed by the spring of 2005.

Eviction May Be Issued To Quincy College

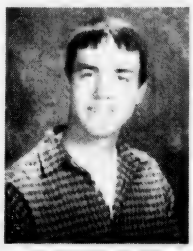
pays nearly two years of unpaid rent increases for the three city owned buildings it uses.

The committee will not negotiate the matter. DeCristofaro wrote to Barry

"There is no desire or intent on the part of the school committee to mediate this matter," the letter stated.

The school committee wants $424,500 in rent dating from July 1, 2002 to February, 2004. The college pays the school committee in monthly installments.



Thus far, the committee has not charged interest on the outstanding rent, but reserves the right to do so in the future, the letter stated.

School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg said an eviction notice may be issued but would not take effect until the end of the Spring semester, May 22.

If necessary, the committee will go to court to enforce the eviction notice, said Bragg. If the matter goes to court, Bragg said the committee would seek interest on the outstanding balance to compensate the school department for any legal fees.

"If we go down that road, I would think the school committee would issue an eviction notice that allows students to complete the spring semester," said School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg. "I want to keep Quincy College in Quincy, but we don't have any other avenues at this point."

Michael Carr Named To All-State Chorus

MICHAEL CARR

Michael R. Carr of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, competed against the best musicians in the state and was accepted into the All-State Chorus.

The chorus will perform, along with the All-State Band, Orchestra and Jazz Band in Symphony Hall March 13.

Carr has been accepted into the Southeast District Chorus for all four years. He has been accepted into All-State Chorus for the past three years. Last year, he performed with the All-State group in Symphony Hall and he was also accepted to the All-Eastern Chorus.

Catholics Nervously Await Word On Church Closings

Of the eight Quincy parishes, St. Ann's in Wollaston had the largest average weekly attendance at Mass for last year with 1,244, according to the figures released by the archdiocese.

St. Joseph's in Quincy Point was second in attendance with 1,196; Sacred Heart, North Quincy, third with 1,182; and St. John's, Quincy Center, fourth with 1,084. Behind them were St. Mary's, West Quincy, 930, and Star of the Sea, Squantum, 393.

St. Elizabeth Ann Seton's attendance figure was not available in those released by the archdiocesan Office of Planning and Research and published in the archdiocesan newspaper, The Pilot.

In addition to the average weekly Mass attendance figures, other parish pastoral statistics for the year 2003 were also released.

They included the number of Baptisms, first communions, confirmations, marriages and funerals at the parishes.

St. John's had the highest number of funerals in the archdiocese with 191.

The pastoral statistics, the archdiocese has said, will be a factor for consideration during the parish reconfiguration process.

Other factors are the shortage of priests and the physical condition of church buildings.

An example of the shortage of priests was cited Saturday at Mass by Rev. Peter Quinn, pastor of St. John's Church. He noted that not too long ago, the St. John's, St. Joseph's and St. Mary's cluster of churches had 12 priests. There are now only four.

The pastoral statistics for the eight Quincy parishes, released by the archdiocese, appear here in chart form.

The church bulletin distributed at St. John's Church this past weekend noted that the Quincy Vicariate, which includes the churches in Quincy, Braintree, Milton and Randolph, met Jan. 29 "at which the following points were clarified:"

"• First experience with reconfiguration in other dioceses has shown that the longer the process, the more divisive the response by the parishioners. Archbishop Sean (O'Malley) likened the reconfiguration and process to removing a band aid. Take it off slowly and you prolong the pain. Take the band aid off quickly and it hurts . . . but it is soon over.

"• Second, if a parish is suppressed, the property and/or proceeds from the suppression go to the Archdiocese of Boston. The neighboring parishes can apply for the proceeds to assist in the reconfiguration adjustment."

The bulletin also noted that the second meeting of the eight Quincy parishes was scheduled for Tuesday night (Feb. 10) at St. John's at which each parish was to present its balance sheet for the last financial year.

Council Presses For Fire Study

Chief O'Connell that the department would be left understaffed if more firefighters are not hired in time for July 1, 2004, the start of fiscal 2005.

Engine 4 in Wollaston would be sidelined and Rescue 1 would continue to be used sporadically unless more firefighters are hired or the city appropriates more money to cover overtime costs, Bowes said.

Citing possible cutbacks in services, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Councillor John Keenan introduced separate resolutions asking the mayor to begin the process of undertaking a fire study.

"We are talking about taking pieces of equipment out of service and personnel cuts, yet we could have had a fire study completed by now and had more information on these topics," said Keenan.

This is the third resolution passed over the past three years asking the city to conduct a comprehensive study of personnel, equipment and the capital needs of the fire department.

"None of these resolutions has been addressed," said Coughlin. "This is the latest attempt by the council to take a serious and methodical look at personnel and the capital needs of the fire department."

Coughlin's measure also asks the mayor's office to provide an update on the status of the fire department at next week's council meeting. Keenan's resolve asks the mayor to draft an RFP by Feb. 28.

Keenan's resolution calls for the formation of a five-member steering committee, consisting of the mayor's designee, a member of the firefighters union, the fire chief or his designee, a member of the city council and a member selected by the other four members. The committee would be charged with evaluating the proposals and choosing a contractor to conduct the study.

Keenan said former Mayor James Sheets drafted an RFP for a similar study in 2000. Proposals were submitted in the fall of 2001 but never opened, said Keenan. The city also appropriated $75,000 to conduct the study, but it never materialized.

According to Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick, approximately $60,000 remains in a fund for the study.

In the meantime, Phelan wants to repeal a council-backed ordinance that compels the city to staff each piece of fire apparatus with one officer and three firefighters.

The city council passed an ordinance mandating a minimum-manning standard for the fire department, despite opposition from Phelan and O'Connell.

Supporters maintain it is necessary to ensure the safety of firefighters and the public, while opponents argue the measure is too costly and will hamstring the city as it wades through tough financial times.

7th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk For Sight April 24

The 7th Annual Quincy Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight will be held Saturday, April 24 beginning at Pageant Field.

Sponsors of this year's event include Eastern Bank, Quirk Auto Dealers and the Outback Steakhouse.

The annual charity fundraiser will begin at 9 a.m. with registration, followed by the children's 1K Run/Walk at 10:30 a.m.

The 5K Run/Walk, which is on a course certified by USA Track & Field, will begin at 11 a.m.

The registration fee is $5 for children, $20 for adults and $17 for pre-registration.

In addition to registering on the day of the race, participants can pre-register online at www.quincylions.org, or call (617) 328-1384 to receive a registration form.

Proceeds from the Run/Walk will be used to fund eye research and support the Quincy Lions Club's service activities in the local community.

This year's event marks the seventh run/walk the club has organized to benefit blind and visually impaired persons.

"Thanks to the tremendous support we've received from the local community, the Lions Club Run/Walk for Sight has raised thousands of dollars for eye research and aid to blind and visually impaired persons in our local community," Quincy Lions Club President David Sawyer said.

Following the 5K race, a steak and chicken buffet lunch will be provided courtesy of the Outback Steakhouse.

The event will also feature a disc jockey, prize raffles, medals for race winners and t-shirts for all registrants.

The Lions Club Eyemobile will also be on hand to provide free vision, hearing and blood pressure screenings to all attendees.

"The Run/Walk is really a great family event, with something for everyone," Sawyer said. "We hope everyone will show their support for this worthy cause once again this year and help the Quincy Lions Club help those in need."

With more than 1.4 million members around the world, Lions Clubs International is the largest service organization in the world.

The Quincy Lions Club has been serving the local community for more than 60 years. Through such fundraising events as its annual Halloween Pancake Breakfast and the Run/Walk for Sight, the Quincy Lions Club raises thousands of dollars each year for eye research, donations to help blind or visually impaired residents, scholarships for local high school students and other worthwhile community projects.

Valentine's Day Specials

When I was asked to prepare a Valentine's Day recipe, I didn't want to print a heart shaped cake or pink cupcakes. And so when I spoke to two of our daughters on the telephone about it, they each offered great ideas.

The one our daughter Rita gave is one for pink risotto, and is one of the most delicious rice dishes we have ever had; the other recipe from Nancy is one husbands can surprise their wives and prepare the night before, and may serve it to their wives for breakfast in bed.' Or if he is an early riser, he can make it in the morning. We had it recently at a brunch and it is fantastic'

Rita's Pink Risotto

1/3 cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 tablespoon olive oil
1/2 cup white wine
1 1/2 cups Arborio rice (available in all markets)
5 cups hot chicken stock plus 1/4 cup reserve set aside (canned chicken soup if not homemade)
1 bunch beet greens finely chopped
1/3 cup freshly grated parmesan cheese
salt and pepper to taste

On medium heat, sauté the onion and garlic in oil and butter until soft - do not brown.

Add the rice and stir well to coat with the oil and butter. Add the wine and stir for two minutes.

Begin adding the chicken stock one cup at a time, stirring continuously until each addition evaporates slightly and the rice mixture thickens, careful not to burn.

After about 18 minutes or so, test the rice for tenderness (should be al dente). Remove from heat and stir in the beet greens, the parmesan cheese, and the 1/4 cup chicken stock you saved.

Serve the beautiful pink risotto immediately on a white plate with any meat or fish. For that finishing touch, Rita suggests "garnishing the dish with an edible flower for added effect!" How romantic!

Here is the other recipe for the frittata

Nancy's Elegant Frittata

9 eggs
1/2 cup cheddar cheese
6 slices bacon, ham or any breakfast meat
1 pint light cream
6 slices white bread (cut in cubes)
1/4 stick butter (melted)
salt and pepper to taste

Cook the bacon or any other meat and set aside. Beat the eggs real well, add the cheese, cream and the meat together. Add half the cut up bread in the mixture and blend well.

Pour in a greased quiche pan or round pan and top it with the rest of the bread cubes. Drizzle the butter on top just before baking.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 40 minutes. It will look like a beautiful soufflé and will only shrink a bit.

Happy Valentine's Day!

PS If you prepare this dish the night before, don't put the reserved bread crumbs or the butter until ready to bake

Conway Offers Real Estate Licensing Courses

The Conway Country School of Real Estate is offering four week courses on the fundamentals of real estate.

Those interested in becoming licensed real estate agents can take the 25 hours of course work to meet the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' requirements prior to taking the salespersons's licensing exam.

Students of the Conway Country School of Real Estate also have access to professional career counseling to discuss joining the Conway sales team, although enrolling in the prelicensing class does not obligate students to work for Conway.

Tuition is $200 and the classes are held at the Hanover campus (at the intersection of Routes 53 and 139) on Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The next class starts Tuesday, March 2 and runs through Thursday, March 25.

Additional classes are scheduled at Conway's Lakeville campus (just off I-495 on Route 105) on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., beginning March 1 and ending March 24.

For more information on this or future license courses, call 781-826-0088.

The Conway Country School of Real Estate is a division of Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co., which is the largest independence real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 810 agents in 41 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Neighborhood Housing Services Homebuyers Workshop March 1

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer a free orientation session to assist first-time homebuyers with determining their level of mortgage readiness Monday, March 1.

The meeting will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the McCulloch Building, 182 Green St., Weymouth.

Topics to be discussed include: what NHS can offer on the road to homeownership; credit awareness; and introduction to the mortgage process.

For more information, call 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

Answers To Some Common Questions From Homeowners

'Sharper Is Safer'

Question: When do I know it's time to replace my circular saw blade?

Answer: When you find yourself applying more pressure as you cut. A dull blade can make you do this and it can be very dangerous for you.

Applying too much force can cause the piece you're cutting to breaking, throwing you off balance and potentially in harms way with the blade. A dull blade can cause kickbacks which come totally unexpected and can cause personal injury and damage to the material you're cutting.

Dull blades can wear out your power toll motor too.

When you find it not cutting like butter, replace the blade with a new or resharpened blade.

Question: What's the difference between blueboard and sheetrock?

Answer: In short, sheetrock is less expensive and do-able for the average do it yourselfer. However, sheetrock doesn't stand up well to removing wallpaper from it and it dents relatively easy.

Blueboard is made for a veneer of plaster. This job should be left to a professional plasterer, but the hanging of the blueboard is the same as hanging sheetrock. Just try to make your joints as close as possible.

A skimcoated blueboard is a more expensive job than sheetrock, but its a quicker job and a skimcoat will take wallpaper stripping and standup to dings and dents better than sheetrock.

A skimcoat is simply the better finish of the two.

Question: How do I keep water out of my basement?

Answer: There are many reasons why water can enter your basement. The first thing you can do is to make sure your gutter downspouts and soil are sloping away from the house. You also may need to repoint the joints if you have a granite block foundation or fill any cracks if it's a poured concrete foundation.

It also could be a ground water or hydro-static pressure situation, if so would require a french drain being installed around the perimeter of the foundation, but that's an expensive proposition.

Water is a tricky thing. In April of 1987 my brother's basement flooded with 6 inches of water. He had never had a drop before or since then.

It was an extremely wet month and the underground water tabe was so saturated, the rain water had no place to go.

Space-Saving Boilers Provide Quiet, Energy Efficient Heat

(NU) Dana Morton never wants to see another oil furnace or hot water tank in his home again.

Morton is among the growing number of cost-conscious and environmentally concerned homeowners throughout North America who are discovering the value of heating their entire home and hot water supply with the Baxi Luna wall-hung boiler.

Fire by gas or propane, Baxi Luna is a combination home comfort system that cuts monthly utility bills by up to 53 percent. Measuring 30 inches high, 18 inches wide and 14 inches deep, the Baxi Luna is no bigger than a small kitchen cupboard and frees up valuable living space. It operates with modulating gas valve and soft light burner technology that ensure silent operation and a gradual lighting of the flame.

What is the key to its quiet operation and high efficiency? Baxi Luna's internal sensors detect and control thermostat and hot water needs on demand.

Morton, a professional engineer living in Kennebunkport, Maine, says that for years he up with a groaning oil furnace in the cellar beneath his bedroom and could hardly wait to turn it off in the spring. Today, he enjoys peace and quiet year-round.

"At first, I couldn't believe how small the Baxi Luna is so I decided to put it to the test this past winter," said Morton. "There's no looking back. "I have tried every type of home comfort system, and this is by far the best I've ever had," he said. "It saves me money on my hot water bill. It is also so small and makes absolutely no noise that I would have no hesitation installing it in my master bedroom closet. Plus, it does not pollute the atmosphere."

Do You Have A Problem Throwing Things Away?

By JOHN NOONAN

Are you one of those people who just can't throw things away?

Quincy health and safety officials estimate 1 percent of the city's 88,000 population falls into the category of becoming excessive hoarders.

And, becoming a problem.

A problem hoarder has a very specific symptom called Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD). This person just cannot throw anything away simply because "as soon as I get rid of something I will probably need it right away."

A seminar entitled "Why I refuse to throw things away" was held recently in the Park and Recreation mini-auditorium. Sponsors included South Shore Elder Services Inc. and the Quincy Departments of Public Health and Elder Services.

The large audience included seniors, caregivers, family members, health professionals, and fire and police agents.

Excessive hoarding by an adult can become a public health or sanitary problem, and a fire or police matter, particularly if neighbors are put at risk.

City Health Commissioner Drew Scheele said Quincy does not have a serious excessive hoarders problem because his staff of sanitary and housing inspectors keep on top of any situation as soon as complaints from the general public are received.

"That does not mean that Quincy would not have an at risk hoarder, it happens in every community," said Sandy Hovey, psychotherapist and an official of South Shore Elder Services, the Area Aging Agency which oversees and provides elders at risk services in 11 South Shore communities including Quincy.

Tom Clasby, director of the Quincy Department of Elder Services, said he has difficulties in finding space in his own apartment. He referred to the old time Fibber McGee and Molly radio comedy show. Whenever McGee opened a closet door, a wave of conglomerate things would cascade, clattering and clanging, onto the apartment floor.

Clasby humorously pointed out, one way to keep ahead of excessive hoarding, was to store old text books and memorabilia of youthful days in the homes of one's parents.

Cindy DiCristofaro, Health Department chief sanitary inspector, pointed out certain steps must be taken before entering anyone's premises because the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution provides the right of person to be secure from unlawful search.

One clinical definition of hoarding excessively is:

• The acquisition of and failure to discard a large number of possessions that appear to be of useless or limited value.

• Living spaces sufficiently cluttered so as to preclude the activities for which those spaces were designed.

• Significant distress or impairment in functioning is caused by excessive hoarding.

True hoarding is a psychiatric condition that affects less than 1 percent of the population. The hoarder cannot make rational decisions regarding what's useful and what's not. That type of hoarder may save garbage, and/or used items such as cigarette butts, burnt-out light bulbs, old wrappers, plastic bags to mention a few.

Others may hoard written or printed materials such as newspapers, magazines, letters, advertisements, past bills and old books including outdated college textbooks.

Still others may keep items typically bought in large quantities such as soap, sugar, salt, ketchup packets and take-out food boxes with packets of salt, pepper, seasonings, and small capfuls of milk and cream.

A hoarder obsesses about the collected stuff and feels compelled to collect more of the same such as plastic utensils.

A hoarder is usually unaware of anything being wrong in collecting used tea bags, phone books, medicine bottles, elastics, rolls of strings and old cigarette butts.

Another reason for hoarding is stacking items in piles for fear of forgetting what may be considered more important articles. Once an item is discarded the hoarder may forget the contents or the way they looked and they will be gone forever.

Inability to organize objects is another reason for hoarding. The hoarder has better control over piles of junk; if one doesn't know how to categorize an item or where to put it, the individual puts it in sight on top of the piles so one will know where it is at all times.

Many items are stockpiled and hoarded because of sentimental reasons. These items are perceived as valuable and the individual is unable to discriminate between what is useless and what isn't. Some items may be associated with deceased relatives and these are kept for fear of losing the memory of the loved one.

Hovey told the group that help is available to hoarders who may be at risk by calling South Shore Elder Services at 781-848-3910. The first step is to win over the trust of the excessive hoarder by counseling and working with the hoarder's relatives and friends.

It may be necessary in extreme cases to condemn the living quarters of the individual. Occasionally it may require having a guardian ad litem appointed by a judge to aid the excessively at risk hoarder.

Win Bettinson Speaker At Bethany Men's Club

Win Bettinson, former Quincy radio personality, will be the guest speaker at the Bethany Men's Club meeting Tuesday, Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. at Bethany Congregational Church.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Membership

The Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the Forest Life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor to restore the landscape and our environment with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged by Michelle and John J. Lydon, Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

State Tourney In Sight For Red Raiders

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy High School boys' basketball team is in prime position to clinch a Division 1 state tournament berth.

"We just have to take care of business," said head coach James Rendle Tuesday morning, a day after his team put forth a gallant effort against powerhouse Rockland but fell short, 63-59.

The Red Raiders (8-9 overall) need two more wins to qualify for the postseason, which they missed last year in Rendle's first season. The good news is that they've already beaten their final three opponents.

North Quincy, which traveled to Marshfield Tuesday night, hosts cross-town rival Quincy today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. and next Tuesday it hosts Plymouth South in the regular season finale.

"We're playing some good basketball against some good teams," Rendle said. "Hopefully by this time next week there'll be a headline that says we qualified for the tournament."

On Monday night, the Red Raiders played Rockland tough for the second time this season, despite dropping both contests. In the first meeting Dec. 30, the Bulldogs entered the game with a 42-point margin of victory and North Quincy lost, 66-49.

This time around, Rockland strutted over to Hancock Street with 17-1 record and leading the Patriot League. And the Red Raiders almost pulled off the upset.

Senior Daryl Costa buried a huge 3-pointer with 31 seconds left to put North Quincy ahead, 59-58. The lead was short-lived as Rockland's Joe Coppens immediately answered with a trey for the go-ahead points and later added two free throws to close out the scoring.

"I told the kids that we're fighting for a level of respect," Rendle said. "Playing a team like Rockland and beating a team like Rockland will give you that respect. The kids played their hearts out against them. They earned my respect with their performance."

Rendle praised the defensive efforts of senior forward Bryan Donovan and Costa, who led the team with 29 points. The duo held Coppens, whose father is a Quincy policeman, to five points in the first half. Coppens is eighth in the state in scoring with 25.2 points per game.

"They did a good job teaming up to hold him down a little bit," Rendle said.

Rendle was also pleased with senior Jimmy Burke and sophomore Kyle Costa in the backcourt. "They had a strong game in the backcourt because Rockland likes to pressure teams," he said. "They protected the ball and got it over halfcourt."

Last Tuesday, North Quincy knocked off Barnstable, 62-49, on the road for the second time this season.

"We controlled the game from the beginning and I was real pleased with that," Rendle said. "It was a big road win. It put us at .500 at 8-8."

Senior center Brandon Neves dominated in the paint with 30 points. "They couldn't stop him down low," Rendle said. Daryl Costa cashed in with a double-double with 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Squirt B's Second In K Of C Tourney

The Quincy Squirt B travel hockey team finished in second place in the recent Knights of Columbus tournament at Quincy Youth Arena.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 5-3 win over Norwood. Mike Nelson potted two goals with an assist. Andrew Rogantino (assist), David O'Connell (assist) and Kevin White also scored. Aaron Marcel and Robert Hudson had assists.

Quincy pulled out a 3-2 win over Hingham with Patrick Verhault (assist) netting the game-winner. James Vialpando and Nelson also scored. Joe Barton and Myles Riddell had assists. Goalies Justin Keenan and Brian Grasselli were sharp between the pipes.

Quincy lost a hard fought game to Milton, 5-2. Verhault and Rogantino scored and Rudy Tryon and Nelson had assists.

In the semifinals, Quincy topped Norwood II, 4-2. White pocketed a pair of goals with an assist. Hudson and Nelson also scored. Paul Mulvey and Rogantino had assists.

In the championship, Quincy met Milton once again but fell short, 6-2, as it had a hard time finding the back of the net. White and Verhault scored. Conor Flynn, Timmy Marks, Rogantino and O'Connell had assists.

Quincy Earns Postseason Invitation

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

There is no two-decade drought this time as the Quincy High School girls' basketball team is headed back to the Division 3 state tournament for the second year in row.

The Presidents pulled out a 52-50 victory over Nauset last Tuesday at home to earn the postseason invitation.

They routed Sandwich, 68-48, last Friday at home to clinch second place in the Atlantic Coast League for the second straight year and they closed out the week the following night with a 60-33 home win over Randolph.

"Before the season we expected to make the tournament so we're excited to be back in it," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "It's another milestone. It was an exciting game, considering Nauset beat us the last time. It was a big week for us. We're definitely peaking at the right time."

Quincy (12-5 overall, 8-3 ACL) played at Randolph Tuesday and will travel to neighboring North Quincy tonight (Thursday) at 6:30. It hosts Abington Monday afternoon at 1:30 to close out the regular season.

"We're definitely looking to sweep them," said Bretsch, whose team knocked off North Quincy, 61-37, Dec. 23. "But it's always a tough game. You never know what's going to happen in these rival games."

"We're fighting for (playoff) position right now," he added. "We'll probably be in the middle of the pack, so we're looking to get a home game."

Against Randolph, senior Bonnie Hirtle, the ACL's leading scorer with 24.5 point per game, pumped in 26 points. Junior center Alysia DiMuzio scored 12, senior guard Sarah Shea and sophomore forward Jessica Page had six apiece, and junior Stephanie Kozlowski added four.

In the Sandwich contest, the Presidents faced a hot Blue Knights squad that in its previous game handed league front-runner Whitman-Hanson its first league loss of the season.

"That was the best basketball we've played this season," Bretsch said.

Hirtle scored a team-high 23 points. Page tallied 15 points and grabbed nine rebounds and DiMuzio totaled 14 points and eight rebounds. Senior forward Brittney Tobin added eight points.

Against Nauset, Quincy held a 10 point halftime lead but eked out the victory at the end with a three-point play by DiMuzio, who finished with 13 points. Hirtle drained 33 points to lead all scorers.

Sacred Heart Wins 3, Improves To 11-2

Sacred Heart of Quincy improved to 11-2 by winning three of four games the past two weeks in CYO travel action.

With one game left, Sacred Heart has qualified for the league and state tournaments, a big step up from last year's 3-9 campaign.

In a 64-50 win over St. Brendan's of Dorchester, Dennis Magaldi delivered a huge game, hitting three 3-pointers on the way to 21 points.

Sean Sullivan registered a double-double with 12 points and 10 rebounds. Joe Jenkins scored eight points, Greg Lanham and Chris Scherer had six apiece, and Dan Isberg four. Tim McCarthy, Mark Hastings, Steve Reardon and Brian Lynch also scored.

In a 45-36 loss to St. Williams of Dorchester, Sacred Heart held a 22-21 lead at halftime but could only score 14 points after the break. Isberg paced the team with 13 points, followed by Sullivan (seven), Colin Walsh (four), Jenkins (four), Reardon (three), Magaldi (three) and Scherer (two).

Sacred Heart pulled out a 36-33 victory over St. Agatha's of Milton with Reardon and Walsh hitting clutch shots in this defensive battle. Walsh led the team with nine points, Sullivan [illegible] Isberg [illegible] Reardon [illegible] Magaldi [illegible] Scherer [illegible] scored.

Against St. Ann's of Dorchester, Sacred Heart played its best all-around game with a 66-34 triumph. Sherer (10 points, 12 rebounds), Sullivan (10, 11) and Isberg (10) reached double figures.

Lynch (eight points), Walsh (seven), Jenkins (six), Hastings (five), McCarthy (four), Reardon (three), Magaldi (two) and Lanham [illegible] scored.

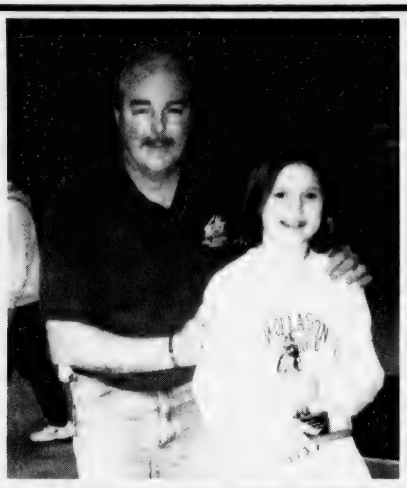
GETTING HOSED



Automobile manufacturers generally recommend changing the engine coolant every two years, but there is no reason to stop there. At the same time, perform a check of the hoses and clamps. The hoses leading to and from the radiator have a useful life span of about four years. If you can remember your last coolant flush but cannot remember the last time the hoses were changed, chances are that the upper and lower radiator hoses, at the very least, are due for replacement. If, when squeezing a cool hose, the ends of the hose feel softer than the mid-section, it is likely that the hose will fail from the inside with either a burst or a pin hole leak.

Today, [illegible] hoses replaced on a regular basis. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. # Quincy Elks Home To Three District Hoop Shoot Winners

Matthew Goreham, Sarah Ryan And Ryan Evans Advance To State Finals

Quincy Lodge of Elks is the home of three district champions in the Elks National Hoop Shoot.

The champions are: Sarah Ryan, ages 8-9 division, Wollaston School third-grader; Ryan Evans, ages 8-9, Beechwood Knoll fourth-grader; and Matthew Goreham, ages 10-11, Atlantic Middle School sixth-grader.

They advanced to the state finals by winning three of the six divisions in the recent Circle District Finals held at Marshfield High School.

The Elks Hoop Shoot is a national contest that will end with six champions in three age groups. Over 2 million boys and girls compete annually in the event. The youngsters shoot 25 free throws at each level of competition, with ties broken with five-shot overtimes.

The Quincy youngsters were accompanied to the Circle District Finals by Lodge Exalted Ruler Jim Ryan, who is working with Lodge Hoop Shoot Chairman Ed Miller to ensure the best opportunities for the youngsters.

Locally, the youngsters qualified for the event at competitions supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department at programs in neighborhoods throughout Quincy. The Quincy Lodge has sponsored the event for over 25 years and provided trophies to all Quincy champions.

The highlight of the Quincy Lodge occurred when Aileen Croke of Quincy competed for the National Championship.

This year's winners will take part in the state championship in new warm-up suits with the Quincy #943 emblem, which were recently given to the youngsters by the Elks.

Supervised Gym Programs During School Vacation Week

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an expanded schedule of supervised gym programs during next week's school vacation period.

Gyms will be supervised from 9 a.m. to noon for free activities for boys and girls age 8 through high school. School gyms will be open in all neighborhoods of the city and will feature activities such as basketball, floor hockey, gym games and dodge ball.

Registration is done at each location. Those age 8 through grade 5 will attend from 9 to 10:30 a.m.; those in grade 7 to 12 will attend from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Participants may attend the program of their choice.

Some minor changes in times may occur in some locations to accommodate differences in enrollment.

In addition to the day schedule, Recreation Director Barry Welch noted the regular evening open gym programs will still be conducted Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings according to the season-long schedule.

The department will also supervise the regular 12 gym schedule on Saturdays, Feb. 14 and 21.

"The department expects these programs to be well attended and have always been beneficial to participants and working parents," Welch said.

The schedule is as follows:

Kiwanis Hockey Tournament Begins Monday At Youth Arena

The 31st annual Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament will kick off Monday, Feb. 16, at Quincy Youth Arena, 60 Murphy Memorial Drive, off Sea Street.

The "A" tournament features 24 teams and four levels of competition: mites, squirts, pee wees and bantams. The week-long tournament will culminate Sunday, Feb. 22, with four championship games beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Quincy will be well represented in the tournament, considered one of the most prestigious youth hockey events in the Northeast. The local mite, squirt, pee wee and bantam teams will all compete.

Teams from California, New Jersey and Maine will be traveling significant distances to participate. Other teams taking part include the Seahawks, Hingham, Weymouth, Milton, Braintree, Taunton, Brockton, South Boston, Norwood, Walpole, Woburn, Franklin and Cape Cod.

The first game of the tournament will be played Monday, Feb. 16, at 12:50 p.m. when Quincy faces off against Braintree in Mites action.

Franklin-Cape Cod Mites will play at 2 p.m., followed by Braintree-Weymouth Squirts at 3:10 p.m. and Milton-Taunton Squirts at 4:20 p.m.

The Quincy Pee Wees will take on Brockton at 5:30 p.m. and the Quincy Bantams close out the opening day of the tournament against Braintree at 6:40 p.m.

The Quincy Squirts will play their first game Tuesday against Milton at 2 p.m. The Quincy Pee Wees will play their second game against Woburn at 6:40 p.m.

The remaining games for the Quincy teams are:

Wednesday: Quincy Mites vs. Franklin, 3:10 p.m.; Quincy Squirts vs. Walpole, 5:30 p.m.; Quincy Pee Wees vs. Braintree, 7:50 p.m.

Thursday: Quincy Squirts vs. Taunton, 2 p.m.; Quincy Bantams vs. Hingham 4:20 p.m.

Friday: Quincy Mites vs. New Jersey, 4:20 p.m.

Saturday: Quincy Bantams v. Seahawks, 7 a.m.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will be selling a program book featuring local sponsors for $5 at the gate. The book lists the rosters of the participating teams and a complete tournament schedule.

Proceeds from the program book will benefit Kiwanis charities, which focus on helping local underprivileged children.

Admission is free for all games. For more information, call Quincy Youth Arena at 617-479-8371.

The Chrysler, Jeep and Dodge Service specialists provide the following quiz to test your knowledge of pet vehicles safety and to ensure a tail-wagging, purrrfect holiday road trip.

Questions:

1. Where is the safest place for your pet to sit? a. On the driver's lap, b. In the front passenger's seat beside the driver, c. In the rear seat, d. In the back, if it is a pickup truck.

2. Should your pet be allowed to put its head out the window? a. Yes, b. If the window is open a maximum of three inches, c. Never.

3. How often do pets require rest stops? a. Every hour, b. When they tell you they need to, c. Whenever you do.

4. Should you ever leave your pet in the car? a. Yes, b. Only if you leave the window slightly opened, c. Only if it is for 10 minutes or less, d. Never.

5. What should you do if your pet gets motion sickness? a. Take it on shorter trips, b. Let it ride in the front seat, c. Leave it at home.

Answers:

1. c. If your pet is placed in the back seat away from the driver, it minimizes distractions that can cause accidents. If deployed in an accident, an air bag can actually harm a pet. According to an AAA study, pets are ranked the third worst in-car distraction, placing higher than cell phone usage. For added safety, place your pet in a harness or cage secured by a seatbelt.

2. c. According to The Humane Society of the United States, dogs, or any pets that put their heads out the window, risk developing an infection or injury from dirt or debris carried in the air.

3. All answers are correct. Frequent stops are an opportunity for your pet to stretch its legs, drink water and have something to eat. This advice does not apply to cats, though, as they have a tendency to take off if let loose.

4. d. According to The Humane Society of the United States, by leaving a pet in the car, you run the risk of exposing your pet to heat stress or pet theft. On a hot day, the temperature in a parked car can reach 192 degrees, even with the windows partially open. Pets are particularly sensitive to heat stress and heat stroke.

5. a. Take it on shorter trips. Most motion sickness is caused by stress. Introduce your pet to car travel with shorter trips and they may eventually become more comfortable with car travel.

Put The Brakes On Underage Drinking And Driving

(NAPS) – Every year, underage drinking and driving crashes cause more than 2,200 deaths.

Although automobile crashes are the number one cause of death for teens in America, there's something teens can do to keep from being another statistic.

Family, Career and Community Leaders of American (FCCLA) offers a national education program through which young people strive to save lives through sober driving, seat belt use, and safe-driving habits.

High-Test a Must in Some Engines

Q: I just bought a 2003 Ford Focus SVT. It has the 2.0 four-cylinder Zetec engine with 170 horsepower. The owner's manual says to use premium fuel only. What will happen to the engine if I disregard that and only run medium or even regular fuel? — *Jeremy S., Pennsylvania

A: If you don't use the 91- to 93-octane premium fuel that your owner's manual recommends, you could be in for some serious problems. I'm not sure if you know what the word "detonation" means, but I'll bet you do know what "ping" sounds like.

Ping, which is a "first cousin" of detonation, occurs due to abnormal combustion. It's also called "knock," from the noise that is transmitted from the colliding of the multiple flame fronts and the increased cylinder pressure put on the piston, connecting rod and rod bearings.

Any sort of abnormality in the combustion process has serious consequences in the power output, longevity and emissions generation of an engine. Depending on when detonation occurs, it could damage anything from the rings on your piston to breaking the rods or crankshaft!

At first you might not notice anything wrong, but I can assure you that after running several thousand miles on the lower grade fuels, your engine will start to show signs of serious ping and detonation.

You MUST use the premium fuel, or bad days lie ahead for you.

Tips Parents Can Use When Teens Are Most Attentive

Teaching Your Teens To Drive

(NAPS) — A "teachable moment" occurs when interest in a particular subject is higher than usual because of a current event.

Educators have long used the teachable moment to emphasize important lessons in the classroom. When a teenager's thoughts turn to driving, parents have a unique opportunity for a strong of teachable moments leading to that teen obtaining their driver's license.

"From the minute your child expresses an interest in driving, you can begin pointing out and demonstrating good and bad driving behaviors," says Phil Berardelli, author of Safe Young Drivers: A Guide for Parents and Teens. "Take full advantage of having a captive audience hanging on your every word."

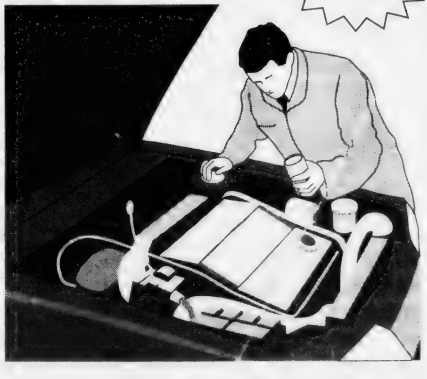
Every day 21 teens die and 1,500 more are injured in car crashes. Crashes are the No. 1 killer of U.S. teens, and the No. 1 causes of crashes is inexperience. First-time drivers do not know how to act and react to other drivers on the road, pedestrians and distractions. Here are tips parents can use when teens are most attentive:

• Don't rush to put your teen behind the wheel. Spend time reviewing safe driving tips and techniques. Listen to what your teen is telling you about their concerns and issues. Make sure both of you are comfortable before putting your teen in the driver's seat.

• Provide a safe car. Avoid trucks or SUVs with a high center of gravity that may be more difficult to control. Choose large or mid-size vehicles with the newest safety features.

• Review driving obstacles and situations. Ask your teen how they would respond to given situations, such as a tire going off the road, then offer practical tips.

• Show your teen newspaper articles. Sharing a news story about a teenager dying in a crash gives you an opportunity to discuss how the crash could have been avoided.



• Do you homework. By visiting CARFAX Safe Teen Drivers Programs (www.carfax.com), parents with teenagers in the permit stage can obtain step-by-step lessons via concise, weekly tips. These nuggets of information can be used during teachable moments when the teen is behind the wheel.

Driving a car is the greatest risk a teenager faces. Take full advantage of any time spent together in the car in this period of heightened interest. That permit stage when a teenager is just learning to drive -- offers the best opportunity for teachable moments in which a parent can impart safe driving techniques and habits.

Quincy Medical Center Receives Healthcare Accreditation

Scores 98 In Survey Of National Standards For Health Care Quality And Safety

With a score of 98, Quincy Medical Center has received the Gold Seal of Approval℠ for compliance with the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations' national standards for health care quality and safety.

Only seven hospitals in the U.S. surveyed by the Joint Commission received a score of 98 or above.

"Achieving accreditation demonstrates Quincy Medical Center's ongoing commitment to provide safe, quality service to our patients," said Christine Schuster, RN, MBA, president and CEO. "Our score of 98 places us among the 'best of the best' in terms of quality and safety."

The accreditation followed a three and half-day Joint Commission survey of QMC in the fall. In addition to the hospital accreditation, QMC's Transitional Care Unit (TCU) and the Partial Hospital Program (PHP) received individual JCAHO accreditation.

The TCU, which provides short term rehabilitation and medical care designed to help patients regain their independence and return to home after an inpatient stay, received a score of 98 when measured against Joint Commission standards for long term care. The PHP, a short-term, outpatient medical psychiatry service, received a score of 97 when surveyed against Joint Commission standards in behavioral health.

The Joint Commission is the nation's oldest and largest standards-setting and accrediting body in health care. The organization evaluates and accredits nearly 17,000 health care organizations and programs in the U.S.

"Above all, the national standards are intended to stimulate continuous, systematic and organization-wide improvement in an organization's performance and the outcomes of care," said Kurt Patton, executive director, Hospital Accreditation Program, Joint Commission.

"The Community should be proud that Quincy Medical Center is focusing on the most challenging goal – to continuously raise quality and safety to higher levels," Patton added.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER has received the Gold Seal of Approval℠ from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations. QMC was one of seven hospitals in the US surveyed by the Joint Commission to receive a score of 98 or above.

CHILDREN AND ORAL HYGIENE

Until children reach about age four, they do not have the manual dexterity required to brush their teeth properly, and parents are encouraged to help with brushing chores for at least two minutes each morning and night. Using a soft toddler or child-sized brush, apply only a pea-sized amount of tooth paste until a child knows enough not to swallow it. The most important element of toothbrushing is the mechanical part of the brushing process. As for flossing, parents should introduce this part of the oral hygiene regimen as soon as a child's teeth get so close that the brush cannot get between them. Children cannot be expected to effectively floss their own teeth until about age ten.

This week's column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We're happy to provide dentistry for people of all ages, helping ensure your natural teeth with last you a lifetime. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we achieve excellence in client satisfaction by performing quality dental services. Please be sure to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment.

P.S. Until a child's primary teeth come in, use a dampened washcloth to clean his or her gums daily.

Exercising During Cold and Flu Season

Q. During the winter months, I see many people at my gym sneezing and coughing in the grips of a cold or the flu. What can I do to protect myself while working out? — *S.W., Durham, N.C.

A. The winter season brings not only colder weather, but the risk of catching a cold or the flu. On the one hand, exercise is good medicine; one study suggests that regular exercise can cut in half the number of days a person suffers from the cold or flu. You can improve your immune system by eating a proper diet, getting adequate rest, reducing your stress level and by exercising.

On the other hand, gyms and fitness facilities — just like the workplace and other areas where people congregate — are natural breeding grounds for passing on and getting infected by cold and flu germs. If you exercise at a gym, there are several precautions you can take to reduce your chances of catching these ailments from other members.

• Be aware of how you're feeling before you begin to work out. If you feel a cold or flu coming on, understand that your immune system may have to work overtime to fight off all of the possible germs you will be exposed to in the gym. If you are experiencing any symptoms of a cold or flu — such as fever, shortness of breath, headache, muscle aches, fatigue, severe cough, sneezing, runny nose or chest congestion — wait until you recover before returning to exercise. This will not only keep your symptoms from possibly getting worse, but will also protect other people in the gym.

• Carry towels to wipe down machines and weights before and after you exercise. As you mentioned, there are people in the gym who are sneezing and coughing and then touch mats, weights and machines. Everything they touch can become a potential source of illness for you. Don't forget about handles on exercise machines, doorknobs and locker rooms.

• Be sure to keep your hands away from your eyes, nose and mouth while exercising. After your workout, be sure to wash your hands thoroughly before touching your face, especially before eating. Remember to wash and disinfect workout gloves and clothes too.

Taking care of yourself by exercising, drinking plenty of fluids, eating properly, getting adequate rest and following precautions while in the gym can help keep you healthy during the cold and flu season.

A Thought For The Week

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting . . . a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you", but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, nor a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good, too!

James B. Clancy, 85

Businessman, Patriarch Of Family Singers

A funeral Mass for James B. Clancy, 85, of Hull, patriarch of the Clancy Family Singers and president and owner of James B. Clancy Plumbing and Heating Inc. in Quincy, was celebrated Feb. 6 at Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, 326 Granite Ave., Milton.

He died Feb. 4 at Life Care of the South Shore in Scituate.

Mr. Clancy retired from the plumbing business in 1988.

With his wife as accompanist, he founded and entertained with the Clancy Family Singers of New England, which included the couple's 12 children. They performed for years around New England and New York.

He was a well known tenor and appeared as a guest soloist at Symphony Hall and Jordan Hall in Boston. Mr. Clancy once sang for President John F. Kennedy and his brother, Sen. Robert Kennedy, and was invited to tour with the Von Trapp Family Singers.

For 40 years, Mr. Clancy was the tenor soloist at St. John's Church in Swampscott and St. James Church in Boston. He also sang at St. Gregory's Church in Dorchester.

His performances drew raves from Boston critics, including a review in the former Boston Post which read: "Fine Irish tenor James Clancy delights Boston audiences with opera as easily sung as his Irish ballads."

Mr. Clancy performed with his family at St. James Church in Boston each St. Patrick's Day.

He graduated from New England Conservatory of Music, where he studied voice performance.

Born in North Adams, he grew up in Dedham and in the Merrymount section of Quincy.

He attended Quincy schools and graduated from Quincy High School. He lived in Quincy for 47 years before moving to Hull 24 years ago after spending summers in Hull for 21 years.

Mr. Clancy spent winters in Henderson, N.C., for 11 years and Naples, Fla., for four years.

During World War II, he was a plumber and steamfitter at the Fore River shipyard. He helped build several ships, including the battleship USS Massachusetts.

He was a past president of the Milton Kiwanis Club and a member of Cohasset Country Club, the Neighborhood Club in Quincy and Stonebridge Country Club in Naples.

He is survived by wife of 61 years, Marion V. (Quinn) Clancy; three daughters, Maryellen Kelly of Milton and Julie E. Kenerson and Eileen C. Pantano, both of Quincy; six sons, Joseph F. Clancy of Milton, John H. Clancy of Braintree, Michael B. Clancy of Weymouth, Matthew S. Clancy of Melrose, Steven D. Clancy of Newton and Christopher W. Clancy of Scituate; and 31 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

He was the father of the late Margaret A. Lavery, the late James B. Clancy Jr. and the late Martha J. Clancy.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Donations may be made to St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester Ave., Dorchester 02124.

"M" RIVERS

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Doing something nice for others is typical of the generous Arian. But be prepared for some jealous types who might try to question one of your more recent acts of kindness.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to take on new responsibilities. But before you do, you might want to check out exactly what would be required of you so that you don't face any "surprises" later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It might be best to put off an important decision until a fluctuating situation becomes more stable. Recently received news could help resolve a long-standing family matter.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you still have a problem getting that information gap closed, you might consider asking a higher authority to resolve the matter, leaving you free to move on to another project.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A family matter needs to be dealt with at the start of the week. Once it's resolved, the Big Cat can devote more attention to that new opportunity that seems to hold so much potential.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pay attention to those niggling doubts. They could be warning you not to make any major decisions until you've checked them out — especially where money matters might be involved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business venture might need more of your attention than you are able to provide. Consider asking a trusted friend or family member to help you work through this time crunch.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more positive aspect helps you get a clearer focus of how to handle your time so that you can deal with several responsibilities that are just now showing up on your schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A very close friend (you know who that is!) has advice that could help you work through a confusing situation. So put your pride aside and ask for it. You'll be glad you did.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace situation could turn a bit tense. The best way to handle it is to confront it and deal with it openly. Doing so can help reveal the underlying reasons for the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague's remarks appear to be especially cutting. But don't waste your time or your energy trying to deal with the situation. You have more important things to do.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Support for your work comes as a surprise from someone you thought was critical or, at least, indifferent. Your spouse or partner has big plans for the weekend.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your spiritual strength often acts as an inspiration to help others make decisions about their lives.

Mrs. Pappas was born in Vassara, Greece.

Wife of the late Christos Pappas, she is survived by two sons, George C. Pappas of Hingham and Peter C. Pappas of Squantum; two daughters, Argyro Spiropoulos of Squantum and Elaine Gavros of Hudson; 11 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston.

Donations may be made to St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church, 157 Beale St., Quincy 02170.

Marie B. Lemon-Bruce, 79

Retired Inspector

A funeral Mass for Marie B. (Bevilacqua) Lemon-Bruce, 79, of Quincy, a retired inspector, was celebrated Monday at St. Boniface Church.

She died Feb. 6 at John Scott Nursing & Rehabilitation Center in Braintree.

Mrs. Lemon Bruce was an inspector at LH Electromes for 10 years, retiring 1971.

She was a longtime communicant of St. Boniface Church.

Born in Grosetto, Italy, she lived in Danvers before moving to Quincy 33 years ago.

Wife of the late Ralph Bruce, she is survived by her husband, Arthur J. Lemon of Quincy; two sons, Richard J. Lemon of Bridgewater and Frederick J. Lemon of Baltimore, Md.; two daughters, Patricia Perkins of East Bridgewater and Shirley Knudsen of Quincy; two sisters, Eleanor Altoni and Gabriella Slorindi, both of Quincy; 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Alice M. Tucker, 91

A funeral Mass for Alice M. (Wherty) Tucker, 91, of Quincy, a homemaker, was celebrated Monday at Star of the Sea Church.

She died Feb. 4 at New England Medical Center in Boston.

Mrs. Tucker was a member of the Squantum Women's Club and the Senior Citizens Club.

Born in Boston, she lived in Dorchester before moving to Quincy 40 years ago.

Wife of the late George Carey and the late George Tucker, she is survived by a son, George Carey of Middleboro; two daughters, Alice Quinn of Squantum and Maureen Demers of Maine; 13 grandchildren; 18 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late John Francis Carey.

Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Funeral arrangements were by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to American Cancer Society, Boston, 25 Stuart St., 4th Floor, Boston 02116.

DEP Has Concerns On New QHS Plan

mission, in a 2001 assessment, said the wetlands did "not" meet the criteria for BVW.

"There appears to be some questions as to the nature of these wetlands," John Felix, deputy associate commissioner, wrote to Ellen Roy Herzfelder, secretary of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. "The city should clarify this discrepancy in the final (report)," Felix wrote.

If the wetlands are confirmed to be BVW then the project as it stands would not be permitted, according to Felix. Classifying the wetlands to the lower protection level may eliminate the need for a state permit, he suggested.

The conservation commission is scheduled to review its classification of the wetlands in August.

Under present circumstances, Felix wrote, it is unlikely the DEP would issue a variance to the city relaxing the full application of the Wetlands Protection Act. Variances are issued only if there are no reasonable alternatives or there is an overriding community, regional, state or national public interest, he wrote.

The city should seek alternatives that would allow the project to proceed without a wetlands variance, the letter states. These alternatives would include reconfiguring or redesigning the proposed high school on the site to minimize wetlands impact, Felix wrote.

One alternative might be to locate other components of the project, athletic facilities, playing fields and parking facilities, off-site, Felix stated.

"For example, the Merrymount Park site already provides some of the support facilities used by the high school including Veterans Memorial Stadium (football and track), which is used for all high school games, a high school soccer field, and a variety of additional athletic fields," Felix wrote. He said the city should address these and other alternatives in its final report.

"The DEP letter gives us direction, and I think the direction they gave keeps us at the Faxon Field site," said City Solicitor Monica Connyngham. "Additional compromises may have to be evaluated by the school committee."

The school committee was scheduled to address this issue at last night's (Wednesday) meeting.

The new high school is scheduled to be built next to the current building, which would be renovated into a new Central Middle School. The state is expected to pick up 90 percent of the construction costs, and taxpayers would pay at least $30 million of the project's overall cost.

In addition, the DEP cited concerns regarding stormwater management for the project. The city's initial EIR provided "very limited information" about protecting the wetlands during construction and post-construction of the high school, the letter stated.

"Wetland resource areas in Massachusetts are protected from adverse water quality, flooding, and erosion impacts caused by stormwater runoff during construction and post-construction, under the provisions of the Department's Stormwater Management Policy," Felix wrote.

The city's final report should address source controls, pollution prevention measures, erosion and sediment controls during construction and the drainage system so that it complies with the Stormwater Policy and water quality standards, the letter stated.

Would Hurt Homeowners In Long Run, He Says

Phelan Rejects Proposal To Shift Tax Classification

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Calling it a "grave disservice" to taxpayers, Mayor William Phelan has denied a council-backed proposal that sought to provide tax relief for residential homeowners.

Phelan declined to endorse the home rule petition, saying it would offer short-term relief but punish taxpayers in the long run.

"The proposed home rule petition is a politically expedient device that offers short-lived relief at a future cost that is considerable, and which may well be unimaginable," Phelan said in a letter accompanying the denial.

Phelan's decision effectively kills the home rule petition, since the city council has no recourse in the matter.

On a close 5-4 vote earlier this month, the council approved and sent to Phelan a measure which would allow the city to reset its tax classification and shift more of the tax burden onto businesses and away from homeowners.

According to the home rule petition, introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, the city could take advantage of a newly-passed state law that allows Quincy to increase its tax classification to 179 percent and then drop it to 170 over a five-year period. The city's highest rate would be capped at 170 percent, according to the proposal.

Currently, the city's tax classification is capped at 175 percent. In December, the council voted to increase the tax classification from

QTA Rally To Protest Tax, Spending Increases

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA) will demonstrate against higher taxes and increased spending this Saturday at 12 noon in front of City Hall.

Alan Cousin, QTA president, said the demonstration will seek to place an emphasis on the need for elected officials to reduce taxes and curb spending.

Cousin encouraged residents to attend the rally, which will feature remarks by taxpayers and patriotic songs. The Rev. John Swanson, minister of the Union Congregational Church, will lead the residents in song.

Cousin said he is hoping for a big turnout. "Obviously, the more there are, there more of an impression it will make on our elected officials," he said.

ALAN COUSIN

The rally will be the first in a series of activities placing pressure on elected officials.

"A lot of good measures have been suggested to make the tax burden somewhat easier to bear," said Cousin. "But it isn't clear that most of these people understand the real problem. The real problem is that spending can't keep rising as it has. Until the mayor and all our city councillors clearly understand this problem and are committed to addressing it, we intend to keep escalating the pressure on them."

In the case of inclement weather, the event will be held Saturday, Feb. 28, he said.

QTA Questions Shipyard Settlement

City Solicitor Says Tax Agreement 'Good For City'

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA) is asking the Massachusetts Department of Revenue (DOR) and city council to investigate what it calls irregularities in the recent property tax settlement between the city and a company controlled by shipyard owner Dan Quirk.

Under the agreement, the city is to receive $1.8 million from March Fourth, LLC for the parcel it bought at the former Fore River shipyard, but the city waives any claim to other back taxes, interest, fees or costs, said Alan Cousin, president of QTA.

"There are several provisions in this agreement that appear to be contrary to state law," said Cousin. "We are asking DOR to examine this case, and will be asking the city council to do likewise."

But City Solicitor Monica Conyngham disagreed, calling the agreement a "good deal for the city."

"This settlement was approved by a Superior Court Judge," she said. "I don't believe there are any irregularities to it."

In a letter written to DOR, Robert Haley, QTA vice president, pointed out several items he claims are problematic in the agreement:

• The city waives nearly $500,000 in back taxes for fiscal years 2002 and 2003.

• The city waives more than $350,000 in costs, fees, and interest, while state law allows a municipality to waive only $15 in interest.

• The city granted an abatement to March Fourth LLC, lowering the assessed value of the property from $50 million to $10 million, although March Fourth did not file for an abatement before Feb. 1. This allows March Fourth to circumvent the statutory process for abatements.

• The city agreed to assess the property at $10 million "for the foreseeable future," although it is not allowed under state law, according to Haley.

Haley said the tax agreement includes fiscal year 2004, which was not included in the city's suit against March Fourth.

Cousin questioned whether the deal is legal.

"That has to be decided by others," he said. "But we do know that it is at best irregular, and worse, it is highly inappropriate at a time when the average residential tax bill is rising by 18 percent. At a minimum, it raises questions that need a complete and forthright answer from a higher authority."

The agreement is a result of a lawsuit filed by the city to collect taxes that have accrued since a Special Tax Agreement (STA) was rescinded by Mayor William Phelan in 2002.

The STA was part of a deal struck with former Mayor James Sheets that allowed Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI), the previous owner of the site, to forego tax payments for the parcel with the understanding that the company would create jobs. The STA remained intact despite not creating any significant employment opportunities from 1997-2001.

MHI eventually defaulted on its loans and filed for bankruptcy in 2000. Since the federal government approved loan guarantees for MHI, it assumed control of the property and held an auction last year. Dan Quirk won the property at auction for $9 million.

Conyngham said the city was fortunate to settle the case for $1.8 million.

"We did very well, given the complicated legal position we were in trying to collect the full amount from March Fourth," she said.

She said March Fourth asserted that the Maritime Administration (MARAD) was the property owner after Massachusetts Heavy Industries defaulted on its loans. Since MARAD is an arm of the federal government, it was exempt from paying property taxes, March Fourth argued.

MARAD, however, never notified the Registry of Deeds that it was the mortgagee in possession, said Conyngham.

As a result, the city issued tax bills in 2002 and 2003 to MHI for $2.2 million. With interest, the amount increased to $2.6 million, according to city officials.

Conyngham said the city risked becoming embroiled in a protracted legal battle with an unknown outcome.

"Right or wrong, this litigation was heading for federal court," said Conyngham. "The legal bills and length of time would have been costly to the city."

In addition, there was not specific case law addressing this issue, she said.

"There was no case on point that would have given us real confidence of success in the end," she said.

The settlement agreement also reduces the value of the property to $10 million for tax purposes. Quirk purchased the property for $9 million last year when it was assessed at $50 million.

School Committee Issues March 15 Deadline

QC Must Pay Rent Or Face Eviction

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The school committee has issued a firm ultimatum to Quincy College: Pay outstanding rent totaling $443,000 or pack your bags and go elsewhere.

Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro sent an eviction notice to Quincy College President Sean Barry last week after the school committee unanimously voted to begin the eviction process. At issue is more than 18 months' worth of rent on three city-owned buildings the college occupies.

In 2002, the school committee voted to double the rent - from $217,000 to $450,000 - it charges the college. Although the school committee has not increased the rent in a decade, college officials have complained that the rent hike was unfair.

The committee has maintained the increase was based on a fair market value of the buildings. The college refused to pay the increase and has been issuing checks at the old rate for more than 18 months. As a result, the college owes nearly half a million dollars to the school department.

"That was a vote to give a message that we are not kidding," said School Committee member Elaine Dwyer.

Barry was not available for comment.

According to the eviction notice, the college must satisfy two requests in order to stay at Coddington Hall and two other houses on Saville Ave. The college must pay more than $443,000 in outstanding rent owed to the school department and enter into a new, one-year lease with the rent hike intact by March 15. The new lease would be for one year, March 1, 2004 to Feb. 28, 2005.

Quincy College's lease expired in 2002, which makes the college a tenant at-will. The city can end the relationship whenever it wants because a judge ruled last year that it has the right to charge rent and is considered the landlord of the properties.

If those terms are not satisfied, the college would have to vacate the premises no later than May 31, 2004, according to the eviction notice.

School officials said the date was chosen because they do not want to not disrupt students during the current Spring Semester, which ends on May 22

"We don't want the students to be affected – it's not their fault," said Dwyer.

According to the letter, the college would still be held liable for the outstanding rent even if it vacates the premises. The school committee could tack on as much as eight percent interest on the balance, said Dwyer.

In addition to the eviction notice, the school committee also voted to look for options for the buildings if Quincy College vacates the premises.

"At time goes by, it becomes more compelling for the school system and the city to come to terms with alternative uses so there is a revenue source coming from these buildings," said DeCristofaro.

Dwyer agreed.

"We have many ideas about what we can use those buildings for," she said.

The school committee has discussed the need to have another early childhood center in the city.

In a letter to state environmental officials, DEP suggested that city officials seek

FRITO & DORITO: Both NMs, 1 y.o., orange Tabbies. Adopted as kittens and returned to shelter because they didn't adjust well to family's new dog and toddler. Ideally adopted together.

HONEY: SF, approx. 1 y.o., orange Tabby. Would do well in home with a patient, cat experienced person.

HOLLY: SF, approx. 6 months old, DSH, black and white. Loves other cats. Would do well in home with cat friendly cats.

CLARENCE: NM, approx. 1 y.o., DMH, buff colored. A little shy, likes affection. Needs home with quiet atmosphere.

SWEETIE: NM, approx. 4 y.o., DSH, black with orange eyes. Independent cat. Does not do well with other cats or children.

ANGELICA: 7 month old kitten. Needs a quiet home.

STEVIE: 12 y.o. female Tortie. On thyroid medication. Sweet.

PRINCESS: SF, 8 months old, Tiger with black on tip of tail. Do best in home with quiet environment and another cat to play with.

NEFERTIT: 12 y.o., calico female. Just wants to have a nice warm bed to sleep on and someone to love her.

FIRST LADY: 10 y.o., longhaired beauty. Would be good addition to a home with adult or kids who respect her seniority.

CLYDE: 3 y.o. male, FIV+. Should be an only cat or go with another FIV+ cat.

Politics And Speculation

Politics and speculation go together like bacon and eggs.

Mayor William Phelan, for example, is barely into his second term but some political observers are already wondering what's next for him.

PHELAN

Some see him as a potential candidate for Norfolk County district attorney.

That, they think, could be in 2006 with a couple of "ifs": If Atty. General Tom Reilly runs for governor and Dist. Atty. William Keating goes for attorney general.

Asked about that possibility, Phelan says: "I haven't given that any thought."

There's speculation he will run for a third term. And speculation he won't.

"I've just started my second term," he says. "And right now I am concentrating on the next two years and wanting to do the best job I possibly can."

But, how about a third term?

"I will make up my mind on that next year," he says.

And he adds:

"I'm not ruling anything out and not ruling anything in."

And there will probably be some speculation on that.

JOHN GILLIS obviously believes there's nothing like an early start.

GILLIS

He was the first candidate at City Hall to pick up nomination papers for this year's sate election. Gillis will be seeking his fourth four-year term as a Norfolk County Commissioner. He's out gathering the needed 500 voter signatures on those nomination papers.

Gillis, who served 37 years as city clerk, and two as assistant clerk, was one of the most popular figures ever at City Hall.

Many believed he could have been mayor and wanted him to run. But he didn't.

THE CITY PLANNING Department has lost another top figure.

DOYLE

Principal Planner Greg Doyle has retired, closing out 41 years service with the city, 31 in the Planning Department. Colleagues gave him a farewell sendoff last week.

Planning Director Richie Meade departed Dec. 31, taking early retirement after 34 years in the Planning Department, 17 as director.

Meade was one of 40 city employees who took the early retirement incentive. The 40 together represented a combined 1,073 years of service to the city.

With his 41 years service, Doyle did not need to opt for the early retirement provision.

COLLEAGUES AND FRIENDS are holding a farewell party today (Thursday) for Rosemary Nolan, the quite capable former program manager at the Quincy Public Works Department.

It's on for 5 p.m. at the Alba Bar and Grille, Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Rosemary, who took early retirement at the end of December, has started a new career as a real estate agent.

MILESTONE: Former Mayor Jim and Joann Sheets are happily getting acquainted with their seventh grandchild. Caleb Sheets, son of Tad and Peggy Sheets of Hanover, was born earlier this month at South Shore Hospital. Weighed in at 8 pounds, 14 ounces. And was welcomed home by big brother, Nicholas, 2 1/2.

JIM and JOANN SHEETS

Tad Sheets runs a Quincy equipment sales and rental company and is also an attorney.

No, he doesn't have any political ambitions. But maybe Nicholas or Caleb might.

TOM GALVIN'S popular "Scenes From Yesteryear" feature is starting its 11th year in The Sun. Which means more than 500 of his old, nostalgic postcards have appeared so far and Tom is now on his way to 600.

GALVIN

Old time residents enjoy remembering some of the scenes depicted. Newer residents like comparing what was there then with what is there now.

We hope Tom never runs out of them.

ASK CONNIE BURKE, retired client coordinator at Quincy District Court, what her favorite vacation spot is and she'll quickly tell you: Aruba.

CONNIE

Connie, her husband, Tom, retired assistant City Clerk; Joseph Donovan, retired assistant commissioner of the Mass. Highway Department; and Dolly Santagata are back from a vacation in Oranjstadt, Aruba.

And Connie is still smiling.

The weather, beaches and scenery were great, of course.

But another reason for the smiles.

While at the Alhambra Casino one night, she hit the slot machine jackpot for $1,800.

She wants to go back next year.

South/West Quincy Business Partnership Meeting Feb. 26

Quincy 2000 Collaborative, Quincy's public/private economic development organization, will hold a business partnership meeting for South/West Quincy businesses on Thursday, Feb. 26 from 8 to 9 a.m. at the Common Market Restaurant, 97 Willard St.

All local businesses in South and West Quincy are invited to attend. The meeting will seek to set up an organizational structure for the newly established partnership, and identify goals and objectives to strengthen the economic viability and vitality of the South and West Quincy business area.

For more information contact Quincy 2000 Collaborative at 617-847-1454.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of Squaw Rock at the northern tip of Squantum. The rock gets its name from an old Indian legend about a young squaw who leapt to her death from here. Another story has it that the squaw's tumble was the origin of the name Squantum, though it probably got its name from Tisquantum or Squanto, an Indian who befriended the Pilgrims and served as their guide. The unusual conglomerate rock that makes up this and the rest of Squantum Head is quite different from the granite rock found in West Quincy. It is sometimes called tillite and is believed to have been formed from boulders and clay in a very old glacial period millions of years before the last ice age. The 90-foot height of this rock provides a commanding view of Boston Harbor, but the observation deck shown here is long gone.

READERS FORUM

Regarding Roadside Killings In Iraq

I receive my edition of The Quincy Sun via mail, so pardon me if this reply is a bit on the late side. I feel that I have to respond most strongly to the letter to Readers Forum in the Feb. 5 issue from Mr. Leonard Morris concerning the "Roadside Killings In Iraq."

Before I continue, I would be very remiss if I did not begin by thanking Mr. Morris for his service during World War II. A soldier that was at Normandy on June 6, 1944 surely saw and endured more than I could imagine in my worst nightmare. As the son of a fellow veteran and World War II POW, I thank and salute him.

In his letter, Mr. Morris mentioned a "chain flailing" device used to detonate land mines. We do still have this, except now it's attached to the front of an M1A1 Abrams tank instead of a Sherman. We used it extensively in the first Gulf War. It worked wonderfully in the sand.

They are designed for a very specific purpose, that being to clear a very narrow area through a minefield so that infantry can pass. They are not designed to destroy city streets in an indiscriminate search for individual bombs. These "Roadside Devices" are just that . . . small bombs placed beside the road ahead of approaching convoys, with the timing coordinated by cell phone. Do not think for a second that the "military experts" that Mr. Morris so disparages are not aware of these devices.

Baghdad is bigger than metropolitan Boston, with millions of ordinary citizens commuting to work, school, shopping and so forth. Imagine the reaction of the people of Quincy if Hancock Street were to be torn to pieces from City hall to North Quincy High School because there "might" be a bomb somewhere along the route. That may help one understand the dilemma our soldiers are facing. I don't believe that destroying their thoroughfares would endear us to the people whose support we are trying so desperately to win.

As to his second point, using napalm to deter Rocket Propelled Grenade attacks, I think most readers would see the impracticality of that. Aside from the fact that the U.S. military no longer has napalm in its arsenal, anyone can see that burning down a city block to get an individual attacker would only lead to more resistance.

Our men and women in Iraq face a very difficult, dangerous and delicate situation. Give them a chance. They know what they're doing.

Mayor's, Other Offices Reshuffled

This Week
1966
38 Years Ago

Offices on the second floor of City Hall were reshuffled, with Mayor James McIntyre's office changing location with the Personnel Department.

Locating the mayor's office in the front left corner office would give the chief executive more privacy and reduce a "grand central station" layout that allowed people to wander into the mayor's office unannounced, and without and appointment.

Under the new layout, entrance to the mayor's office would be through the office of Edward Lewis, the executive secretary and his assistant, Dagmar Peurala or through Personal Secretary Louise Brabazon's office.

Personnel Director Kenneth Gardner would take over the former mayor's office area with the switchboard being relocated to the third floor. John Brown, executive secretary of the city's new development commission, would occupy the new office of the switchboard.

BRETT BILL WOULD CURB MBTA

Rep. Joseph Brett's bill to curb the land taking powers of the MBTA was heard at the State House this week.

Brett said his proposals would not delay the South Shore rapid transit expansion, but would give local communities power over non-transportation land takings by the MBTA. Specifically, such takings for storage yards, repair yards, power plants, shopping arcades and parking lots would require a two-thirds vote of the city or town where the property was located.

Noting the number of businesses and residences scheduled for taking at Quincy, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs stations, Brett said, "The local community should have a say before tax paying property is taken for non tax paying purposes."

RED RAIDERS UNDEFEATED WITH 15-0 RECORD

Bob Nolan, coach of North Quincy's undefeated basketball team, credited his first and second team players for a 15-0 win streak.

All five starters were scoring in double figures. David Zink led with a 19-point average, followed by Gus Brazio with 14, Pete Varney with 13, Scott Healey with 10 and Rick Stastak with 10.

"One of the reasons this team is so good, is the second team never lets the first team let up, not even in practice," Nolan said.

Second team members were Paul Bregoli, John Magnarelli, Rick Wanless, Rick Trubiano and Al Mesher.

Mayor's, Other Offices Reshuffled

This Week
1966
38 Years Ago

Offices on the second floor of City Hall were reshuffled, with Mayor James McIntyre's office changing location with the Personnel Department.

Locating the mayor's office in the front left corner office would give the chief executive more privacy and reduce a "grand central station:" layout that allowed people to wander into the mayor's office unannounced, and without and appointment.

Under the new layout, entrance to the mayor's office would be through the office of Edward Lewis, the executive secretary and his assistant, Dagmar Peurala or through Personal Secretary Louise Brabazon's office.

Personnel Director Kenneth Gardner would take over the former mayor's office area with the switchboard being relocated to the third floor. John Brown, executive secretary of the city's new development commission, would occupy the new office of the switchboard.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Delma's Apple/Squash Casserole

I got home from work one day and found a wonderful note from my cousin Delma from the Big Apple with a great recipe for a family favorite, butternut squash.

There are so many ways to prepare this delicious vegetable, but this is one that I hadn't tried.

Cut the squash into 1/2 inch pieces. Place the squash in a greased casserole dish-top with a portion of the sliced apples. Repeat layers of squash and apple (usually about two layers) ending with the sliced apples.

Melt the margarine or butter, mix in the brown sugar, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg.

Apple/Butternut Squash Casserole

1 large butternut squash
1/2 stick butter or margarine
2 apples - sliced (I used one green and one red)
1 teaspoons salt
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

Drizzle over the squash and apples.

Cover and bake in a 350 degree oven for one hour.

Great Molasses Flood Topic For Historical Society

Author Stephen Puleo will discuss the Great Boston Molasses Flood of 1919 and his current book n the subject, Dark Tide, at a meeting of the Quincy Historical Society, Thursday, Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy Building, Quincy Center.

One of history's most unusual disasters, the Molasses Flood caused devastation, loss of life, and widespread injury, as a 15-foot high wave of molasses swept over parts of Boston's waterfront and North End. The story of the flood and its immediate and long-term aftermath also reveals much about a remarkable historical period as we moved from the end of World War I into the 1920s.

Puleo's book, the most extensive study of this event, is the culmination of a long, growing revival of interest in the Molasses Flood. At the Historical Society, Puleo will recount the story of the flood itself and will talk about the process of researching and writing the book.

Copies of the book will be available for sale and for autographing by the author.

The public is invited. There is no charge for admission.

'Keeping Your Heart Healthy' Lecture At QMC Feb. 24

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will host a free community health education lecture titled "Keeping Your Heart Healthy" Tuesday, Feb. 24 from 6:30 to 7:30 pm at QMC, 114 Whitwell St.

The lecture, led by QMC Chief of Cardiology Lisa Antonelli, MD, FACC, will review strategies to reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease, a condition affecting more than one in five Americans.

Suzanne Russell, RD, LDN, CDE, a QMC clinical/outpatient dietitian, will co-present with Dr. Antonelli and offer tips for a heart healthy diet.

The free cardiology lecture launches QMC's new series of monthly lecture featuring prominent QMC physicians, surgeons and clinicians discussing important health issues in this community.

Upcoming topics include:

"Staying Safe-At-Home", Thursday, March 11, noon to 1 p.m.

Brenda Ebode, PT, QMC director of rehabilitation services, will offer tips for seniors living at home to reduce common injuries and accidents .

"The Diabetic Foot", Tuesday, April 20 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Drs. Geoffrey Habershaw and Gary Gibbons of the Boston Medical Center Foot Care Specialists at QMC will discuss the prevention and treatment of diabetes-related foot problems.

"Hormone Replacement Therapy", Thursday, May 6 from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Elizabeth Dupuis, QMC chief of women's health services and medical director of the Boston University Medical Group - Internal Medicine at Quincy Medical Center, will review the continued debate surrounding Hormone Replacement Therapy.

"Integrative Medicine", Tuesday, June 15, 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Danru Lee, a Boston Medical Center primary care physician who completed an associate fellowship in integrative medicine, will review the philosophies and techniques of integrative medicine.

The healing-oriented medicine combines conventional medicine with natural, alternative, complementary and herbal techniques to heal a patient's body, mind and spirit.

The free lecture series is open to the public, and light refreshments will be served.

Advance registration is requested and available, 24-hours per day and seven days per week, by calling the QMC Physician Referral Service at 1-877-479-CARE (2273).

Even though there's a prominent statue of him near the corner of Newport and Granite streets...

Scottish poet and active Freemason Robert Burns never visited Quincy.

But, many of his countrymen immigrated to America, with a large number of Scots settling right here in Quincy. One of their contributions was the statue of the immortal bard, Robert Burns, that stands today, overlooking the intersection of Newport and Granite Streets.

Freemasonry found its roots in Scotland many centuries ago and still flourishes there today...as it does here in the United States and especially here in Quincy. Many Scottish immigrants joined local Masonic Lodges including Rural Lodge of Masons that was formed in 1801. This was equally true of men who came from many countries throughout the world to build new lives in an environment of freedom and liberty. And they, too, became a part of the Masonic tradition in Quincy.

Freemasonry is the oldest and largest fraternity of men in the world with some 5-million members in Lodges in every country in the free world. One of the benefits of being a Mason is meeting Brother Masons wherever you go.

Freemasonry invites men of good character from all walks of life, from all levels of income, from every race, creed and culture to become Masons. To be a Mason you must profess a belief in God. But Masonry is not a religion. Masonry's traditions and teachings, endeavor to instill in its members the desire and means to improve themselves and the lives of others. It is said that Freemasonry makes good men better.

As a Mason, you'll be joining other men like George Washington, Harry S Truman, Benjamin Franklin, Paul Revere, Quincy's own John Hancock and, of course, Robert Burns. Great men who have made Masonry the focus of their lives.

For more information, without obligation, on how you can become a Mason, call Rural Lodge at the number below today.

Kindergarten Registration For 2004-2005 School Year To Be Held On March 9

Registration for kindergarten for all Quincy Public Schools for school year 2004-2005 will be held Tuesday, March 9 from 9 to 11 a.m. and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. at every public elementary school in Quincy, Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, superintendent of schools, announces.

Children who will be five years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2004 will qualify.

Parents must present a birth certificate, passport/visa at the time of registration and evidence of immunizations.

Department of Public Health kindergarten entrance immunization requirements are effective September, 2003:

- Five doses of DPT unless 4th dose given after fourth birthday
- Four doses of Polio unless 3rd dose given after fourth birthday
- Two doses of MMR with 1st given after 1st birthday
- Three doses of Hep B, if born after Jan. 1, 1992
- One dose of Varicella (chickenpox) or doctor documented case of chickenpox.

A recent entrance physical examination is mandated by the state for all students entering school, and preferably should be presented at registration or at least before the start of school in September. In addition, a HB assessment and evidence of previous screening for lead poisoning is required for all kindergarten entrants.

Parents of children living in the Lincoln-Hancock, Clifford H. Marshall, Francis W. Parker, Wollaston and Snug Harbor School districts may receive information at kindergarten registration concerning opportunities for preschool/early childhood education.

QUINCY ACCESS TELEVISION will host an "Orientation to Community Television" workshop Monday, March 1 at 6:30 p.m. in its studios, 88 Washington St., Quincy Center. The workshop will cover television production as well as documenting parades, ballgames, meetings, church services and other community activities. QATV teaches skills, loans equipment and provides channel time on cable access channel 8. Above are Thom Lane (right), a Quincy Access member, and Mark Crosby, Government Access Coordinator at QATV. # Presidents' Day Winter Carnival Family Fun Time For Hundreds

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE

Something looked awry in City Council chambers Monday.

Stuffed teddy bears sat in the seats of city councilors. Tan safari and cowboy hats hung on posts at the front of the room. A small hunting net rested up against the podium.

And then Theodore Roosevelt burst into the room.

It was all part of the 8th annual Presidents' Day Winter Carnival, held Monday in Quincy Center. The event included impersonations of past presidents, along with games, a magic show, live music and ice sculptures.

Ted Zalewski, 58, of Cambridge, portrayed Roosevelt. Tricked out in small round specs, a black suit and a shiny black top hat, he recounted the life of Roosevelt, from his childhood, to his days as a Rough Rider to his presidency.

The crowd of 30 spectators roared with laughter as Zalewski acted out the origin of the iteddy bear.i Pretending to be on a bear hunt, he crouched down and aimed at a stuffed bear held high by a young spectator. He readied to shoot, but stopped. He said he couldnit shoot the bear; it was just too cute. To poke fun at his inability to shoot the bear, he said a storekeeper placed a stuffed bear in the shop window, complete with the nametag "Teddyis bear." It soon became known as teddy bear.

"Aren't you pleased they didn't call it a Theodore bear?," said Zalewski to the crowd.

Zalewski, also a special needs teacher in Arlington, has played Roosevelt for 10 years. This was his seventh appearance at the Presidents' Day Carnival.

Zalweski said Roosevelt's conservation initiatives and strong family values drew him to the character.

Christine, John and their son Michael LeBlanc, all of Quincy, were so impressed by past performances of Zalweski's that they could not resist seeing him again. This was their third time.

"He makes a history lesson so thrilling to listen to," said Christine. "He just does a tremendous job."

Also on hand with a history lesson was George Washington. At 5 foot 11 inches with his shoulder length white hair pulled back into a ponytail, George Moore, of Newton, N.H. looked the part. He dressed in white knickers, tall black boots, a fluffy lace collar and royal blue coattails adorned with brass buttons.

As he recounted Washington's life to the crowd, he became emotional at parts. His eyes grew cloudy as he told the story of Washington's crossing the Delaware River on Christmas Day.

"I can see my men, eating boiled leather belts and boots to stay alive," said Moore.

Moore has played Washington for 17 years. He is a Baptist minister by trade. His finesse as Washington has twice earned him the honor of playing Washington at Mount Rushmore.

David Phillips, of Quincy, said he attended Mondayís events to see the presidential re-enactments. He said he learned something new about Washington.

"What really struck me was how important and central his faith was to him," said Phillips.

John Adams, played by actor Donald Watson, was also speaking at United First Parish Church.

Carnival attendees also enjoyed the comedy of Judy Bernstein, a political satirist. She performed "From George to George," 200 years of political humor.

They played miniature golf, took hayrides around Quincy Center and decorated top hats.

Ice sculptures glistened on McIntyre Mall. Eric Fontecchio of Brookline Ice Company chipped away at the ice with a chainsaw all day to create a cannon, a revolutionary war soldier and a replica of the Presidential Seal next to two sculpted frames bearing the pictures of Washington and Lincoln. Across the street Ken Dudley carved a four-foot rooster out of wood in front of spectators.

"It makes you happy to be an American," said Joan Mahoney of Quincy, who attended the day's events.

TWINS PATRICK AND Mike Bambrick, 6, and their father, Ken Bambrick of Quincy enjoy the woodwork of Ken Dudley whose carvings were on display during the city's Presidents' Day Winter Carnival Monday.

Program Suspended Until 2005

Surgical Tech. Course Will Return With Improvements Quincy College Officials Say

Facing increased scrutiny over shortcomings in its surgical technology program, Quincy College has decided to place the course on a one-year hiatus so as to improve the program in time for the Fall, 2005.

At last week's meeting of the college board of governors, Quincy College President Sean Barry said the program will be suspended after this year's class, which ends in the Spring. Putting the course on hold for a year will give administrators time to improve record keeping, increase oversight of the course and improve relations with the program's clinical partners, such as Quincy Medical Center, Massachusetts General Hospital and Brockton Hospital.

"President Barry's changes will not only tighten up the administrative portion of the program but work to boost confidence with our clinical partners," said Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the college board of governors. "I think it's an effective plan."

Barry outlined a number of other measures designed to shore up the one-year certificate program, which has come under fire recently after it was revealed that some students graduated from the course without receiving proper training.

Barry recommended that the college hire a new dean to oversee all of the college's allied health programs.

The college will seek input from former students as a means of improving the program in the future. Adjunct teachers and student performance records will be more tightly monitored, said Barry.

In addition, some 50 students currently enrolled in the program will have the option of graduating this year or withdraw from the course and receive a full refund, he said.

At least two former students complained that the college allowed them to graduate from the surgical technology program without any required clinical training. The course costs $8,800 and teaches students to become hospital "scrubs."

Attorney George Burke, hired by the college to investigate the allegations, found serious lapses in the program and laid the blame entirely on Faith Tucker, the course coordinator at the time.

Tucker is on paid administrative leave pending the outcome of the investigation.

Student complaints and Burke's final report were submitted to the state Board of Higher Education, which continues to review the matter. An auditor hired by the city continues to probe the allegations as well.

Delahunt Calls Bush Budget 'Disgraceful' To Veterans

Cong. William Delahunt criticized the Bush administration's 2005 VA budget, saying the president is shortchanging veterans and their health care benefits.

Delahunt said the administration's proposal is $1.2 billion less than requested by VA Secretary Anthony Principi. Delahunt said the VA secretary revealed the information last week in response to questions during a public hearing before the House Veterans Affairs Committee.

"This is absolutely disgraceful," said Delahunt. "Veterans have been repeatedly shortchanged by this administration, to the point that the VA is having to deny veterans medical care in order to keep the system from breaking down completely. Now we learn that the White House won't even heed the advice of its own VA Secretary when he pleads for more funding. And this is when we've actually got US Troops engaged in combat suffering injuries and fatalities in service to our nation."

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

Delahunt said under the Bush Administration, veterans' health care has faced a chronic funding crisis, causing delays up to six months to see a doctor and freezes on new services and clinics.

Congress has generally managed to restore enough support to forestall a meltdown of the veterans health care system, but only after battles with the administration, he said.

Last week, the administration proposed increasing funding for veterans' medical care by $500 million, but it is $2.6 million less than experts agree is needed, according to Delahunt.

The 2005 budget also calls for doubling prescription co-pays and charging enrollment fees – ideas rejected by Congress last year.

"This administration's budget is a disingenuous insult to veterans," said Delahunt. "It is shamefully underfunded, essentially requiring vets to self-insure their medical care. As head of the VFW pointed out, veterans have already paid for their health care with their sweat and their blood. Coupled with the rejection of the secretary's request, this budget's disconnect from reality is not just frightening; at a time of war, it's infuriating."

Phelan Rejects Classification Shift

169 to 175 percent, giving homeowners a $55 break in their fiscal 2004 tax bills.

But several councillors believed the move did not go far enough because the average bill still jumped by 18 percent over last year. A move to postpone setting the tax classification was defeated on a close vote.

The home rule petition would have given the average homeowner a $225 break in their fourth quarter tax bills, according to Marion Fantucchio, chairwoman of the board of assessors.

The city uses a tax classification formula that requires businesses to pay a rate that is a percentage of the tax rate that would have been paid if there had been no shift in classification. Increasing the percentage rate shifts more of the tax burden onto businesses.

The value of Quincy homes has increases markedly while values of commercial and industrial (CIPP) property have stagnated. As a result, CIPP taxes are making up a smaller portion of the city real estate tax base. Homeowners are left to make up the difference.

Coughlin called the mayor's decision "irrational."

"Clearly, the voices of the people were not heard on this issue," said Coughlin. "Homeowners want relief now, and the year after that not 10 years down the road. This is the second failed opportunity to give homeowners immediate relief and relief over the next few years."

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi called Phelan's move "a slap in the face of residential taxpayers."

"By not signing this home rule petition, the mayor has ignored the pleas of the seniors and working families who have been calling City Hall and petitioning their elected officials for tax relief," said Raymondi. "The special interests have won out over the residential taxpayers, homeowners and renters in the City of Quincy."

Even though the classification rate moves on a descending scale, homeowners would still see significant tax relief during the five-year period, he said.

But Councillor John Keenan disagreed, saying the home rule petition would ultimately hurt residential homeowners.

"Communities such as Braintree and Weymouth have kept their tax classifications lower than Quincy, and their business valuations have increased more than Quincy," said Keenan.

"If this measure passed we would fall far behind them and there is the assumption that businesses would find those communities more appealing than us. This would drop business valuations even more here and the result would place an even greater burden on residential taxpayers."

Councillor Joe Finn also expressed disappointed with the mayor's decision.

"It's unfortunate because it shuts off the discussion and doesn't allow the homeowners the opportunity to vent their frustrations, given this unprecedented increase in property values," said Finn.

The mayor called the legislation a "tax classification scheme" that would hamstring the council's ability to set the tax rate in future years.

"If, in future years, the council deemed it desirable and appropriate to capitalize on an improving economy by asking commercial property owners to assume more of the tax burden, thereby reducing the homeowners' tax bill, they could do so – the commercial tax rate would be artificially and statutorily capped," he stated in the letter. "To abdicate the responsibility for addressing this situation as often as possible and in as much detail as possible works a grave disservice to the taxpayer."

In addition, the mayor said he discussed the issue with a representative from the DOR who expressed concerns regarding the "practical application" of the proposal.

Council President Frank McCauley agreed that implementing the measure would have placed a great burden on the board of assessors office.

"It really would have caused a lot of confusion at this point," said McCauley. "We set the rate in December and we've already issued third quarter tax bills. This would have been extremely difficult, if not impossible, to implement."

Aspiring Actress And Model

Kristal Spaulding, 20 Fatally Injured In Auto Accident

A funeral service for Kristal A. Spaulding, 20, of Quincy, an aspiring actress and model, was scheduled Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston. Visiting hours were scheduled Wednesday from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. at the funeral home.

She died Feb. 14 at Quincy Medical Center from injuries suffered following a car accident at the intersection of Newport Ave. and Furnace Brook Parkway, Quincy.

She was an assistant manager at Dunkin' Donuts in Wollaston and had taken acting classes at John Robert Powers Modeling School in Boston.

KRISTAL SPAULDING

Producers told her she was "the next Nicole Kidman," her mother, Kristi Spaulding of Quincy said, and she was planning a trip to New York City in July to attend auditions for television shows.

She was a lifelong resident of Quincy. She attended North Quincy High School.

She is survived by her mother, Kristi Spaulding of Quincy; her father, Harlan Spaulding and his wife Janet Spaulding of Carver; two brothers, Harlan Spaulding Jr. and Jonathan Spaulding, both of Carver; her grandparents, Evelyn Spaulding of Epping, N.H., Elizabeth Walsh of Weymouth and Harlan and Claire Spaulding of Abington; and many aunts, uncles and cousins. She was the sister of the late Chuckie Spaulding.

WINTER CAR CARE

A Message From AAA's 'Seated, Safe And Secure' Campaign

Parents Should Reinforce The Importance Of Seat Belts

Children ages 8 to 15 ride unbuckled and die in car crashes at rates approaching those of adults, according to recent federal data.

AAA Southern New England urges parents to reinforce the importance of proper seat belt and restraint use with children of all ages.

"As kids get older, they become less likely to wear their seat belts and become more likely to die in car crashes," said Robert P. Murray, AAA Southern New England Senior Vice President of Corporate Affairs.

"These 8 to 15 year olds will soon be riding in cars driven by teenage siblings and friends, making it all the more important that they be buckled up. Parents and others need to make these older children into full-time seat belt users now."

Data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration shows as children get older, their fatality rates go up and their seat belt usage goes down.

In 2002 (the most recent year available) 1,209 children ages 8-15 were killed while riding in cars — up 8 percent from 2001. Other age groups of children, ages 0-3 and 4-7, saw fatalities decrease by 6 percent and 16 percent, respectively, during the same period.

More than half (56 percent) of older children killed in car crashes were not wearing their seat belts, a rate that approaches the 58 percent non-use rate for adults in fatal crashes.

"AAA and the safety community have made great strides in improving safety seat use for young children, but there's still more that we can do to keep our kids safe," Murray said. "Fortunately, keeping older children safe requires little more than making sure they use a seat belt every time they ride in a car. The habits they form now will last a lifetime."

AAA's "Seated, Safe and Secure" campaign, designed to help promote passenger safety for children of all ages, was launched in 2002. The campaign focuses on closing loopholes in state child passenger safety laws and changing behavior through public education efforts.

AAA reminds parents to read and follow the manufacturer's instructions for child restraints to ensure proper age, weight and fit requirements, and that all children under the age of 13 should ride in the back seat. Additional child passenger safety information can be found online at www.aaapublicaffairs.com by clicking on "For Kid's Sake."

Plan Ahead To Avoid Frustrating Holiday Travel

To make the most out of holiday travel, AAA Southern New England suggests planning ahead to avoid common pitfalls.

"When you take a holiday, add the threat of bad weather and throw in 25 to 30 million motorists, you get a recipe for frustration," said Robert Murray, AAA Senior Vice President of Corporate Affairs. "With some advance planning, the season can be much more enjoyable."

AAA offers these tips for safe and happy holiday auto travel:

- Leave early, stay late. If possible, leave a day earlier than normal and return a day early or a day late. You can avoid wasting time in traffic and enjoy more time with family and friends.
- Plan ahead. Know your route and have an alternate plan in case of heavy traffic. Also make sure your vehicle is in top condition and carry a vehicle safety kit.
- Take your time. The current land speed record is 763 miles-per-hour. Don't try to break it on the way to grandma's. It's better to plan extra time and arrive safely.
- Take a 15- to 20-minute break every few hours. Stop at a safe rest area and stretch your legs. Also, drink plenty of fluids.
- Bring activities. Children's attention spans are shorter than adults, so they quickly lose interest when traveling. Pack some special snacks and favorite toys to keep them busy. Try a recorded story or sing-along tape.
- Don't eat and run. After the third helping, take a walk to get the blood flowing again. Better yet, take a long nap in your in-law's recliner.

Don't Forget To Check Your Antifreeze

(NAPS) — One of the easiest, yet important, ways to prepare your vehicle for winter driving is to inspect the level and freshness of your vehicle's antifreeze.

"Cooling system failure is the leading cause of engine-related breakdowns, which can cost thousands of dollars and leave you and your family stranded at the worst possible time," said Rich White, executive director of the Car Care Council.

The Car Care Council recommends motorists check their antifreeze every 12 months or 12,000 miles to help protect the engine from freezing and overheating, as well as from rust and corrosion damage.

"Inspecting and maintaining your vehicle's cooling system takes just a few minutes of your time and costs very little, whether you do it yourself or have it performed by a service technician," White said.

To check the level of antifreeze/coolant, you will need a few basic service tools and an antifreeze ball tester, which is available at your local auto parts store. Always make sure the engine and coolant system are cool before you begin. Opening a hot radiator or coolant reservoir/overflow tank can cause severe burns.

If the antifreeze/coolant is low, add a 50/50 mix of approved antifreeze and distilled water. If you changed your antifreeze recently, but your level is low, use the antifreeze ball tester to make sure the antifreeze to water ratio is correct.

The most common formulation of antifreeze is green in color and uses ethylene glycol as a base with anti-corrosion additives mixed in. Ethylene glycol lowers the freezing point and raises the boiling point of the radiator fluid.

In other words, it keeps the water from freezing on very cold days and from boiling over on hot days. Over time, these additives wear out, lessening their abilities to protect vital engine and cooling system metals against rust and corrosion. Your vehicle's owner manual will provide antifreeze usage specifications.

Auto Advice

(NU) – Here's advice from the non-profit National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence.

Get engine driveability corrected at a good repair shop, and put a bottle of fuel deicer in your tank once a month to help keep moisture from freezing in the fuel line.

In addition, the cooling system should be flushed and refilled as recommended, a 50-50 mix of antifreeze and water is usually recommended. For more information, visit www.ase.com.

This is also a good time to inspect and replace any bad cooling system hoses. Check for leaking, brittle, spongy, cracked or rotted hoses, as well as to make sure that the radiator hose clamps are tight to prevent leaks at the connections.

Holley 3-Barrels

Q: Did the Baldwin Motion-built Camaros, Chevelles, Novas and Impalas come with Holley three-barrel carburetors? What were they, and what's the real scoop here? I thought the big blocks came with four-barrel Holleys. — *A.P., e-mail from New York

A. Baldwin Motion built specialty big-block Chevys and was nationally renowned for installing 427 engines in Camaros, Novas and Chevelles in the '60s. It all came about when Baldwin Chevrolet in Long Island, N.Y., hooked up with Motion Performance in Brooklyn, thus the name.

That three-barrel Holley carburetor you refer to indeed was an option on the Phase III 427 and L88 packages and was called the "Daytona Holley 3-Barrel." It cost an additional $165 and came in 950 cfm. form. It was called a three barrel because the back venturi and throttle plate were one big unit instead of the usual two that the standard-equipment four-barrel carbs featured. You had to run an open plenum manifold to make it work, however.

The front two throttle plates were similar to the other Holley carburetors, and the carb was a vacuum secondary, 950 cfm. unit, if I remember correctly. However, please note that anyone could buy the 950 three barrel from Holley.

I recently came across an old Baldwin Motion catalog, and you could have had one of the top super muscle cars ever built for less than $5,000 back in 1969! Prices started at around $3,800 for a base 427 Camaro.

A LITTLE SOMETHING ON THE SIDE

The sidewall markings provide valuable information about your tires. The first three-digit number refers to the overall width of the tire (millimeters). Next, the two-digit aspect ratio indicates the relationship between the tire height and the tire width – the higher the number, the taller the sidewall. The next letter is the primary speed rating, which specifies the maximum speed at which the tire is certified to carry its maximum load. Primary speed ratings range from A (lowest) to Z (highest). Then, the letter "R" indicates radial-ply (versus bias-ply) tire construction. The next number is the wheel diameter in inches, followed by the load index (zero to 279), which shows how much weight the tire is designed to carry at maximum inflation.

The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern equipment, and ASE Certified technicians who are constantly trained and re-trained. # Marina Bay Nursing Center In HEAL Research Study

The Marina Bay Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center is taking part in a study led by John N. Morris, Ph.D., co-director of the Research and Training Institute of Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged.

The study is known as HEAL, which stands for Helping Elders Activate e their Lives.

The HEAL research team is looking for volunteers to lead exercise group activities as part of the project.

Those interested in helping older adults improve their physical fitness may contact Ruth P. Carroll, R.N., at 1-888-391-0889.

Research has established that a well-designed exercise regiment can help even the oldest and frailest seniors build muscle, which enables them to maintain or improve the ability to perform activities of daily living.

Patricia McCone Completes Conway Advanced Real Estate Training Program

Patricia E. McCone recently completed an intensive education and training program sponsored by Jack Conway & Co., the Bay State's largest independent real estate company.

McCone, a member of Conway's Quincy sales team, graduated from the Conway College of Real Estate Knowledge, a program that provides licensed agents with advanced instruction in the practical aspects of selling real estate.

PATRICIA McCONE

Before entering the real estate field, McCone worked as an operations manager, and also is a Notary Public in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This holiday season, she assisted in the creation of Conway's trophy-winning float in the annual Quincy Christmas Parade.

McCone lives in the Houghs Neck section of Quincy with her husband, John, and has two daughters, Brenda and Judith. She also has four grandchildren, with another expected in July. Customers can contact her at Jack Conway & Co.'s Quincy office, 253 Beale Street, (617) 479-1500.

Bank of Canton Participates In Quincy Program

Affordable Housing Program Makes Homeownership A Reality

With assistance from the Bank of Canton, homeownership recently became a reality for a brother and sister in Quincy, in accordance with an Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance approved by the City of Quincy in 2001.

The ordinance requires that any development in the city with 10 or more units that necessitates a variance or a special permit must provide 10 percent of the units as affordable to low- and moderate-income households.

The Ordinance also established an Affordable Housing Trust Fund and an Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee. Quincy City Councillor Joe Finn, the chairman of the City Council Housing Committee, said "So much hard work has gone into creating the Affordable Housing Trust, and now it is bearing fruit for those in need of affordable housing."

The new homeowners were the first purchasers of an affordable housing unit as mandated by the Ordinance. They reside at The Village at South Pointe, a condominium complex created by Galvin Development, a local Quincy real estate developer.

Judy Farmer, regional lending manager in The Bank of Canton's Quincy office, said "The Bank of Canton is proud to have provided the financing for the Village at South Pointe project, as well as a mortgage program that helped these individuals become homeowners."

Sean Galvin, who is a partner with Galvin Development, said, " We are very pleased to be the first developer in Quincy to participate in this program to provide affordable housing to Quincy residents."

Dating from its incorporation as a mutual savings bank in 1835, The Bank of Canton has served the community for nearly 170 years. A mutual savings bank, the Bank of Canton has been a source for home mortgages and commercial lending programs while offering customers a full range of home/consumer loans, commercial services, and personal banking options, including investment services through Infinex Financial Group.

In addition to its main office at 557 Washington Street, branches are located at: 259 Turnpike Street/Route 138 in Canton, 275 Quincy Ave. in Quincy, and 67 North Main Street in Randolph.

For more information on The Bank of Canton, call 781-828-1690.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyers Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in collaboration with Citizens Bank, will sponsor a First Time Homebuyer Workshop Saturday, Feb. 28, at Citizens Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy.

The one-day workshop will run from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

Participants will have the opportunity to be pre-qualified by a lender.

Topics included mortgage options, legal aspects of the homebuying process, how a home inspection works and other presentations from real estate related professionals.

Downpayment grants up to $10,000 per family are available for first-time buyers who are purchase-ready and income eligible. Participants must complete this workshop to qualify for grant programs.

There is a $10 fee per person to cover the cost of workshop materials. Advanced registration is required. Call 617-770-2227, ext. 31.

Low Mortgage Rates, Strong Condo Sales

Record Year For Bay State Housing Market

The Massachusetts residential real estate market enjoyed its best year in 2003 as home buying activity rose to record levels in much of the state.

The record year was driven by historically low mortgage rates, modest job growth and strong demand from immigrants, baby-boomers and first-time buyers, according to a recent report issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

Home prices also rose in 2003 for a 10th consecutive year, indicative of a market in which more housing production is needed, but the rate of price appreciation did moderate this past year as inventory levels have slowly improved.

In 2003, MAR data show sales of detached single-family homes rose 4.9 percent in Massachusetts, from 46,770 in 2002 to 49,040 this past year. Also, condominium sales increased 16.2 percent, from 14,912 a year ago to 17,324 in 2003 — setting a new annual record for the Bay State.

The total of 66,364 detached single-family homes and condos sold in 2003 sets a new record for most residential sales in one year in state history, eclipsing the previous high of 62,662 homes sold in 1999.

Regionally, in 2003, sales of detached single-family homes improved in all seven market areas of the state compared to one year earlier, with sales gains greater than the statewide growth rate observed in the Central/Worcester County (7.6 percent), Northeast (7.1 percent), Southeast-Greater Fall River-New Bedford (6.1 percent) and South Shore (8.5 percent) regions.

Similarly, the condominium market also saw sales gains in all regions this past year, with the largest increases in year-to-year sales activity reported in Greater Boston (18.7 percent), the Southeast/South Coast region (18.1 percent) and Western Massachusetts (22.9 percent).

While the past year started slow due to severe winter weather and apprehension over job security and the war in Iraq, activity picked up in the second half of 2003 as the economy strengthened and mortgage rates declined to levels not seen in over 30 years.

Sales of detached single-family homes fell in each of the first two quarters from year-ago levels by 10.6 percent and 4.9 percent, respectively, but rose 16.1 percent in the third quarter and 15.8 percent in the final quarter of 2003 to establish a new fourth-quarter sales record with 12,788 homes sold.

Additionally, after seeing flat sales in the first three months of 2003, the condo market improved steadily in each of the final three quarters over comparable periods in 2002, increasing 6.5 percent in the second quarter, 30.8 percent in the third quarter and 24.9 percent in the fourth quarter.

All three quarters also saw new record high sales totals established for the respective three-month periods, with the 5,486 condos sold in the third quarter of 2003 setting a new mark for most condominium sales in any one quarter in state history.

Significantly, those entering the market in the last year have had a larger selection of homes from which to choose. In fact, the number of single-family properties (detached homes and condos) listed for sale reached a five-year high in 2003, climbing 16.8 percent from a monthly average of 32,104 listings in 2002 to 37,506 this past year. That represents 6.8 months of supply, up from 6.2 months in 2002, and the most since 6.7 months of supply was available in 1998.

With inventory levels up, supply and demand has become more balanced and that's led to more modest home price appreciation in the past 12 months. In the detached single-family home market, the statewide average selling price rose 9 percent last year, from an average price of $345,141 in 2002 to $376,360 this past year. In addition, the statewide average selling price for condominiums increased 9.6 percent, from an average of $243,951 one year ago to $267,269 in 2003.

Within regional markets, modest to healthy price gains were observed in all areas of the state during 2003, both for detached homes and condos. In the detached single-family home market, prices rose over year-ago levels by an average of 6-8 percent in the Greater Boston, Northeast, South Shore and West regions, by 11 percent in Worcester County, and increased 19 percent on Cape Cod and the islands and in Southeastern Massachusetts.

Meanwhile, prices for condos climbed 5-6 percent in Greater Boston and Western Massachusetts, 11.6 percent in the Northeast region, 14-16 percent in the Central and South Shore regions, and by 20 percent or more on the Cape Cod and islands and Southeastern Mass.

While it will be difficult to sustain the record sales pace of 2003 in the year ahead, MAR officials anticipate a brisk spring market with attractive mortgage rates, modest job growth, rising home values and increased housing supply expected to keep activity strong by historic standards.

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflect transactions occurring through Realtor-affiliated multiple listing services in the commonwealth, and account for approximately 80 percent of all real estate sales in Massachusetts.

Red Raiders Qualify For State Tournament

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

Over a week ago, head coach Jim Rendle hoped the headline in this issue of the paper would read his North Quincy High School boys' basketball team qualified for the state tournament.

After a stinging 56-54 defeat to Marshfield last Tuesday, the Red Raiders needed to win their final two games of the regular season to earn the postseason invitation after a year's absence.

North Quincy, which took the first step last Thursday with a 54-41 triumph over Quincy, completed the task Tuesday afternoon at home with a convincing 60-43 victory over Plymouth South. And now Rendle can flip to this page with gratification.

"We're thrilled about qualifying," Rendle said. "We're happy. We had a pretty difficult schedule. Qualifying now, we're going to match up against some pretty tough competition. We're looking forward to that. I think we've certainly earned it. We're excited to be there and we're going to give it all we have."

North Quincy finished the season with a 10-10 overall record (8-6 Old Colony League). Tournament pairings will be announced tomorrow (Friday) and North Quincy should open the Division 1 South sectional with a game next Tuesday.

The Red Raiders started the season with one win in their first five games. However, the competition included contests against Silver Lake (14-3), Rockland (17-1) and Boston Latin (12-7). Rendle believes that experience will benefit his team in the tournament.

"We started off with a really tough schedule early on," he said. "As the season went on, we beat the teams we were supposed to. We're always trying to make the tournament so the season was to try to prepare us for the level of play in the tournament. I think we'll be competitive."

North Quincy outscored Plymouth South, 10-3, in the first seven minutes of the game. The Red Raiders, though, struggled putting the ball in the basket with just two field goals the rest of the half.

Ahead 19-10, North Quincy went scoreless over the final four minutes. And the Panthers took advantage, burying consecutive 3-pointers and scoring a basket inside to trim the deficit to 19-18 at the break.

"I thought we were very sluggish in the beginning," Rendle said. "I don't know, maybe it was the couple of days off. We weren't uptight at all. We just weren't playing well early. We went through a lull and we were standing around. We had some decent shots. We just didn't put them down."

The Red Raiders stormed out of the locker room in the second half, quickly running off seven straight points in the first three minutes to open up a 26-18 lead, forcing Plymouth South to call timeout before the game got out of hand.

The Panthers cut it to 28-24 with three baskets in the paint. North Quincy responded with a 16-6 run for a 44-30 advantage with six minutes remaining in the game. The Red Raiders continuously took the ball to the hoop, scoring all 16 points in the paint or at the line.

"I was pleased with the way we came back in the second half," Rendle said. "I thought Kyle Costa gave us a really big lift by being aggressive to the basket, and Jimmy Burke. Kyle did a good job of picking us up in the second half, kind of set the tone."

North Quincy allowed no chance of a Plymouth South rally, hitting 12-of-14 shots from the foul line down the stretch.

Sophomore guard Kyle Costa led the team with 18 points (11 in the second half) and his brother, senior Daryl, contributed 12 points. Senior center Brandon Neves added nine points and senior forward Bryan Donovan seven.

In the Quincy game, the Red Raiders broke open a close game in the second half as they turned up the defense and rode the scoring of the Costa brothers.

Ahead 35-32 with about 10:30 left, North Quincy went on a 10-0 surge for a 13-point lead with 7:04 left to play. "That kind of put it out of reach," Rendle said.

The Costas scored 21 of North Quincy's 30 second-half points, with Kyle tallying 13 of his 16 points and Daryl getting nine of his game-high 22.

The Presidents did manage to close the gap five points when junior guard Parker Scott (seven points) hit a 3-pointer with just under four minutes left to make it 46-41. The Red Raiders, though, ended the game with an 8-0 run.

The Red Raiders got off to a good start as the Costa brothers each hit a 3-pointer for a quick 6-0 lead. They were in control of the first half before the Presidents engineered a 12-4 run over the final 5:30 to tie the game at 24 at the break.

Senior forward J.J. Niamkey consistently drove to the basket, scoring 13 of his team-high 18 points in the half.

Sacred Heart Basketball Bows To Roslindale, 59-56

Sacred Heart of Quincy and Roslindale battled back and forth all night with Sacred Heart of Roslindale pulling out a 59-56 victory in recent CYO travel basketball intermediate division action.

Quincy finished the regular season with an 11-3 record and awaits the league playoffs which begin in two weeks at St. Agatha's in Milton.

Quincy's downfall came in the last minute with two turnovers to give Roslindale some easy baskets.

Not lost in this game were some excellent offense and defense turned in by Dan Isberg (14 points), Greg Lanham (seven points, nine rebounds) and Steve Reardon (13 points, six steals).

Brian Lynch scored eight points in the first half. Sean Sullivan, Colin Walsh, Joe Jenkins and Dennis Magaldi also chipped in.

L Street Runners Raising Money For Paul Harold Memorial Scholarship

A team of L Street Running Club members will participate in this year's Boston Marathon to help raise funds for the Paul Harold Memorial Fund.

The group will be led by WBZ-TV's No. 1 reporter, Kathy Curran. She joined 200 club members Sunday morning in a training run through Quincy.

Harold served as a Quincy city councillor, state senator and Norfolk County register of deeds in a public service career spanning 27 years. He died in August 2002 at age 53.

A member of the L Street Running Club, he was an accomplished runner who took part in numerous marathons.

Quincy Downs North In Tourney Tune-Up

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

When junior Sarah Goreham drained a 3-pointer to pull North Quincy within four points, Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch immediately called a timeout with 10:17 left to regroup his girls' basketball team.

The Red Raiders, who were blown out by 24 points in the first meeting, were hanging with tourney-bound Quincy this time around, desperately trying to salvage a split in this fierce city rivalry.

The Presidents, though, had senior Bonnie Hirtle. The school's all-time leading scorer connected with back-to-back treys for a 36-26 lead en route to a 55-45 victory last Thursday on Hancock Street. She later added another 3-pointer to tie her own record with five.

"Every time we made the mistake of leaving Bonnie or Sarah Shea open, just a second, they hit one," said North Quincy head coach Doug MacFarlane. "Unfortunately, that's going to happen. Girls get tired during the course of the game."

"Bonnie hit some really big shots for us in the second half at some crucial moments," Bretsch said. "We're just happy to come out of here with a win. This game is always so intense.

"We're doing really well right now," he added. "That makes six in a row for us. We're on a nice little tear right now. We're really starting to gel as a team. A lot of kids are getting involved."

On Monday afternoon, Quincy made it seven straight wins with a 69-47 home victory over Abington. It finishes the regular season with a 15-5 overall record, 9-3 in the Atlantic Coast League.

Hirtle broke her own record with six 3-pointers in the game and finished with 32 points to go over 1,300 in her career.

North Quincy (6-14 overall, 5-9 Old Colony League), meanwhile, traveled to Plymouth South last Saturday afternoon and ended the season on a positive note with a 50-42 win.

Junior Amanda Saylor led the way with 16 points, 11 rebounds and three steals and Goreham added 14 points, six rebounds and four steals. Freshman guard Lauren Stille, who was called up from JV, scored six points with three steals.

In last Thursday's showdown, Quincy surged to a 9-0 lead in the first three minutes and appeared to be well on its way to another rout.

North Quincy did claw back to make it 12-10, but the Presidents answered with a 10-0 run to regain control. Goreham (16 points) tallied the next six points for the Red Raiders before Hirtle (25 points) closed the half with a three-ball for a 25-16 advantage.

In the second half, North Quincy managed to cut the deficit to six on several occasions after Hirtle's consecutive 3-pointers. After senior Alyssa Dearani scored in the post to make it 38-32, Shea buried a 3-pointer and Hirtle followed with a layup to deflate any comeback.

Junior forward Nicole O'Sullivan turned in a strong second half, scoring eight of her season-high 10 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. "Nicole had a huge second half," Bretsch said. "I think this is a breakout game for her. She's been looking for that game. This is going to be a big confidence booster for her."

For the Red Raiders, Dearani dominated down low as she scored 11 of her 13 points in the second half. Junior Shauna Kelly finished with seven points.

"We played better than we did in the first game," MacFarlane said. "But we couldn't throw the ball in the ocean. It's been like that all season. We're not shooting good from the floor or the foul line. And we turn the ball over way too many times.

"I'm pleased with the girls' effort," he added. "They gave everything they had. We lost by 10 points and Quincy beat us by 30-something the first time. They've played hard all season. They have nothing to be ashamed of."

Christopher Mosher Named Vice President Of Development At Quincy Medical Center

Christopher Mosher, JD, has joined Quincy Medical Center as vice president for development.

In this position, he will oversee overall fundraising efforts for the medical center and oversee the QMC Foundation. He will be responsible for providing leadership and direction to the Foundation's Board of Directors and staff.

As a member of QMC's senior leadership, Mosher will be responsible for creating and directing a comprehensive and cost-effective resource development program designed to attract maximum support from a regional constituency of individual donors, corporations and businesses, charitable foundations and community groups. Specific areas of responsibility will include annual giving, capital campaigns, major gifts, planned giving and special events.

CHRISTOPHER MOSHER

Previously, Mosher served as director of development at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston for six years. While there, he helped plan and execute a $200 million capital campaign, the largest in the institution's history.

Mosher has also served as vice president for development at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach and executive director of capital campaigns and director of university relations and director of planned giving at Northeastern University in Boston.

Mosher is a graduate of Northeastern University and received his Juris Doctor degree from Suffolk University Law School.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

Woman's Heart Day Health Fair

Quincy women can join other women from around the region to improve their health at the 2004 National Woman's Heart Day health fair, Friday, Feb. 20 at the Hynes Convention Center, Boston from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The free event will offer confidential health screenings to test blood pressure, cholesterol, glucose levels and body mass index, which help determine risk factors for heart disease, the number one cause of death for American women.

Attendees to the Woman's Heart Day health fair, expected to number as many as 1,000, will have the opportunity to review test results with qualified healthcare professionals and learn about resources for improving their heart health.

The National Woman's Heart Day Health Fair is organized by The Sister to Sister Everyone Has A Heart Foundation, a national organization committed to increasing awareness of heart disease in women.

Live broadcasts and appearances with WCVB television anchor Susan Wornick and WBOS radio host David O'Leary will welcome attendees, who will be eligible to win one of many great door prizes, including round trip airfare, hotel stays and a 5-day Aruba vacation.

Educational seminars on weight loss, smoking cessation, stress management and other lifestyle improvements will be presented by local experts from Tufts University, Harvard University, Boston College, the Massachusetts Department of Health and the MindBody Medical Institute.

Fitness demonstrations by a number of local organizations will teach attendees the basics in kickboxing, aerobics, yoga, cardio-boxing and Brazilian martial arts.

The Health Fair will also feature a Kids Corner, where children can participate in yoga demonstrations and storytelling, among other activities.

There will also be cooking demonstrations and tips for preparing heart-healthy meals and snacks from executive chefs from Legal Seafoods and Meze Estiatorio.

For more information, including directions, visit www.womansheartday.org.

Are You At Risk For Stroke?

(NU) Every year, millions of Americans feel a racing heartbeat. This condition may be atrial fibrillation also called AF and it increases your risk for stroke by 500 percent.

AF is an irregular or racing heartbeat that can cause blood to collect in the heart and potentially form a clot, which can travel to the brain and cause a stroke or brain attack. More than 2 million Americans have AF.

Sixty-six-year-old Ray Tafolla of Denver, Colo., had an AF stroke last February. "I had never heard of atrial fibrillation," he said. "I have a hard time even pronouncing it."

He isn't alone. More than one-third of patients with AF don't know they have it. When AF patients suffer strokes, more than 70 percent will die or have extreme permanent brain damage. But doctors estimate that three out of four AF-related strokes can be prevented.

Tafolla was watching television when his stroke hit. Within hours, he lost his ability to speak clearly and was paralyzed on his left side.

In the hospital after his stroke, Tafolla could not move or speak. An avid golfer, the first thing he tried to tell the nurse was, "I have a tee time tomorrow so you can't hold me too long."

Tafolla was fortunate. His son got him to the hospital within three hours, enabling him to get tPA, a medication that breaks up clots and restores blood flow to the brain.

Unlike two-thirds of AF patients, Tafolla was put on anti-coagulants or blood thinners to reduce his risk of another stroke. Tafolla was back on the links in a matter of weeks.

"AF is one of our most common risk factors for stroke, but also one of the most treatable," said Dr. Lawrence Brass, spokesman for the National Stroke Association and Yale neurologist. "New advances in research will hopefully provide even more options for safe, effective and convenient life-saving therapy to prevent AF-related strokes."

National Stroke Association is launching "Beat the Odds," a new public education campaign to raise awareness about the dangers of AF and the importance of preventing AF-related strokes. "Beat the Odds" is supported by an educational grant from AstraZeneca.

Ask your doctor about the latest AF treatment and how you can prevent AF strokes. For more information, call the National Stroke Association at 1-800-STROKES or visit www.stroke.org.

PIERCING INSIGHT

If you sport lip or tongue studs, you may be compromising the health of your teeth. Aside from the obvious risks of piercing (including infection, bleeding, and nerve damage), oral ornamentation presents the possibility of chipping and/or cracking teeth. Jewelry of this type also carries the potential to severely damage the gums. This problem occurs when repeated contact with the stud or ring interferes with the contact between gums and teeth, which leads to the creation of periodontal pockets. If left untreated, these pockets can serve as reservoirs of collected bacteria, which can destroy the bone that anchors teeth in place. This damage often occurs without the wearer noticing any damage until it is too late.

Our caring, friendly staff strives to make each visit pleasant and comfortable in a relaxed atmosphere. We emphasize preventive, functional, and cosmetic dental care for all ages. Dentistry is an investment in one of the most important things you possess – your health. Teeth are meant to last for a lifetime. They will take care of you, if you take care of them. We invite you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street where we offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Patients who wear tongue and lip studs should schedule regular appointments with the dentist to check the health of their teeth and especially their gums.

SCOTT DEWARI

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Through the years we have been asked by many people what are they advantages of pre-arranging and/or pre-financing a funeral.

There are many reasons . . . But the foremost reason is that it gives one peace of mind. One knows that his family will be relieved of many of the burdens which face a family in their time of sorrow.

When death strikes unexpectedly or even when it is expected, many people are not emotionally ready to make the many decisions that have to be made in a relatively short time. By making pre-arrangements ahead of time, one can relieve the family of some of the grief at a very emotional time; it can relieve many 'traumatic' decisions; it can relieve confusion; it can eliminate differences of opinion concerning cost and ritual.

Please feel free to stop by or call us at anytime for full details concerning pre-arrangement. We will answer all your questions frankly and honestly. We do not charge a fee for any consultation and, of course, you are not under any obligation.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

GOT WORDS

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some unsettling facts about a past situation could come to light. And while you'd love to deal with it immediately, it's best to get more information to support your case.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A straightforward approach to a baffling situation is best. Don't allow yourself to be drawn into an already messy mass of tangles and lies. Deal with it and move on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be discouraged or deterred by a colleague's negative opinion about your ideas. It could actually prove to be helpful when you finally get around to finalizing your plan.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Ignore that sudden attack of "modesty," and step up to claim the credit you've so rightly earned. Remember: A lot of people are proud of you and want to share in your achievement.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial "deal" that seems to be just right for you Leos and Leonas could be grounded more in gossamer than substance. Get an expert's advice to help you check it out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't ignore that suddenly cool or even rude attitude from someone close to you. Asking for an explanation could reveal a misunderstanding you were completely unaware of.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Unless you have sound knowledge, and not just an opinion, it's best not to step into a family dispute involving a legal matter, regardless of whom you support. Leave that to the lawyers.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An awkward situation presents the usually socially savvy Scorpian with a problem. But a courteous and considerate approach soon helps clear the air and ease communication.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A calmer, less tense atmosphere prevails through much of the week, allowing you to restore your energy levels before tackling a new challenge coming up by week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your approach to helping with a friend or family member's problem could boomerang unless you take time to explain your method and how and why it (usually!) works.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who gave you a lot of grief might ask for a chance for the two of you to make a fresh start. You need to weigh the sincerity of the request carefully before giving your answer.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Too much fantasizing about an upcoming decision could affect your judgment. Better to make your choices based on what you know now rather than on what you might learn later.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of seeing the best in people and helping them live up to their potential.

Oh most beautiful flower of Mt Carmel. Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herin you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. (Make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herin that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days. You must be published and it will be granted to you.

May the Sacred heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and praised throughout the world now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus pray for us. St. Jude worker of miracles pray for us. St. Jude, help of the hopeless, pray for us. Say this prayer nine times a day. By the eighth day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised.

Thank you, St. Jude for granting my petition. D.E.R. 2/19

Quincy College Must Pay Rent Or Face Eviction

alternative sites for some of the ancillary projects associated with the construction of a new high school at Faxon Field. Quincy College abuts the current high school, which has been slated for renovation as outlined in the city's high school project.

Some have suggested relocating the new high school's parking facilities to the Coddington Hall site and parking lot.

Richard Cronin, marketing director at Massasoit Community College, said school officials have no interest in the buildings at this time.

If the college does not respond to the demands, the school committee would begin a "summary process" in district or superior court. This would lead to a request for a hearing before a judge. Both sides would be given the opportunity to present evidence and witnesses at the hearing.

Evictions involving commercial property can move along swiftly, in contrast to similar issues involving residential matters. The process can still be delayed by appeals and legal wrangling, according to legal officials.

Shea Expects 25% Turnout

Light Vote Seen For Presidential Primaries

A light vote is expected here for the Massachusetts Presidential Primaries on Super Tuesday next week.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees not more than 25 percent of the city's 53,192 registered voters going to the polls.

"I think it will be a light turnout because many feel the race for the Democratic nomination appears to be over," Shea says. "And another sign is the fact there has been few applications for absentee ballots."

Senator John F. Kerry, the Democratic front-runner, has won primaries and caucuses in 15 out of 17 states.

And as the native son candidate many voters will consider him a sure winner here and not bother to vote, Shea notes.

Another indicator of a low turnout, Shea said, is the fact that although their names are still on the ballot, several of the original major candidates have since dropped out of the field.

The latest was former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean, who exited after finishing a distant third in the Wisconsin primary last week.

Also gone are Richard Gephardt, Joseph Lieberman and Wesley Clark who, with Dean, Shea says, would have generated voter interest.

Most observers now see it as a two-man race for the Democratic nomination between Kerry and Senator John Edwards of North Carolina.

Edwards surged close to Kerry in the Wisconsin primary. Kerry had 40 percent of the vote there to Edwards' 34 percent.

Going into the 10-state Super Tuesday primaries Kerry has won 608 delegates and Edwards 190. Dean had 201. Al Sharpton has 16 and Dennis Kucnich, 2. Both Sharpton and Kucnich are still in the field.

A candidate needs 2,162 delegates to win the presidential nomination.

The only Presidential candidate on the Republican ballot is incumbent George W. Bush.

The city's 30 polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday. They are at the same locations as those in last November's city election and are listed in this issue of The Quincy Sun on Page 15.

Four years ago John McCain and Al Gore carried Quincy with just under 32 percent of the then city's 51,775 registered voters casting ballots.

McCain, appealing to the unenrolled and Democrat voters, rolled by Bush here. McCain had 65.81 percent of the Quincy vote to Bush's 29.86 percent. The vote was 3,870 to 1,756.

On the Democrat ballot, Gore topped former Senator Bill Bradley here, 58.21 per

Recommended If Needed

Closing Of Three Catholic Parishes Not Certain

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Three of Quincy's eight Catholic parishes are recommended for closing if needed to be in the reconfiguration of churches being conducted throughout the Archdiocese of Boston because of declining attendance at weekly Mass.

The three in recommended order if three are needed to be closed:

(1) Star of the Sea in Squantum.

(2) St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, created by the merger in 1999 of Our Lady of Good Counsel in Merrymount and St. Boniface in Germantown.

(3) St. John the Baptist, Quincy Center.

The recommendations were made by the Quincy Cluster comprising the eight Quincy parishes and one of 80 in the archdiocese involved in the reconfiguration process.

The key word at this time, local church sources emphasize, is the word "if" if they are needed to be closed.

They stress that these are recommendations not decisions. The final decisions will be made by Archbishop Sean O'Malley. Deadline for the recommendations is March 8. He is expected to announce sometime in May how many and which of the 357 parishes will be closed.

The Quincy Cluster made its recommendations in three meetings attended by some 40 pastors, priests, lay staff, vice chairpersons of parish councils and finance commissions.

They were made in response to two questions.

Question 1: If the Archbishop needs to close a parish in your cluster for the greater good of the Archdiocese, how would you recommend that your cluster of parishes be reconfigured and why?

Recommendation: "We recommend that our cluster of eight parishes be reduced to seven parishes and that the Star of the Sea Parish be closed and that Sacred Heart Parish be reconfigured to include Star of the Sea parishioners.

"The reason to close Star of the Sea Parish is: 1) Low sacramental index. 2) No on-street parking that would accommodate parishioners from another church."

Question 2: If the archdiocese needs to close more than one parish in your cluster, how many parishes would you recommend for closure and how would you recommend that your cluster be reconfigured and why?

Recommendation: "We recommend that our cluster of eight parishes be reduced to five parishes. First, Star of the Sea parish be closed and Sacred Heart Parish be reconfigured to include Star of the Sea parishioners.

"Second, St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish be closed and its parishioners be [illegible]

Meeting March 2 On N.Q. T. Station Development

A community meeting on Tuesday, March 2 at 7 p.m. in the North Quincy High School auditorium will feature a presentation by Dickinson Development regarding a proposal to construct a mixed-use property on the air rights at the North Quincy MBTA station.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner are hosting the event.

In 1998, the city council gave Dickinson Development the right to construct a 265,000 square foot commercial building at the site. An additional component of the project entailed the expansion of the existing MBTA parking facilities by way of a 2,000 vehicle parking garage.

The additional parking spaces were in part attributable to a consent agreement as a result of a lawsuit filed by the Conservation Law Foundation regarding the Big Dig. The agreement required the MBTA to encourage ridership and provide adequate parking for commuters at various public transit points of entry.

Mayor: Chief Assures On Overtime

Fire Dept. Facing Budget Shortfall, Says Auditor

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Mayor William Phelan said he has received assurances from Fire Chief Paul O'Connell that the fire department will not need any additional funds to cover overtime costs, despite suggestions from the city auditor that the account will be depleted three months before the end of the fiscal year.

At last week's city council meeting, Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick said if current trends continue, the fire department's $600,000 overtime budget will be exhausted in April. As of Jan. 31, the department had spent $500,000 on overtime for fiscal 2004, he said. Since the department spends approximately $40,000 per week on overtime, the budget line item will be depleted in April, three months before end of the fiscal year, June 30, said Fitzpatrick.

When asked about the issue Monday, Phelan said he has received assurances from O'Connell that the department will not go over budget.

"The chief has assured me that he will come in under budget without having an additional piece of equipment taken out of service," said Phelan. "He assured me when he planned the budget and has assured me all along."

O'Connell was not available for comment.

Over the past few years, the $600,000 appropriation for overtime has proven to be inadequate. In fiscal 2002 and 2003, the fire department spent more than $1.6 million and $1.7 million on overtime, respectively, said Fitzpatrick.

The department faced a similar situation last year when Fire Chief Paul O'Connell placed Rescue 1, the city's most active piece of fire apparatus, on standby status due to a manpower shortage. Rescue 1 continues to be used sporadically.

As was reported in the Sun three weeks ago, Tom Bowes, president of the Quincy firefighters' union, said the department would be understaffed by at least 20 positions unless the city hires more firefighters by July 1. The department is currently running understaffed and more firefighters are due to retire this summer, according to Bowes.

Bowes said he was recently told by O'Connell that Engine 4 would come out of service unless more firefighters are hired or there is an additional appropriation for overtime.

Overtime costs increase when firefighters are called in to cover for understaffed shifts, said Bowes.

In the past, Chief Paul O'Connell has said he would not allow fire apparatus to operate unless each piece of equipment is staffed with at least one officer and two firefighters.

Understaffing a piece of equipment places an undue burden on firefighters and can jeopardize their safety, O'Connell has indicated.

After hearing Fitzpatrick's remarks, some councillors expressed concerned about the future of the fire department.

"We are not sufficiently staffed once again," said Coughlin. "We are going to short-change the fire department and short-change the residents of Quincy, who will be left with a gaping hole in fire protection. Once again, we've placed the fire department in a perilous situation by underfunding and undermanning it."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said it is time for the administration to provide the council with answers.

"The rubber is going to meet the road shortly, and the chief needs to come before the council and let us know what is going on," said Gutro. "There are rumors about Engine 4 being on the chopping block, and that engine covers a significant part of my Ward, including three senior citizen complexes that are visible from Wollaston station. We need some direct answers sooner rather than later."

Both Gutro and Coughlin praised O'Connell for managing the department under the circumstances.

"The chief has done a great job, but we have a significant number of vacancies that need to be filled," said Coughlin.

Remove Your PMI - Save Hundreds

Private mortgage insurance does not have to last forever. Federal Law may save you Hundreds of Dollars each year. If you are candidate for removal of PMI The Homeowners Protection Act of 1998 simplifies the cancellation process.

For qualifying loans originating after July, 1999, a homeowner has the right to request cancellation of PMI when the mortgage balance is less than 80% of either the original purchase price or the appraised value providing there is a good payment history.

The HPA of 1998's cancellation and automatic termination rules do not apply to loans before July 29, 1999 but many lenders report that they plan to follow the HPA's requirements for both new and existing loans.

Lawmakers To Reconvene March 11

Delegation Wants Same-Sex Marriage On Ballot

Quincy's state delegation is in agreement on the same-sex marriage issue: Let the voters decide.

A two-day constitutional convention failed to resolve the controversial debate of whether to put a constitutional definition of marriage on the ballot, but Quincy's state delegation believes the voters should ultimately decide the issue.

Lawmakers rejected three proposed constitutional amendments banning gay marriage; two of the three also would have created some form of civil unions for gay couples. They are due to reconvene March 11.

A Nov. 18 ruling by the state Supreme Judicial Court made same-sex marriages legal. That ruling is set to take effect May 17.

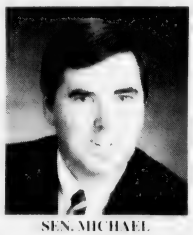
Sen. Michael Morrissey said he believes the definition of a marriage should be restricted to a union between a man and a woman, but he said voters should have the ultimate say on the matter.

"This great social issue is one that should be decided by the citizens of Massachusetts and not by four members of the Massachusetts' Supreme Judicial Court, or even 200 state legislators and the governor," he wrote in a letter to constituents.

Rep. Stephen Tobin agreed with Morrissey, saying voters should be the final arbiter on the issue.

Tobin said an overwhelming majority of constituents calling his office have registered their opposition to the idea of same-sex marriage. Emails from constituents, however, appear to be split evenly on the issue, he said.

"My votes reflect the legitimate concerns of a democratic society," he said. "When a majority of the people cannot weigh in on an issue, something is seriously wrong. I happen to believe the people deserve a role."



Tobin said supporters of same-sex marriage would be well served to allow the public to vote on the issue. "If you want the public to accept gay marriage then why not put it up for a vote and find out?" he asked. "Personally, I don't think 3,000 years of Judeo-Christian laws should be tossed aside because a split, 4-3 majority of the state Supreme Court says something is in the Constitution."

Rep. Bruce Ayers also voted against the idea of same-sex marriage, but said voters should have the chance to weigh in on the issue.

"I think the SJC overstepped it bounds," said Ayers. "This item should be put on the ballot. There are a lot of strong feelings on both sides, but it's too important to be taken out of the hands of the people."

Rep. Ron Mariano was not able to attend the constitutional convention because of a health issue, but he intends to vote to put the item on the ballot.

"I'm going to vote to put it on the ballot," said Mariano. "But I also want to make sure there are protections for some sort of union, whether we call it marriage or civil unions. The issue is the rights of individuals and how we best protect them. As long as we give people the same rights and protections then we have done our job."

Child ID Program At Atlantic Middle School March 19

The Quincy Public Schools is offering for the second year the Masonic "Child Identification Program" (CHIP) to students in every school.

More than one million children are reported missing each year throughout the country. The program is an effort to keep children safe and teach personal safety skills.

The program is built upon collaboration with the school system, the Quincy Police Department, local dentists and parent groups.

About 1800 students of all ages have taken part in this program, and families have received at no charge, a videotape, finger prints, and a dental impression of their child. The items are the sole property of the parent or guardian.

The schedule for the remainder of the year is as follows:

•March 19, Atlantic Middle School at 8:15 a.m.

•April 2, Broad Meadows School at 8:15 a.m.

•April 28 Lincoln Hancock School at 7:45 a.m.

•May 5 Atherton Hough School at 7:45 a.m.

•June 2 Clifford Marshall School at 8:15 a.m.

Parents who have missed the program at their home school may take children to any of these locations, and are asked to call the school principal to make arrangements.

For more information on the CHIPS program, contact Janet Powell, Director of Pupil Personnel Services, Quincy Public Schools, 617-984-8898.

How Cherished Is Right To Vote?

Just how cherished is our right to vote?

Sometimes you wonder.

Like next Tuesday's Massachusetts Presidential Primaries, for example.

Quincy has 53,192 registered voters eligible to cast ballots.

But most of them won't.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees about a 25 percent voter turnout next Tuesday.

SHEA

If he is on target – and he usually is or close – it means about 13,200 of those 53,192 voters will actually vote.

And something close to 40,000 will stay home.

But despite the expected light turnout Shea can't cut back on Tuesday's primaries' cost. He will still have 180 election workers at the 30 polling places and the usual police details.

"It will cost about $45,000," he says.

But Quincy does get a break this year.

Shea has to have a ballot for every single registered voter just in case that miracle election day arrives when every registered voter actually votes.

"The odds are it will never happen but imagine if someone came in to vote and there wasn't a ballot to vote on," Shea says.

So, he will have 53,192 ballots and some to spare for next Tuesday.

"The ballots will cost about $9,700," Shea says.

But the cost is on the state. Secretary of State William Galvin picks up the tab for these ballots.

In city elections, the city pays for the ballots, and has to have one for every registered voter.

Shea says one reason for his low turnout forecast for next Tuesday is that "many feel the race for the Democratic nomination appears to be over."

KERRY

Front runner John Kerry has won primaries and caucuses in 15 out of 17 states. Now, it appears, the only one standing in his way is Senator John Edwards from North Carolina.

Four major contenders, Richard Gephardt, Joseph Lieberman, Wesley Clark and Howard Dean have dropped out of contention although their names are still on the ballot. Shea thinks if they were still in the race they would have sparked some voter interest here next week.

Another indicator of a low turnout, a reliable one, Shea says, is that there has been few requests for absentee ballots.

And, of course, on the Republican ballot there is only one Presidential candidate: George W. Bush.

Four years ago, the voter turnout was a little better but still low.

Quincy had 51,775 registered voters in 2000 but only a little under 32 percent turned out despite a couple of good ballot contests.

John McCain and Al Gore were easy winners here, McCain sweeping by Bush and Gore by Bill Bradley.

Quincy's recent city elections didn't send voters rushing to the polls, either.

Only 25 percent voted in last year's preliminary election. And only 35 percent came out for the final election which had races for mayor, city council at-large, three ward seats, two of them open, and school committee.

The 2001 city election was good for a 47 percent turnout, thanks to the mayoral race between six-term incumbent James Sheets and challenger Bill Phelan.

And, of course, that went down in Quincy political history as the closest mayoral election ever with Phelan upsetting Sheets by a scant 17 votes.

Voter interest seems to have waned in recent years when compared to some elections of the past.

A few city election samples:

1959: 75.7 percent – 33,450 voters – turned out. That was the year Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa turned back a strong challenge by young City Council President James McIntyre.

1971: 72 percent – 33,804 voters. Walter Hannon defeated Joseph Brett for the mayor's office McIntyre left after becoming counsel to the Massachusetts Senate.

1975: 71.3 percent – 34,374 voters. Joseph LaRaia defeated Hannon in the famous recount.

1977: 66.8 percent – 34,057 voters. Arthur Tobin won the mayor's office from LaRaia.

1965: 65.3 percent – 30,2326 voters. McIntyre defeated LaRaia by a wide margin to succeed Della Chiesa as mayor. The latter was not a candidate for re-election.

1981: 62.9 percent – 30,530 voters. Frank McCauley defeated Daniel Raymondi for the mayor's office after Tobin decided not to seek re-election.

1989: 60.6 percent – 29,560 voters. James Sheets defeated Peter O'Connell for mayor when McCauley decided not to seek a fifth term.

Were the candidates more attractive back then? Did more voters feel their vote really counted. Were the issues bigger? Were the voters more interested?

Whatever the reason, more people are now staying home on election day than those exercising their cherished right to have their say at the ballot box.

How cherished, though, is that right to the stay-at-homes?

But imagine the great outcry if the now-and-then voter turned up at City Hall and was told he or she couldn't vote because they didn't vote in the last election.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, who decided not to seek re-election to the school committee last year, has not left the political scene.

CEDRONE

She is running unopposed for Republican state committeewoman in the Norfolkk and Plymouth District in next Tuesday's Presidential Primaries.

Cedrone is now an attorney associated with the office of Atty. Tom Williams.

MILESTONE: Jeanne Reardon, City Council Clerk of Committees, and her husband, Bill, are grandparents for the fourth time.

REARDON

Brooke Michele Reardon, daughter of Bill and Michele Reardon, arrived Feb. 12 at South Shore Hospital.

She is their first child and Jeanne and Bill's second granddaughter. They also have two grandsons.

Brooke was welcomed into the world at last week's City Council meeting when Councillor Dan Raymondi moved "let us adjorun in celebration of Jeanne Reardon's new granddaughter."

Increasing Tax Shift Onto Businesses Is Unfair

Mayor William Phelan's decision to reject the city council's plan to immediately increase the tax shift onto businesses to 200% was based on long-term thinking rather than the politically expedient, "wet-finger-in-the-wind" approach.

A quick look at the data shows that Quincy's commercial tax base is eroding at an alarming rate. Since 2000, Quincy's commercial tax base has declined a whopping 6 percent. The current commercial vacancy rate is 18 percent with a projected vacancy rate in excess of 20 percent.

Some councillors don't understand the ramifications of this trend or just don't care. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said that forcing businesses to immediately pay even more of the tax burden was ". . . the best opportunity we have to provide some relief. It far exceeds anything else we can do."

Did Councillor Coughlin hear taxpayers when they demanded cuts in spending rather than raise anyone taxes? Instead, he's voting to increase taxes by supporting measures like 1710, a fire department initiative that will cost Quincy taxpayers millions of dollars every year.

Since 1997, Quincy businesses have saved residents almost $107 million in taxes. A shift to the maximum allowed under law is unfair and bad tax policy. It's a policy that will continue to erode the city's commercial tax base, which will also erode residential tax breaks.

When responding to the Mayor's decision to reject a 200 percent tax shift, Coughlin said, "I just don't get it." He certainly doesn't.

Vote Your Heart On March 2

I was inspired after watching a program of the Center for Voting and Democracy on C-Span to look up the total number of Democratic Presidential Candidates (which is 42), so when I say I support the "long shot": Dennis Kucinich, I actually feel like I am in the mainstream because he is now one of the top four, so to speak.

The Democratic Primary is the time to vote your patriotic heart for the platform of the Democratic Party. We will have a whole week in July to prioritize the ideas we stand for and rally support for the one who will best represent us against George Bush.

I was very sorry to see any of the Primary candidates drop out: Graham, Moseley-Braun, Gephardt, Lieberman, Clark and Dean. The sight of all the candidates together on the debate stages so far really shows the strength of our party through the dialogue that is the heart of our democracy. We, of course, are part of that strength when we pledge support for any one of the candidates and, perhaps, make a few phone calls on their behalf to other Americans.

No matter whom we talk to about whom we support for President, we should let every American know that we care – probably about some of the same issues: healthcare for all, education for all, peace: in our homes, across America and throughout the world, an end to discrimination of any kind, a safe and healthful environment, economic and social justice.

While there may be a certain urgency to these concerns, there is no immediate urgency to coalesce around just one candidate – not yet. Remember to vote on March 2 and please vote your true heart.

Marie Jackson-Miller

How Much Development Is Too Much Development?

I was recently informed by my ward councillor Alicia Gardner that a community meeting at North Quincy High School has been scheduled for Tuesday, March 2 at 7 p.m. I will attend the meeting with an open mind but remain quite skeptical of the benefits this Dickinson Development proposal in North Quincy will bring to the city of Quincy, especially my own neighborhood.

As a community activist and as a member of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association I'm not sure exactly what we're getting with this North Quincy Station Development plan. The developer gets to use the air space above the MBTA property to build his complex which will include both residential and commercial use. There are plans to build a multi-screen movie theater. The developer is also required to build a 500 space parking garage to be shared by both the Dickinson development as well as MBTA commuters.

What of the plans proposed for two high rise apartment towers down in the shadow of the Neponset Bridge near the present site of the Fallon Ambulance garage? How much development at the lower end of Hancock Street is too much development?

Fixing the traffic lights on Hancock Street near the firehouse is small potatoes, isn't it? The Neponset Bridge is a gateway to Quincy but if we keep over-developing the area, it will become a get-away out of Quincy.

I will go to the meeting but I want to know the benefits the people will receive. The developer wins something. The MBTA wins something. Commuters parking their cars, movie goers and restaurant folks win something form it but it is the people of the Atlantic neighborhood who come out looking like losers. We get new traffic lights and are supposed to be grateful.

Taxes go up, up, and up and we get so little return for it all. No wonder there's a tax revolt developing in this city.

The people seem to count last. Developers talk and the rest of us walk. The pols need to listen to us too rather than see the overdevelopment of Quincy as beneficial.

Developers develop and the rest of us are forced to live with it or move on out.

1200 Attend Police Chief Hughes' Funeral

This Week
1952
52 Years Ago

Twelve hundred people attended the funeral at St. Mary's Church for Police Chief Joseph Hughes who died unexpectedly at age 52 at his Cross St. home.

A special force of 12 state policemen and eight Braintree police covered the city while all the city's law community attended the funeral.

Hughes had served in the police force for 26 years, but only two and a half in the chief's position, the shortest tenure in the city's history. He was appointed by Mayor Charles Ross to succeed Chief John Avery.

District Attorney Edmund Dewing said Hughes was "one of the ablest, most respected and best liked men to hold the post in the city's history."

City Manager William Deegan named Captain William Ferrazzi to succeed Hughes.

SHIPYARD WORKERS AUTHORIZE STRIKE

Without one dissenting vote, 2,012 members of Local 5 of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilders, authorized a strike if contract negotiations broke down with officials from Bethlehem Steel.

The union met at Quincy High School auditorium, joining workers at the other seven yards on the East Coast owned by Bethlehem, in a strike vote. International President John Grogan noted the strike vote was 50 to 1, with a margin of 26,643 to 532.

Local 5 President Donald Edmonston listed the contract demands as a 20-cent an hour raise, a union shop, eight paid holidays, improved vacations and an extension of seniority rights.

FURNACE BROOK CLUB THREATENS SUIT

A spokesman for the Furnace Brook Golf Club threatened a suit to block the school committee's vote to take part of the golf course for a new school.

Meeting at the Fox and Hounds Restaurant, the school board voted four to three in favor of the land taking to relieve overcrowding at the Cranch and Wollaston Schools.

Voting in favor were Mayor David McIntosh, Vice Chairman Wendell Clark, Col. Domenic Chiminello and Rev. Joseph Parkman. Voting against were Carter Lee, Paul Duffy and Dr. Joseph McDermott.

Apple Puffed Pancake

While out to lunch last week with our friend Barbara, she couldn't wait to hand me this recipe for apple puffed pancakes. She said every time she makes them she gets raves. She also said they come out like pop-overs.

Apple Puffed Pancake

6 eggs
1 1/2 cups mil
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teasoon cinnaom.
1/4 pound butter or margarine
2 apples, peeled and thinly sliced
2 to 3 tablespoons brown sugar

Preheat ovem to 425 degrees. Mix the eggs, milk, flour, sugar, vanilla, salt and cinnamon until blended. If using a mixer, the batter will remain slightly lumpy.

Melt the butter or margarine in the oven in a 12 inch fluted quiche dish or a 13 x 9 baking dish.

Then add the apple slices to the baking dish. Return to oven until butter or margareint sizzles. Do not let brown. Bake until apples are tender.

Remove dish from oven and immediately pour butter over the apples, sprinkle with the brown sugar and bake for 20 minuts or until puffed and brown.

Serve immediatley. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

UNScrabble Fund-Raiser At Library March 18

LVM-Quincy at the Thomas Crane Public Library and literacy partner Altrusa International of Quincy are sponsoring the sixth annual UNScrabble fund-raiser Thursday, March 18, from 6 to 8:30 p.m.

Registration fee is $10 per person. All proceeds benefit the library's literacy volunteer program.

The Crane Library literacy program serves the South Shore community. Volunteers are trained and matched through LVM-Quincy and have provided free tutoring to adults in basic reading and writing since 1986. LVM-Quincy is a full affiliate of the national network of Pro Literacy America and is one of 12 LVM programs statewide.

Altrusa International of Quincy is an international association of business executives and professionals who volunteer their energies and expertise in projects dedicated to community betterment. Assistance is given to projects emphasizing literacy through the Altrusa International Foundation, Inc.

The connection between Altrusa and the library has been long standing. Altrusa has donated funds, equipment and materials to the Literacy Project; assisted at library fund-raisers; provided volunteer tutors; and most recently has initiated an annual story telling event at the Snug Harbor School.

UNScrabble will be held in the Richardson Room at the library. There will be refreshments, games and prizes.

Unlike traditional Scrabble, UNScrabble play consists of 30 minutes of frenzied word building using all of the Scrabble tiles in that small amount of time. To support this fund-raiser, one may buy extra Scrabble tiles, peeks at the dictionary and even initial Scrabble pins.

For a registration form and more information, call Elaine Kline at 617-376-1314.

Fallon Ambulance Relocating To Brook Road

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Fallon Ambulance will relocate their corporate offices from Milton to 115 Brook Rd., South Quincy, where they will also garage 60 ambulances inside the building.

The move was given unanimous approval by the License Board Tuesday.

They were also given a fuel storage license for the ambulances.

Edward Fleming, counsel for Fallon Ambulance told the board that the former New England Steel Tank facility was purchased last year by Fallon. Four months ago, Fleming said the steel framed building was taken down to the framing and substantial renovations with an entirely new face is in progress.

The 60 ambulance would be stored inside the 30,000 square foot building and would be exiting from the rear entrance.

Fleming said that neighborhood meetings were held with issues concerning air quality and noise. He said that the company has installed a state of the art infiltration systems and as far as the noise issue, sirens and lights will not go on until the ambulances are on Burgin Pkwy.

Fleming said neighbors will feel more secure b because security is provided 24 hours a day, and the presence of cameras will provide a "sense of security".

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis said at the two neighborhood meetings, the overall project was very well received. He said that Fallon Ambulance did not require a neighborhood meeting, but chose to do so, which "speeks highly" of their commitment to the community.

Principal owner of Fallon Ambulance Peter Recicot said the facility that Fallon Ambulance has at 83 Penn St. at the present time, will now be moved to 115 Brook Rd. And the facility at 95 Elliot St., Milton will be kept for billing purposes.

He said they are in the process of acquiring property on 146 Hancock St. near Panera Bread for another facility. They also have a site on 2 Hancock St.

It is widely believed that individual Masons were active participants in the Boston Tea Party...

So, what have Massachusetts Masons been doing since dumping tea in Boston harbor in 1773?

Massachusetts was the birthplace of American Freemasonry in 1733 and, indeed, many famous Masons such as George Washington, John Hancock and Paul Revere built the foundation on which our great country stands today. But, is Freemasonry relevant today? Yes, more than ever before.

Masons operate the Shriners hospitals where seriously injured kids receive state-of-the-art medical treatment for free. Masons are the largest group of blood donors to the Massachusetts Red Cross. We have one of the finest elderly care facilities in the state. And we operate and fund the Masonic Child Identification Program in which more than 175,000 kids have already participated. Yes, Masons, especially here in Quincy keep very busy...and we have fun doing it.

Maybe your dad, your grand dad, an uncle or a neighbor is a Mason. Masonry invites men of good character from all walks of life, all levels of income, from every race, creed and culture to join in its good works. Through its traditions and teachings, Masonry endeavors to instill in its members the desire and means to improve themselves and the lives of others. Our initiation ceremonies are serious with no hazing or horseplay.

With Masonic Lodges in almost every community and every country in the free world, you'll have friends wherever you go.

You can go on and become a 32° Mason, a member of the York Rite and a shriner, if you wish. You will have a wide choice of opportunities for community service, personal improvement, leadership, and the fellowship and friendship of Brothers who share your commitment and ideals.

For more information, without obligation, on how you can become a Mason, call Rural Lodge at the number below today.

30-Hour Famine At Salvation Army To Fight World Hunger

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE

At Monday night's meeting, the Salvation Army youth group enjoyed a variety of tasty treats. They snacked on Mike and Ikes. They gulped down cans of Diet Coke and Slice.

This weekend they'll be starving.

Not really starving but fasting. These seven teenagers, along with six young adults from the Salvation Army, are joining 500,000 people across the country in a project called 30 Hour Famine. From about noon tomorrow (Friday) until 5 p.m. Saturday, they will forgo food to raise money to fight world hunger. Participants spend the weekend together in their church or group center — the 15 Salvationists will spend it in the Salvation Army gym — and are allowed to drink juice to curb their appetite.

The 30 Hour Famine was started in 1992 by World Vision, a Christian humanitarian organization that supports development and relief projects in over 100 countries, including the United States. It takes $30 to feed a child for one month, according to a World Vision press release. The 500,000 people who took part in last year's famine raised $7.7 million. This year's efforts will help people in Ethiopia and Peru, both ravaged by famine.

This is the Salvation Army's first time participating in the project. Dolly Inman, the church's new youth minister and a four-time 30 Hour Famine participant, wanted her youth group to experience it.

"It's an excellent event to do with teenagers to help them understand that even though sometimes we want so much more to be appreciative of what we have," said Inman. "The whole 30 Hour Famine is about going without so others can have more."

Major Douglas Jones agreed, and saw it as a chance to give young people a greater understanding of world need.

"I think of it as a great opportunity . . . to inform young people about the needs of other children their age around the world and about the discipline of prayer and the discipline of sacrifice," said Jones.

Inman said the goal of the event is for teenagers to learn the facts about hunger, in order to gain a global perspective. For this reason, she did not, and will not, talk much about poverty with her youth group before the fast begins, she said.

The event's 30 hours, with the exception of seven hours blocked out for sleeping, are packed with activities that teach these facts.

Jones will talk about Christian service. Selwyn Bodley, the pastor at Glad Tidings Church, will talk about prayer. Les Jordan will talk about fasting.

Participants can pray and reflect at six stations Inman calls a "prayer labyrinth." Each depicts something they will learn about and pray for over the 30-hour period, Inman said.

Inman painted the stations — a church, a man praying, and maps — on white bed sheets. The pictures encourage participants to pray for the church, the community, the world, and themselves.

There are breaks, but these are filled with basketball games, darts and even a game of hide and seek.

Keeping the kids busy takes the focus off their hunger and places it instead on working together toward the goal of going 30 hours without food, said Inman.

The other goal is for each participant to raise $40 each.

Brianna Southern, 13, of Braintree, who will participant in this weekend's fast, has already raised $60 for the fast. She said she's not worried about going without food and is looking forward to the event.

"I wanted to try something new," said Southern.

The fast will end with a large meal on Saturday night. Participants will be rewarded with the home-cooking of Salvation Army parishioner Bonnie Hepburn, and with T-shirts from Inman.

"Hopefully, their (real) reward will be what they learned and what they experienced," said Inman, smiling.

Participants include:

Youth group — Matthew Jordan, Brianna Southern, Shanae Roberts, Rashawn Roberts and Dason Alves.

Young adults — Kristen Goding, Rick Castillo, Sharilyn Reynders, Shannon Jones, Dolly Inman and Mayor Douglas Jones.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative Holding Partnership Meetings With Area Businesses

Quincy 2000 Collaborative, Quincy's public/private economic development organization, is holding business partnership meetings for all businesses in the Wollaston, North Quincy, Squantum/Marina Bay and South/West Quincy areas.

Many business and property owners have endorsed the initiative by Quincy 2000 to establish an affiliate organization within each of these business areas, said Executive Director Dean Rizzo. The role of these affiliate organizations will be to establish programs and initiatives designed to strengthen the economic viability and vitality of each business area, and the businesses that reside within them.

The focus of the next scheduled meetings is to formalize the organization structure for the newly established business partnerships, and begin identifying the partnership's goals and objectives, Rizzo said.

The West/South Quincy meeting will be held today (Thursday) from 8 to 9 a.m. at the Common Market Restaurant, 97 Willard St. The Squantum/Marina Bay meeting will be Thursday, March 4 from 8 to 9 a.m. at the Marina Bay Skilled Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, 2 Seaport Dr. The Wollaston meeting will be held Friday, March 5 from 8 to 9 a.m. at the Wollaston Public Library, 41 Beale St.

The North Quincy meeting will be Tuesday, March 9 from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, 29 Hancock St. Those wishing to attend are asked to call 617-984-5717, ext. 2.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative will provide administrative support to maintain the partnership, and assist in the implementation of the goals and objectives the local businesses establish to strengthen and enhance their business environment.

Quincy 2000 encourages all business owners, employees and interested individuals to attend the meeting to learn how easy it is to participate in the growth and prosperity of your business district.

For more information contact Quincy 2000 Collaborative at 617-847-1454.

Illegal Rooming Houses Not Widespread, Committee Told

Illegal rooming houses are not a widespread problem in Quincy, the oversight committee was told by city officials Monday night.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, responding to a number of complaints from residents, placed the item on the agenda as a means of determining the scope of the city's authority in policing alleged violators and the enforcement of the city's zoning codes.

Gutro, chairman of the committee, invited many city officials to speak on the issue, including acting Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, Police Chief William Falco and City Solicitor Monica Conyngham.

Gutro pressed city officials on the issue, saying it is important for city departments to coordinate their efforts in dealing with complaints.

Gutro asked Falco whether the issue of illegal rooming houses was widespread or isolated.

Falco responded by saying, "Without any evidence, I don't think it's a major problem for the city."

According to Duca, the city has found six illegal rooming houses over the course of the last year. Four are being litigated in court and two others are being addressed by the owners, he said.

Gutro asked city officials whether they work together in responding to complaints.

Duca said the city departments work hand-in-hand trying to respond to safety and health code violations. In many instances, the department discovers illegal basement apartments, he said.

"It's an unwritten policy but we work together on this issue," said Duca.

City officials agreed that discovering an illegal rooming house is difficult because violations are usually found inside a residence. In most cases, officials can gain access to a residence only with the consent of the owner or if there is a crime in progress. Police can sometimes obtain a search warrant if there is probable cause, said Falco.

"The main problem is gaining access to the property," Falco told the committee. "The laws are very protective of the private residents. A vast majority of the complaints we receive are not real complaints."

Falco said there are telltale signs of possible rooming house violations, including multiple doorbells or mailboxes at single family residences. In addition, separate locks on bedroom doors may indicate a problem also, he said.

Gutro raised the issue last Fall after receiving numerous complaints from constituents alleging zoning and rooming house violations.

Gutro and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin suggested that the mayor put together a coalition of city officials and interested parties to address the issue.

Councillor John Keenan said he was satisfied with the city's response to complaints but said there is room for improvement.

Closing Of Three Catholic Parishes Not Certain

porated into Blessed Sacred Parish.

"Third, Saint John's Parish be closed, and its boundaries be redrawn into three portions which would be attached to Saint Joseph, Saint Mary and Saint Ann parishes in an equitable manner.

"The reasons to close St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish:

"1. One parish can accommodate the Catholic community.

"2. Blessed Sacrament Parish has the better ancillary buildings – church, larger parking better.

"There is a concern that a Catholic presence to the poor of Germantown remains.

"The reasons to close Saint John's Parish:

"1. It needs the most repairs.

"2. Saint Mary, Saint Joseph and Saint Ann are able to absorb the parishioners of Saint John Parish."

Factors being considered in the closing of parishes include the average attendance at weekly Mass and the number of sacraments administered in each parish, as well as other criteria.

The pastoral statistics released by the Archdiocese Office of Planning and Research in January are for the year 2003.

Star of the Sea parish had the smallest average weekly Mass attendance of 398 among the Quincy parishes.

St. Elizabeth Ann Seton's attendance figure was listed as not available.

St. John's attendance was fourth with an average of 1,084. St. John's attendance was more than St. Mary's parish in West Quincy which averaged 930 in Mass attendance.

St. Ann's in Wollaston had the largest average weekly attendance at Mass for 1,244.

St. Joseph's in Quincy Point was second in attendance with 1,196. Sacred Heart in North Quincy was third with 1,182.

St. Ann's, St. Joseph's, Sacred Heart and St. Mary's have school which are also a factor in the reconfiguration.

St. John's is, perhaps, the largest parish with 2,896 registered families. And is centrally located.

If it were to be closed, it could have an adverse effect on a number of needy people benefiting from use of the closed St. John's school.

The Women's Shelter, affiliated with Fr. Bill's Place, offers shelter to 30 to 40 homeless women.

The St. Vincent De Paul Society food pantry is located there. Friends of the Unborn are in a church-owned house on Gay St.

St. John's also has the highest sacramental numbers in the city with 82 baptisms, 32 weddings and 191 funerals.

The pastoral statistics of the eight Quincy parishes for the year 2003 appeared in chart form in the Feb. 12 issue and appears again in this issue for further examination.

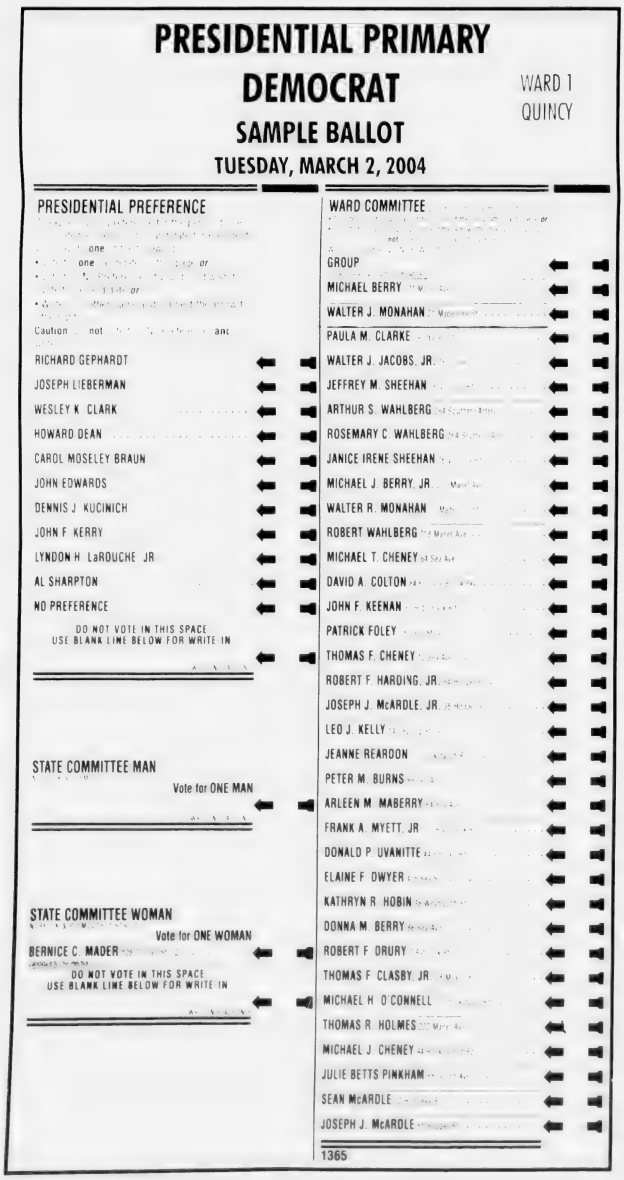
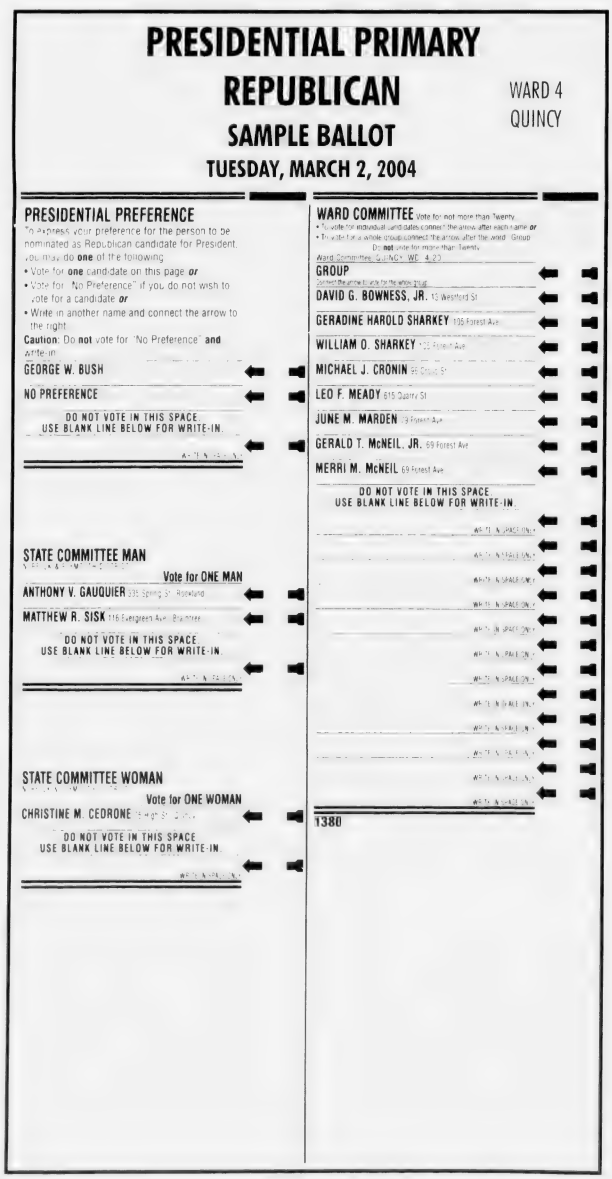
Committee Meeting Dedicated In Jane Reikard's Memory



Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi dedicated Monday night's oversight committee meeting to the memory of Jane Reikard, Quincy's Rent Grievance Officer for nearly three decades, who died Feb. 20 at the age of 81.



"She was a lifelong advocate for the less fortunate and those who sought affordable housing," said Raymondi. "She was a remarkable woman who dedicated her entire life to public service. Jane provided a service to hundreds, if not thousands, of people. She will be sorely missed."

Marie LoCicero On Massasoit Dean's List

Marie R. LoCicero of Station St., West Quincy, is on the Dean's List for the Fall semester at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

She earned a degree in Travel and Tourism from the college in 2002. Her major this year is business administration, hotel and restaurant management.

Light Vote Seen For Presidential Primaries

cent to 34.56 percent. The vote: 5,925 to 3,518.

Also on next Tuesday's Democrat and Republican ballots are elections for state committeeman, state committee woman and ward committees.

Quincy's Bernice C. Mader, aide to former Mayor James Sheets, seeks re-election as Democratic state committee woman in the Norfolk and Plymouth District. She is unopposed.

There is no candidate on the ballot for Democratic state committeeman.

Christine M. Cedrone, former Quincy school committee vice chairman, is the only candidate on the Republican ballot for state committee woman.

There are two candidates for Republican state committeeman: Anthony V. Gauquier of Rockland and Matthew R. Sisk of Braintree.

Up to 35 Democrat and Republican candidates are to be elected ward committee members in each of the city's six wards.

There are full Democrat slates in all six wards and partial Republican in Wards 4, 5, 6. There are no Republican ward candidates in Wards 1, 2, 3.

Michael Carr Stars In Macbeth Performance

Michael Carr of Quincy, a senior member of the Boston College High School's Dramatics Society, gave an outstanding performance in a special one-hour version of Macbeth to an enthusiastic crowd of over 200 middle school Shakespeare students recently at Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Medford.

Carr and the other five actors presented the complete story of Macbeth, told by six actors playing multiple parts, filling in the missing roles and action with narration, improvised in Shakespearean cadences.

Carr, as Macbeth, gave a most compelling and emotionally exhausting performance.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 80 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

Board Continues Hearing On Noise Complaints At North Quincy Firms

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday continued a hearing regarding complaints from area residents against Interstate Distributors, 199 Cmdr. Shea Blvd.

Residents of Louisburg Square complained of loud noises early as 2 and 3 a.m., including the idling of trucks, beeping from backing up, bright lights flashing, and gunning motors in the cold weather.

Residents said they were "looking for some relief" and said the noise in the middle of the night "affected their life style and raised health issues."

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner told the board that she first heard of the complaints from Susan Wade, property manager at Louisburg Square. Gardner said it was an "ongoing problem" with most of the complaints centered on trucks idling.

She noted that a law states that a vehicle can only idle for five minutes and after that it then becomes an environmental issue.

She said although Louisburg Square does not have a past history of complaints, she called it a "mixed use area" and said "residents all want to live peacefully here."

Peter Eeeley, counsel for Interstate Distributors said this is the first time that residents of Louisburg Square have complained

He said the company largely distributes most all magazines and that it is trying to figure out and identify the complaints. He said something can be done and suggested a neighborhood meeting.

He told the board that he will schedule a neighborhood meeting with license board members, Wade and Gardner sometime in March and then report to the board at the March 24 meeting.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he had "volumes of paper work" dating back to 1991 in his office, but at that time, residents from the Sea Wind site had complaints.

He said he also had complaints in 1993 about the noise issues and called it a "big problem and very pervasive."

Shea said he also has night pictures taken in 1999 depicting the bright lights.

Police Chief William Falco referred to a court decision made some 10 years ago regarding complaints with no follow up decision. He said he strongly suggests that some agreement be reached at the court.

Flynn & Co. Sells Strip Plaza In Plympton At Public Auction

DANIEL J. FLYNN & Co., Inc. of Quincy recently sold a multi-tenant strip plaza in Plymptom at public auction. The 18.5-acre lot which contains a three-unit, 2,750 square-foot retail building and a separate 936 square-foot building that houses the town post office, sold for $425,000.

Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., a Quincy based full service real estate firm, announces it recently sold a multi-tenant strip plaza in Plympton at a public auction.

A snow-covered crowd huddled under the long porch overhang at 286 Main St., Route 58. A mix of real estate investors, brokers, local business owners and abutters braved the slick roads to take their shot at owning the property.

Bidding started out at $100,000, but quickly rose to over $400,000 as parties competed for the top bid.

Competitive bidding drove the final sale price to $425,000.

"The final price at auction is perhaps the truest test of the real estate's fair market value," said Daniel Flynn, auctioneer and Flynn & Co. CEO. "Auctions create a sense of urgency among potential buyers because the subject property will only be available for sale at the specified date and time."

The Plympton sale represented a real estate trend of property owners choosing to sell their property at auction, rather than a more conventional sales approach. The auction process can be a quicker means of selling real estate, potentially reducing the seller's overall costs.

"By selling at auction, property owners can forego an often lengthy marketing period traditionally associated with selling real estate. Rather than attracting potential buyers one at a time over a period of months, an auction brings all your buyers together on a pre-determined date and provides a forum for the highest bid to rise to the top in a matter of minutes," Flynn said.

In addition to a streamlined marketing process, public auction sales generally contain no contingencies that can slow or even derail a closing.

"We expect to see an increase in private real estate sales at auction this spring," Flynn said. "The usual influx of property on the market, combined with an expected increase in interest rates, may cause a market saturation. These conditions may force sellers to take creative measures, like auction sales, in order to draw attention to their property.

"Auctions are a natural draw. People love an auction," Flynn added.

Now here's a tip! by Jo Ann Dorson

• I got tired of always looking for the dustpan, so I put a magnet on the back of it. It sticks right on the side of the fridge, right next to the broom." — Larry M. in Lexington, Ky.

• Towels will lose absorbency over time when washed with fabric softener. Skip the softener or run them through a cycle with a cup or two of vinegar to bring back the fluff.

• "This is a great tip that I got from my friend up north, and I just had to share it right away. When you change the clothes in your closet by season, put them all in with the hangers facing the opposite direction — with the open end facing out, not toward the wall. Then, as you wear the clothes, turn them around as normal. At the end of the season, you can see what clothes you never wore and then decide if you want to keep them or not. It even works down here in Florida, where we really don't have a lot of 'seasons.'" — Frances D. in Jacksonville, Fla.

• "I have a lot of photos, and there are really too many to put all of them in albums. I took the best and put them in display albums, and the rest were sorted and put into photo boxes. This way, I can feel free to take a few from the photo boxes to send to friends, and the kids can use them for art projects or whatever. I know I have the best pictures preserved in an album." — Alicia L. in Billings, Mont.

Tips For Successful Bathroom Remodeling

(NU) Today's bathroom should be a place to relax after a long day, put on your face for the day and take care of a multitude of grooming and hygiene needs.

Considering how much time you spend in this room, it's important to give careful thoughts to how you use this room.

Many homeowners find that planning a new home or improving even a single room can be a bit daunting. But, it is manageable and well worth it — if you do your homework and follow these bath design tips.

Measure the bathroom: The first step to a beautiful, functional bathroom begins with carefully measuring the overall dimensions of your space and marking them on a scale drawing.

Decide on the design: What constitutes great design? It's more than making rooms look fabulous or translating someone's idea of style. Good design enhances the quality of your life. It uses a range of design details to please your sense of touch and space while maintaining functionality in the rooms.

Available at The Home Depot, one popular English country design option is the Leighton ensemble from Kohler Co., which delivers the traditional styling that most homeowners prefer.

Consider ergonomics: The Leighton ensemble was designed with ergonomics in mind. The Leighton toilet is the height of an average sitting chair, making it easier to stand up from the seat. Plus, the coordinating pedestal sink is the height of standard kitchen counters so the user doesn't have to bend over as much to use the sink.

Look for hidden storage: If you are looking for storage opportunities, the coordinating Leighton mirrored cabinet provides hidden storage for smaller bath and powder room spaces.

Neighborhood Housing Money Skills Classes

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, a national leader in first-time homebuyer resources and education, will sponsor a "Financial Fitness Club."

KIWANIS HOCKEY

The Quincy Bantam team delivered a strong performance in last week's 31st annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament at Quincy Youth Arena.

The Bantams — the only Quincy squad to reach a final game — battled California Sunday morning for the championship but came up short with a tough 1-0 loss.

In the other three divisions, Braintree pitched a 4-0 shutout against Woburn for the Pee Wee title, Milton edged Norwood, 3-2, for the Squirt trophy and Franklin topped the New Jersey Colonials, 3-2, for the Mite crown.

The "A" tournament, considered one of the most prestigious youth hockey events in the Northeast, featured 24 teams.

Teams from California, New Jersey and Maine traveled significant distances to participate, joining the Seahawks, Hingham, Weymouth, Milton, Braintree, Taunton, Brockton, South Boston, Norwood, Walpole, Woburn, Franklin and Cape Cod squads.

Proceeds from the week-long tournament will benefit Quincy Kiwanis youth charities, including needy and underprivileged children in the local area.

Here's a recap of the Quincy teams in all four divisions:

BANTAMS

In the semifinals, Quincy blanked the Seahawks, 5-0, behind the outstanding play of goalie Jeff Giordani and a hat trick by Brian Sullivan.

Sullivan staked Quincy to a 1-0 lead at 3:38 of the first period with John McInnis assisting.

In the second, Sean Dunn netted a goal at 3:05 with an assist from Ken Patey. Sullivan potted an unassisted goal with 2:37 left and recorded the hat trick 47 seconds later with another assist from McInnis for a 4-0 advantage.

Jim Fitzpatrick closed out the scoring in the third period with an assist from Josh McKeon.

Quincy kicked off the tournament with a 4-0 win over Braintree. It blanked Hingham, 6-0, before falling to the Seahawks, 3-2, in its third game.

Against Hingham, McInnis (2 assists), Ted Finnegan (assist), Mike Maxey (assist), Mike Gillespie (assist), Chris Rooney (assist) and Sullivan scored. Mike Leone and Casey Conley had assists.

Against the Seahawks, Sullivan and McInnis scored and Leone had an assist.

Also skating for Quincy were: Kevin Bossart, Chris Brown, Patrick Dunn, Sean Dunn and Joey Vialpando.

PEE WEES

Quincy reached the semifinals where it suffered a heartbreaking 2-1 loss to Woburn, which pocketed a pair of goals in the final 1:30 of the game to pull out the improbable win.

Justin Lawless handed Quincy a 1-0 lead just 34 seconds into the contest with Matt Bridgeman and Kevin Keith picking up assists.

In the third, Woburn's Jared Dabrieo netted the equalizer with 1:30 left and Kevin Gately potted the game-winner with just three seconds remaining with Lucas Layman assisting.

Quincy opened the tourney with a 6-3 win over Brockton, followed by a 3-3 stalemate with Woburn and an 8-1 setback to Braintree.

Against Woburn, Keith tallied two goals and an assist and Lawless added the other goal. Bridgeman had a pair of assists and Kevin Chenette and Mark Gilbody had one apiece.

Against Braintree, Seamus McKenna scored the lone goal, unassisted, with only 17 seconds left in the game.

Also skating for Quincy were: Nick Block, Peter Eleey, Michael Kineavy, Kevin Magoon, Andrew McCarthy, Derek Murphy, Trevor Richardson, Thomas Ridge, Matt Rodriguez, Victoria Virtue and Tim Young.

SQUIRTS

Quincy opened the tournament with a 5-4 victory over Milton but dropped its final two games.

Against Milton, Quincy trailed 3-0 in the second period before Nick Scibilio scored at 5:01 with Danny Gibbons assisting.

Milton, though, answered 17 seconds later for a 4-1 advantage. Quincy made it 4-2 several minutes later when Christian Durham scored with an assist from Scibilio.

In the third, Sean Grady struck for an unassisted goal just 15 seconds into the period. With two minutes remaining, Brendan Glynn tallied the equalizer with an assist from Danny Higgins.

And Derek Mathies net-

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

6 Things Women Should Know About Their Health

(NU) American women lead extremely stressful lives today, trying to balance their professional, social and private lives while maintaining good health. Women's health and well-being are part of a complex balance of physical and emotional dynamics.

Staying healthy is more than taking a trip to the doctor. It's about paying attention to one's body to know what is normal and what could be a sign of an infection or other health concern.

No matter how well you take care of your body with proper nutrition and regular exercise, it may still be difficult to consistently maintain good gynecological health. That's why every woman should learn to listen to her body's signals.

According to the experts at Vagisil, a maker of feminine care products, here are six things every woman should know:

• Visits to the gynecologist should start between the ages of 13 and 15. That way, young women can be educated about their bodies early on.

• Make an appointment to have an annual pelvic exam to make sure you are healthy and free of infection, and a pap smear, which can detect cancer of the cervix.

• Educate yourself on the different symptoms and causes of vaginal infection. The more informed you are, the more steps you can take to maintain good health.

• Avoid undergarments made from nylon, polyester or other synthetic fibers that don't breathe. Cotton is best.

• Practice good hygiene by showering daily and using gentle products, such as those from Vagisil, which now contain a special odor-blocking technology.

• Use feminine powders made from pure cornstarch, such as Vagisil Deodorant Powder. Cornstarch absorbs moisture more effectively than talc. Also, powders containing baking soda effectively absorb odor. Sprinkle inside panties or on pantyliners to feel fresh all day. Cornstarch and baking soda powders are safe and also are great to use all over the body.

Ski-Specific Training

Q. I exercise with a cardiovascular and weight program three times a week. Would I need to change my current workout to prepare for an upcoming ski trip? If so, what type of exercises should I add to my workouts? — *R.A., Hartford, Conn.

A. While a comprehensive exercise program can develop a beneficial cardiovascular and strength base, it does not incorporate all of the necessary components needed for skiers. Ski-specific exercises focusing on endurance, strength, motor skills and balance will prepare you for the slopes.

However, without reinventing the wheel, you can use your current exercise program as a template for an effective ski-specific exercise routine. By adding exercises that improve the skills needed for skiing, you can turn your existing exercise program into a ski-specific program. Here are some ideas:

• Developing strong and stable core musculature (abdominal and back muscles) is essential for balance, staying in control of your body and maintaining the solid base your body needs while skiing. Strengthen these areas with exercises such as stability ball crunches and back extensions.

• The demand on your legs while skiing requires strong muscles, stable joints and endurance. Exercises such as squats and lunges can improve leg strength. In addition to the traditional forms of these exercises, try doing complete squats and lunges in different directions. For example, plie squats focus on inner thighs and glutes by turning your feet out, and lateral lunges move you from side to side instead of front and back.

• Try exercises that mimic skiing by supporting your body weight in a low squat position. Wall sits against a wall or stability ball can prepare your legs for remaining in one position for long periods of time.

• Use light plyometric (jumping) exercises to develop muscle power. Hop front to back and side to side while concentrating on controlled landings and body awareness.

You should begin preparing for your trip at least a month in advance in order to give your body adequate time to respond to the new exercises.

As always, consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters@kingfeatures.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

3 Tips For Limiting Trans Fat In Your Diet

(NU) — We all know that fat makes foods taste good and help you feel full. A healthy body needs fat. Fat helps insulate your body, protect your organs and is essential for normal cell development.

However, if you eat too much fat, you may increase your risk of obesity, diabetes, heart disease and various forms of cancer. What's more, now we're being told that there are a wide array of fats — some good, some bad and some really bad.

The most recent heart-healthy advice was simple — eat a diet that is moderate in fat and in low in (unhealthy) saturated fats. Then researchers confirmed that trans fats could be just as harmful as the saturated fats. So, where do we go next?

Understanding what trans fats are is only half the battle. How to limit trans fats in your diet is the second half.

Although trans fats are naturally present in some meat and dairy products, most are formed when vegetable oils are chemically modified, making the oil more solid through a process known as "partial hydrogenation." This process of partial hydrogenation is used to make frying oils (such as those used to prepare french fries) last longer; to make bakery foods, such as cakes, cookies and pies, more shelf-stable; and to provide the desired hardness for shortening and some margarines.

In July 2003 the Food and Drug Administration ruled that food manufacturers will be required to list the amount of trans fats contained in each product on the nutrition label by 2006. Trans fats will be listed on a separate line, under the amount of saturated fats.

Some food companies have already begun to help consumers identify products that contain no trans fat. For instance, I Can't Believe It's Not Butter! spreads has identified its soft products that contain zero grams trans fat per serving with a "No Trans Fat" symbol present on the packaging. So, when you are in the grocery store, make sure to look for this symbol and you'll be on your way to limiting the trans fats in your diet.

To limit the amount of trans fats in your diet, follow these three simple rules:

• Choose soft margarine or spreads that display the "No Trans Fat" symbol, like those from I Can't Believe It's Not Butter!

• Avoid fatty meats and deep-fried foods.

• If consuming commercial bakery goods such as cookies, crackers and cakes, choose lower total fat options. The lower the fat, the lower the trans fats.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DOING THE WHITE THING

While nearly everyone is familiar with the silver colored fillings known as amalgams, there is also another category of tooth-colored fillings known as composite resin dental fillings. Made of plastic dental resin, composites were once used only on front teeth due to their insufficient load strength. Since then, however, the strength and durability of composites has been improved to the point where they are suitable for restorations in the back teeth. In addition, composites may be used to improve the aesthetic appearance of the teeth in terms of both shape and color. Composites have the advantage of closely matching the shade/color of natural teeth. The material also bonds with the tooth structure to support teeth and insulate them from temperature change.

Take advantage of the advanced resin fillings so that you can have a beautiful white smile. Our full line of dental services includes crowns, bridges, dentures, and cosmetic dentistry. For more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. For gentle, caring dentistry for the entire family, come see us at 44 Greenleaf Street. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Composite resin dental fillings require one visit for placement and can cost $100-$200 or more.

Jane Reikard, 81

Quincy's Rent Grievance Officer

Funeral services were held Wednesday for Jane Reikard who as Quincy's Rent Grievance Officer for nearly three decades was known and respected for her fairness to both tenants and landlords.

Mrs. Reikard, a longtime resident of Quincy and still working at her job, died Feb. 20 unexpectedly at her Quincy home. She was 81.

The funeral services were held at the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy Center. Burial was in the VA National Cemetery in Bourne beside her late husband, Lloyd Reikard.

Mrs. Reikard for 28 years assisted Quincy tenants and landlords in resolving disputes. Both sides found her to be fair and respected her.

Mayor William Phelan, who ordered the flag at City Hall lowered to half-staff in her honor, had this tribute:

"Mrs. Reikard was knowledgeable, approachable and fair. She represented the city for almost 30 years and she will be missed by all of us who had the opportunity to work with her."

Former Mayor Joseph LaRaia, who first appointed Mrs. Reikard in 1976, said: "She was very committed to her duties as a representative of tenants and she really applied herself to the many complex issues that exist between tenants and landlords. She was really happy and content in that type of work."

City Council President Frank McCauley, a former mayor, said, "She was perfect for the job. A renter could sit down with her and be heard. She was an excellent advocate and worked hard."

"Both landlords and tenants came in on a daily basis to talk to Jane," said Thomas Fabrizio, Director of the Office of Constituent Services.

"Her knowledge of housing laws was comprehensive. She was compassionate and warm with everyone she encountered. She truly loved her job and was passionate about the rights of everyone to be treated fairly.

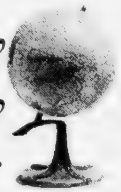
"Charged with explaining housing laws to both landlords and tenants, her job entailed mediating disputes between the two groups and she was highly successful in this often difficult work."

Nancy McDonald, of the City's Commission on Disabilities, recalled Mrs. Reikard's dedication and desire to be helpful.

"I turned to Jane many times as a wonderful resource to help disabled people find a place to live. Whenever I came to the Constituent Services Office, Jane would meet me at the door, smiling and happy to serve. It was great to know that she was on deck."

Mrs. Reikard is survived by a son, Barry Reikard of Lexington, Ky.; two grandchildren, Dennis Reikard of South Boston and Lisa Ann Pinto of Attleboro; two great-grandchildren, Sarah Ann Pinto and Sean Scott Pinto; a brother, Melvin Heckman and his wife, Jean, of Wolfdenboro, N.H.; and a sister, Bernadine Boulanger of Warren, R.I.

She was the sister of the late Forrest Heckman, Jr.



Memorials may be sent to the American Diabetes Association, 330 Congress St., South Boston, MA 02210.

Remove Christmas Cemetery Decorations

The Cemetery Board of Managers requests the removal of Christmas decorations from the city's cemeteries by March 15.

Chairman Richard Sweeney, Jr. said decorations, wreaths and any other items which could interfere with the maintenance of the cemeteries should be removed from all lots by that date.

Grandma loved classic poetry, traveling, and Grandpa.

Your memories are precious. That's why, at Keohane Funeral Service, we take the time to find out what made your loved one special. Whether it's reciting classic poetry or compiling a memory board of her favorite travel photos, you can count on us to help you plan a service that will be just as unique as the person you love.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

All of us want our cars to run smoothly and efficiently so we take time to have them checked to make sure that all mechanical aids are in running order... Let's think about another important check-up to be made. How's your driving mental attitude? Can't you go over that and tighten it up a little? Fill it with courtesy. For in that word... Courtesy... can be found the key to most of our driving ills.

Courtesy often is nothing more than a highly developed sense of fair play . . . A friend told me once of driving along a narrow, unpaved mountain road. Ahead was another car that produced clouds of choking dust and it was a long way to the nearest paved highway. Suddenly, at a wide place, the car ahead pulled off the road. My friend, thinking there might be engine trouble, stopped and asked if anything was wrong. "No," said the other driver, "But you've endured my dust this far; I'll put up with yours the rest of the way." There was a man of good manners, a man with an innate sense of fair play.

Perhaps if all motorists were more courteous, possessed of the same degree of consideration as this driver, we would witness an automotive death rate far lower than ever imagined!

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

DEPENDENCIES AND TERRITORIES

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try to say as little as possible about the work you're doing through the end of the month. Then you can make your announcement and accept your well-deserved plaudits.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You face a more difficult challenge than you expected. But with that strong Taurean determination, you should be able to deal with it successfully by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Before you act on your "feelings" about that upcoming decision, it might be wise to do a little fact-checking first. You could be very much surprised by what you don't find.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A recent workplace success can open some doors that were previously closed to you. On a personal level, expect to receive some important news from a long-time friend and colleague.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put your wounded pride aside and do what you must to heal that misunderstanding before it takes a potentially irreversible turn and leaves you regretting the loss of a good friend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to kick a less-than-active social life into high gear or rebuild an outdated Rolodex file is to throw one of your well-organized get-togethers for friends and associates.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting out of an obligation you didn't really want to take on can be tricky. An honest explanation of the circumstances can help. Next time, pay more attention to your usually keen instincts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use your Scorpion logic to push for a no-nonsense approach to a perplexing situation. This could help keep present and potential problems from creating more confusion.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend's problem might take more time than you want to give. But staying with it once again proves the depth of your Sagittarian friendship and loyalty.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat can benefit from an extra dose of self-confidence to unsettle your detractors, giving you the advantage of putting on a strong presentation of your position.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to ask a friend or relative for advice on an ongoing personal matter. But be careful not to give away information you might later wish you had kept secret.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the weekend for a creativity break to help restore your spiritual energy. Once that's done, you'll be back and more than ready to tackle whatever challenge you need to face.

BORN THIS WEEK: You get great joy out of creating beautiful things and sharing them with others who appreciate them.

THE TRIAL COURT
PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
NORFOLK Division
Docket No. 00P2947AD
Notice Of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of Arthur J Salvucci, late of Quincy, Norfolk County.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the first and final account(s) of James F. Reynolds, Jr. as Administrator (the fiduciary) of said estate have been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the eighteenth day of March, 2004 the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, David H Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at CANTON, this eleventh day of February, 2004.

William C. Harding, 74

Retired Union Pipe Fitter, Korean War Veteran

A Masonic service for William C. Harding, 74, of Bradenton, Fla., a Quincy native, a retired union pipe fitter, was held Sunday at the Griffith-Cline Funeral Home, Manasota Chapel, Bradenton.

He died Feb. 18 at Blake Medical Center, Bradenton.

Mr. Harding was an Air Force veteran of the Korean War.

He lived in North Conway, N.H., before moving to Florida six years ago.

He was a member of the Manatee Shrine Club Sahib Shrine Temple in Sarasota.

He was a former member of the Wollaston Masonic Lodge of Masons and the Disabled American Veterans of Massachusetts. He was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Albany, N.H.

He is survived by his wife, Alice L. Harding; two sons, Dean A. Harding of Kingston and William C. Harding of Hanson; a sister, Elizabeth Alvarado of Quincy; a brother, Warren G. Harding of Pensacola, Fla.; and four grandchildren.

Burial and a memorial service will be in the spring at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Donations may be made to the Shriners Hospital, c/o Sahib Shrine Center, 600 N. Beneva Road, Sarasota, FL 34232.

Patrick D. Harrison, 96

Fore River Shipyard Worker

A funeral Mass for Patrick D. Harrison, 96, of Burlington, formerly of Quincy, a Fore River shipyard worker, was celebrated Feb. 21 at St. Margaret's Church.

He died Feb. 18 at the Winchester Nursing Center after a long illness.

Mr. Harrison worked at the Fore River shipyard for 20 years. He also worked as an upholsterer, from home furniture to commercial accounts like Paragon Amusement Park. He worked until he was 89.

Born in Athlone, County Roscommon, Ireland, he was raised and educated in Ireland. He moved to the United States at age 17 and eventually settled in Quincy. He lived in Burlington for 32 years.

He is survived a daughter, Mary P. Lane of Burlington; a brother, Matt Harrison of New York, N.Y.; a sister, Mary Yunker of Rahway, N.J.; three grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Funeral arrangements were by Edward V. Sullivan Funeral Home, Burlington.

Helen A. Burke, 77

A funeral Mass for Helen A. Burke, 77, of Quincy, a retired supervisor for New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., was celebrated Tuesday at St. Ann's Church.

She died Feb. 20 at Milton Hospital after a long illness.

Miss Burke was a supervisor at the telephone company for more than 20 years and previously was a switchboard keeper for Nature Food Centers for more than 25 years.

She was a member of the Telephone Pioneers and the Sixty Plus Club at St. Gregory Church in Dorchester.

Born in Boston, she lived in Dorchester for many years before recently moving to Quincy.

She is survived a sister, Margaret T. Crawford of Norwood; a brother, William T. Burke of Braintree; eight nephews and nieces and 12 grandnieces and grandnephews.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by Dolan Funeral Home, Milton.

Charlotte Brenner, 82

A funeral service for Charlotte B. (Sherman) Brenner, 82, of Quincy, a secretary, was held Feb. 8 at Independent Pride of Boston Cemetery, Woburn.

She died Jan. 31 at Quincy Medical Center.

Mrs. Brenner worked for the American Jewish Congress in Boston for 45 years.

She was past president of Dorchester Jewish War Veterans Post 630 Auxiliary.

She was born in Boston and lived in Quincy.

Wife of the late Kenneth Brenner, she is survived by one daughter, Bernie Antleman of Clarksville, Md.; two grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Donations may be made to the American Jewish Congress in Boston.

60 Residents Protest Tax Increases At QTA Rally

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Threatening weather could not deter approximately 60 residents from demonstrating against higher taxes at a City Hall rally Saturday.

Sponsored by the Quincy Taxpayers' Association (QTA), the protest was designed to bring attention to residents' plight as they grapple with steep increases in property taxes and the need for elected officials to rein in spending. QTA has seen its membership double after residents were hit with 18 percent hikes in their third quarter tax bills.

QTA President Alan Cousin said the group will hold a similar rally this Saturday at noon, because the threat of inclement weather discouraged some residents from coming out.

"We are going to give them the ol' one-two," said Cousin. "I was pleasantly surprised by the showing Saturday, and we hope for more people this week."

In January, homeowners began seeing sharp hikes in their third quarter tax bills after the city council set the tax classification at 175 percent. Even though the council increased the tax classification, the average tax bill increased by $550 over last year.

Mayor William Phelan recently rejected the city council's attempt to shift even more of the tax burden onto businesses and away from homeowners. The move would have knocked off approximately $225 in this year's bill for the average homeowner, but Phelan said the policy's long-term impact would have been hurtful to taxpayers.

At Saturday's rally, residents held signs that read, "Don't Tax Me Out of My Home," "Taxpayers First," and "Stop Tax Inflation Now."

The rally began with a Pledge of Allegiance, and the residents later sang "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and "America the Beautiful."

Cousin said residents could expect more of the same at this week's rally.

Quincy resident Charles Dennehey attended the rally to protest what he called out-of-control spending and excessive tax increases.

"People are totally fed up with these tax increases," said Dennehey, a homeowner on Willard St. "Phelan is spending money like crazy and he's taxing us to make up for it.

"The city council is responsible, too. They barely cut anything from Phelan's budget. Since this mayor has taken office, spending has gone crazy," said Dennehey.

Roy Johnson, homeowner on Harrison St., echoed those sentiments, saying his property tax bills have gone up 55 percent during the last three years.

"I'm upset," he said. "I am paying $1,300 more a year compared to three years ago. I'm hoping for a big turnout Saturday, otherwise if my taxes go up again I'm heading to Florida. I've had it."

In a show of support, Joseph LaRaia, former mayor, city councillor and member of the board of assessors, said he expects to attend this week's rally.

HONORED — Jonathon Simons, executive director of Community Development at the South Shore YMCA, recently received a United Way Pillar Award for his work in helping United Way donors understand the systemic change their gifts achieve in the community. Making the presentation was Marian L. Heard, president of CEO of United Way of Massachusetts Bay. Also honored with the award were Sherri Sore of Quincy-based Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts and Bill McCarriston of Community Work Services.

Quincy voters were in political step as Massachusetts and other key states gave Senator John F. Kerry convincing Super Tuesday victories virtually guaranteeing him the Democratic presidential nomination.

So convincing was Kerry's performance that the last major opponent standing in his way – North Carolina Senator John Edwards – stepped aside and dropped out of contention early Tuesday night.

Kerry breezed by Edwards in Quincy, with 70.27 percent of the Democratic votes to Edwards' 20.92 percent. Kerry's vote was [illegible] votes.

President George W. Bush, the only presidential candidate on the Republican ballot, had an 85.44 percent vote with 179 people voting "no preference."

Only 19.85 percent or 10,587 of Quincy's 53,392 registered voters cast ballots. Of those, 9,565 voted in the Democratic primary and 994 in the Republican.

Homeowners Protest Tax Jump At City Hall Rally

By COURTNEY PAQUETTE

Dennis Morton works three jobs.

He's a property manager for a company in Roxbury, a notary and does taxes on the side. According to Morton, his property taxes rose 50 percent in the past two years, from $300 to $600 and now to $900.

"Thank you Mr. Phelan," said Morton. "Maybe I'll need a fourth job."

Morton has lived in Quincy his entire life, 30 years on Vassall St., 10 years with his family on Quincy Ave. and now four years on Gannett Rd. The property taxes, he said, are driving him out of the city.

Morton is characteristic of the more than 100 people who stormed McIntyre Mall Saturday afternoon to protest the 18 percent property tax rate increase that went into effect Jan. 1. This was the second rally organized by the Quincy Taxpayers Association. Like the one Feb. 21, it drew many longtime Quincy residents seeking relief from tax bills that rose an average of $550 this year.

Alan Cousin and Robert Haley, president and vice president of the Taxpayers Association, said they held the rallies to stop double-digit tax increases, which they said were born of irresponsible spending and lack of other revenue sources.

"We're looking for the mayor and the city council to do a better job of making sure the budget is as tight as it can possibly be," said Cousin.

Protesters clutched homemade signs that read "Can I live in Quincy?" and "Don't tax me out of my home." One young protester, no bigger than the sign he struggled to hold above his head, stood at the front of the crowd with it, which asked "What will my taxes be."

Cousin led the crowd in anti-tax chants, such as "We're mad as heck and we're not gonna take it anymore," and "Show us the money." Many drivers honked their horns to express their support as they cruised by.

John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, led the crowd in "My Country 'Tis of Thee," "America the Beautiful," and "We Shall Overcome."

Remarks at the rally focused on cutting spending, finding other sources of revenue and making the city council, the mayor and the assessor's office more accountable to taxpayers.

Haley said the Taxpayers Association has made suggestions to city officials of ways to rein in spending and find other sources of revenue.

Petition Drive To Keep Engine 4

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

More than 400 Wollaston residents and concerned citizens have signed petitions asking the city to preserve the firefighting services of the Wollaston Fire Station and Engine 4 in particular.

Petitions are circulating in three residential complexes – Wollaston Manor on 99 Clay St., the Fenno House on Hancock St. and Edgewaters at 500 Clay St. In addition, residents are gathering signatures at local businesses.

Concerned residents have collected more than 400 signatures in less than a week.

Neighborhood Advisory Board To Address Concerns At Sailors Pond

A neighborhood advisory board has been re-formed to address concerns regarding environmental and aesthetics issues at Sailors Home Pond, located in the Beechwood Knoll section of Wollaston.

Re-convened by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, the Sailors Home Pond Neighborhood Advisory Board will identify problems with the pond, analyze options for addressing those issues, and recommend solutions. Ultimately, the board wants to improve the health and aesthetics of the pond.

Gutro said Sailors Pond is one of only a few natural areas in the city that attracts small animals and birds, such as turtles, frogs and egrets.

"Just as easily as a pond can make a neighborhood attractive to live in, it could be a liability if you don't take care of it," said Gutro. "This committee is designed to harness the enthusiasm of the neighbors who value what this pond means to this neighborhood and who want to preserve it for future generations."

The board, comprised of a number of area residents and pond enthusiasts, will study a number of issues, including:

- Whether to repair, replace or remove the fence surrounding the pond;
- Identify sources of pollution into the pond and ways to address pollution;
- Develop a long-term landscaping and maintenance plan for the pond;
- Address non-native plant species that may impact the health of the pond.

The board expects to present a final report and recommendations to the city in September. Gutro said he will present the board's finding and recommendations to the mayor and city officials.

Gutro has appointed John Fagerlund of Ridgeway Ave. as chairman of the committee. Other members include Chuck Phelan, Cathleen Kyle, Patricia Farulla, Stephen Golden, Mary Helen Mahoney, Steve Canty, Bob Mackey, Jean Mackey, Lisa Nolan, Mary Farina, Paul Farina, Peter Johnson, Paul McKeen and Dorsey Dugan. Serving in an advisory capacity will be Jon Twining, former adjunct professor at Eastern Nazarene College; Joe Canavan of the Public Works Department and Nancy Barron, president of the Ward 5 Community Association and teacher at the Beechwood Knoll School where students have taken on a stewardship of the pond.

Anyone interested in serving on the committee may contact Gutro.

Since 2002, aerators have been installed to increase oxygen in the pond. Various cleanup efforts have occurred and water quality sampling has been conducted as well, said Gutro.

$50 Million Project Includes 120 Housing Units

16-Cinema Complex Proposed At NQ T Station

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Quincy developer Mark Dickinson wants to build a 16-screen movie complex and luxury residential building at one of the parking lots at the North Quincy MBTA station.

Dickinson was scheduled to unveil plans and receive feedback from residents on the $50 million project, called "Cinema Station," at a community meeting Tuesday night in North Quincy High School. He was slated to outline the project and community benefits he believes the plan will provide.

Among the benefits are traffic improvements, tax revenue to the city, jobs, mitigation funds and aesthetic enhancements to the area, he said.

"A theatre complex can be part of the fabric of a community," Dickinson told the Sun. "If it is done well it is a community asset. If we fix the infrastructure, it becomes a pleasant place to live and North Quincy becomes more desirable."

The 3,200-stadium seat movie complex would be anchored to a six-story residential structure housing 120 units, he said. Retail shops would be located on the first floor, and an escalator would lead moviegoers up to the cinema level, he said.

Dickinson signed a 99-year lease with the MBTA's real estate division to secure the air rights above the station's Hancock St. parking lot. The project is planned for the northeast edge of the lot.

Initially, he wanted to construct an office complex on the site, but he said the office market dried up, forcing him to revamp his plans to include a residential component.

Dickinson said he has been working with Traffic Engineer Roy Lamotte, Jr. regarding traffic conditions at the intersection of Squantum and Hancock Sts., which are already causing headaches.

Hancock and Squantum Streets would be widened at points to create new turning lanes, and traffic signals would be reconfigured to improve flow.

Dickinson said about 800 parking spaces - one for every four moviegoers - would be needed for the cinema complex. He has been in talks to lease those spaces from the T, which will be adding 500 additional spaces to its parking garage. A separate parking garage for residents would be anchored to the housing units, he said.

Moviegoers would utilize T parking mainly during the nights and weekends so that would not pose a problem for weekday commuters who park there, said Dickinson.

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, who is co-sponsoring Tuesday night's meeting along with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, said constituents are "fearful" of the project and its impact on the community.

"I'm trying to be keep an open mind about this, but many residents are concerned about the project being located next to the T," she said. "Many people are contacting me and saying there is no direct benefit to them. Even if you can alleviate the traffic concerns people are still fearful of people coming in on the T. There are real concerns."

Gardner has scheduled a separate meeting for the business community on March 10 at 7 p.m. in the North Quincy High School auditorium. Residents are welcome to attend, she said.

"CINEMA STATION" – An artist's rendering of a proposed 16-cinema movie complex-residential development at the North Quincy MBTA station parking lot. The $50 million project, called Cinema Station, would need approval by the city council and zoning board of appeals.

The project would need approval from the city council and the zoning board of appeals. The council must sign off on projects that involve T air rights, and the zoning board of appeals would be involved because the eight-story project exceeds the city's height limit by two floors.

Dickinson said he intends to make a Spring presentation to the council. If all goes according to plan, the project would begin in 2005 and be completed by the summer of 2006, he said.

He outlined a number of benefits the project would bring to the city:

- More than $500,000 in annual property taxes, $22,500 in excise tax revenue and more than $500,000 in building permit fees
- Permanent jobs for area residents
- Significant upgrades to the Hancock St./East and West Squantum St. intersection
- Improved site security, including the possibility of locating a Quincy Police substation in the area
- New customers for area businesses
- Hancock St./landscape improvements
- Contributions to Atlantic Neighborhood Association and North Quincy Business Association
- Theatre availability for community use

The Quincy developer has been involved in four other local projects - Home Depot on Willard St., Victory Market in North Quincy, the Willard Building on Furnace Brook Parkway and a 150,000-square foot office building at 200 Newport Ave.

Republicans And Political Hibernation

Will this be the year local Republicans come out of what you might call political hibernation?

They haven't done much in recent years to challenge Democrats for the local state offices.

Two years ago, for example, Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin got a free ride to re-election. No Republican opposition then and hardly any before.

MORRISSEY

AYERS

TOBIN

It isn't easy being a Republican candidate in Quincy these days. Not like the GOP good old days of the 1930s and 1940s when Republicans held every elective office in the city and county.

The only Republican in Quincy municipal elective office today is Frank McCauley, former four-term mayor now city council president.

McCAULEY

City elections are non-partisan but McCauley must feel a little like the Lone Ranger. Democrats hold the mayor's office, the other eight city council seats and the six school committee seats.

There are only 6,505 registered Republican voters in the city, far outnumbered by Democrats (24,463) and unenrolled (21,622).

Four years ago in the Presidential Primaries John McCain, appealing to both unenrolled and Democrats, breezed by George W. Bush with 65.81 percent of the Quincy vote to Bush's 29.86 percent.

And, in the Presidential election that year, Al Gore scored just about the same over Bush with 62.4 percent of the vote to Bush's 30.47 percent.

So even a Republican on his way to the White House couldn't win here.

Local Republican grass roots seemingly could use a little political Turf Builder. They need nourishment.

On Tuesday's Presidential Primary ballots were contests for ward committees but with little action on the Republican ballot.

There were 35 openings each in Wards 1, 2 and 3 — but no candidates.

There were 20 openings each in Wards 4 and 5 but only eight and five candidates, respectively.

And in Ward 6, 35 openings but only four candidates.

That meant there were only 17 Republican candidates for 180 seats.

The Democrats did better although they hit zero in Ward 2. Thirty-five ward committee openings but no candidates (What happened there?)

But they had 35 candidates in Wards 1 and 6, 34 in Wards 4 and 5 and 18 in Ward 3.

That's 156 Democrat candidates for 210 seats.

But maybe there's some movement in the Republican camp for this year's state contests.

John Rodophele of Grenwold Rd. has taken out nomination papers for the Second Norfolk District seat long held by Democrat Steve Tobin.

RODOPHELE

Rodophele, if he files his papers, would go into that race as a decided underdog. He ran for the school committee in last year's city election. And finished eighth in an eight-candidate field in the preliminary runoff.

But give him credit for willing to run with the odds against him.

Now, are there any other Republican challengers out there?

JIM SHEETS is missing.

SHEETS

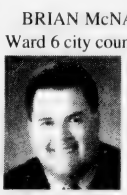
Well, his official photo is.

The photos of Quincy's former mayors have a place of honor in the third floor "Hall of Mayors" outside the mayor's office.

There are 28 former mayors and the photos of 27 are hanging on the wall in order of the years which they served.

They run from Quincy's first mayor, Civil War veteran Charles H. Porter (1889), to the 27th, Frank McCauley who served four terms from 1982-1989.

But the photo of the 28th former mayor — James Sheets — is conspicuously missing.



Sheets, who served six terms, left office Jan. 7, 2002, the day his successor, William Phelan, was sworn in.

And he has never gotten around to having his photo hung.

The mayoral set isn't complete with Sheets' photo. Wonder if he just forgot.

BRIAN McNAMEE, who came close to being the Ward 6 city councillor, has left the campaign scene to serve on the Zoning Board of Appeals.

McNAMEE

McNamee was named by Mayor William Phelan to fill a three-year vacancy on the board.

That is the board Mary Ellen Cronin resigned from in protest over Phelan's decision not to reappoint Walter White as Director of Inspectional Services.

As for his appointment, McNamee says, "I believe it is an important way to serve the city and support the mayor."

McNamee is chief financial officer of the South Essex Sewerage District in Salem, the second largest water authority in the state.

McNamee lost his bid for the Ward 6 council seat to Alicia Gardner by 25 votes in last year's city election. The seat was vacated by Joseph Newton who unsuccessfully challenged Phelan for the mayor's office.

HAVE YOU NOTICED those new red, white and blue street signs in the downtown area? They were a long time coming.

The signs were proposed by Quincy 2000 as part of a downtown master plan in 1995.

The street names in white lettering and the red and blue signs have an appropriate patriotic look in a patriotic area.

And are easy to read.

Atherton Hough Scholarships

The Atherton Hough School Parent Teachers Association announces two scholarships open to graduating seniors from Quincy High School, North Quincy High School, the Center for Technical Education and college students seeking additional support.

The scholarships are the Edward Baccari Scholarship ($100) and the James "Red" Riley Scholarship ($100).

Applicants must have attended Atherton Hough for a minimum of three years.

Please send name, address, telephone number, years attended Atherton Hough and intended college or institution of higher education to the Quincy Education Association, Inc., 590 Hancock St., Quincy MA 02170 no later than May 1, 2004.

Names will be picked by lottery at the QEA Annual Meeting on May 26.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1915 POSTCARD is a view of Park Street in Wollston looking north from Marion Street to the garage in the distance. At this point Park turns right toward Grandview Avenue. In a somewhat out of the way location this has never been a heavily traveled street. Most readers have probably never even heard of it. But it has some of the earliest and grandest homes built on Wollaston Hill in the late 1800s. The small building on the right has been demolished and replaced with a house of more modern style than its neighbors, but knowing that, after almost 90 years this scene is hard to recognize today even by those who live here. ### Thanks Falco, Community Police Officers For Assistance

(The following is a letter to Police Chief William Falco. A copy was submitted to The Sun by the writer for publication.)

Dear Chief Falco,

I would like to thank you for the help and assistance to the Citizen Police Academy Alumni Association by your officers and staff. I would especially like to single out the help of the Community Police Officers. They have been of valuable service to us we continue to promote community relations with the citizens of Quincy.

The Community Police officers have assisted us with over 100 events including neighborhood barbecues, holiday celebrations, senior citizen events and child identification programs. The officers always project a professional attitude to the community that every police department strives for, but few achieve.

I would like to say how proud we are of the Community Police officers and look forward to continue to strengthen our close working relationship with them. The cooperation between the Community Policing Unit and the Association demonstrates how the citizens of Quincy can benefit when we work together.

Parking Scofflaws Should Pay What They Owe

Just my opinion.

After reading all those articles on the parking situation in the city of Quincy, I really must comment. Being a resident of Quincy and a licensed driver, if I get a parking ticket I pay it. As for all those "poor drivers," who seem to be clueless, please, give me a break. I'm surprised they haven't "forgotten" where they've parked their cars.

Instead of wee wee wee, always me, how about if those scofflaws step up to the plate and jay pay what they owe. Because I really believe if they are entitled to having them removed from their record, shouldn't all of us who paid be entitled to a refund?

Kim Trillcott

Supports Same Sex Marriage

My partner, Stephen, and I are residents of the Wollaston section of Quincy. We bought a house together three years ago, wondering how neighbors might feel about a homosexual couple in their neighborhood. To our pleasant surprise, our neighbors were, and have remained, very welcoming.

Stephen and I are both educated professionals. We have been together for more than seven years, longer than many heterosexual couples. Stephen is very active in Quincy environmental issues and Cleaner/Greener Quincy. We both actively keep up the interior and exterior of our home. We pay taxes. We vote. We are proud to be part of the Quincy community.

It is extremely disheartening to see that so many, if not all, of the Quincy legislators are against us. We want equal rights, not separate and unequal. I urge you to contact your legislators and tell them to vote "No" on banning my partner and my right to pursue happiness. America has a history of protecting minorities against the tyranny of the majority.

I am not asking religious groups to accept my union with my partner. I am an ex-Catholic and recognize that the Catholic Church is against us. In fact, just last week I received a packet from the Catholic Church urging me to contact my legislators and tell them to ban gay marriage.

Please act to end this attempt to discriminate. Please call and/or write your local legislators and tell them to vote "No" on banning gay rights.

Sweeny Proposes Coddington School For Junior College

This Week
1961
43 Years Ago

School Committeeman Charles Sweeny tried to secure the Coddington School as a home for Quincy Junior College by moving a vote to abandon it for elementary school uses.

The motion was put on hold because space in the building was still needed for high school uses. One hundred and fifty Quincy High School students used six classrooms and Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard said giving full use of the building to the college would necessitate the construction of a new trade school, with the high school taking over the trade school space.

It was noted the reassignment of the 120 elementary students in the building would not be a problem. Furthermore, the opening of the new Sacred Heart School was expected to free up spaces, making the reassignment easier.

HONORARY SHERIFFS' BADGES RECALLED

Sheriff Charles Hedges asked for the assistance of local chiefs of police in Norfolk County for the collection and return of miniature honorary sheriffs' badges given out by the prior administration.

He said badges were given out in violation of the law and he wanted them collected to save the holders from any embarrassment. When collected, they would be destroyed.

Former Republican Quincy Senator Hedges defeated former Brookline Senator Peter McCormack, who was appointed by Gov. Foster Furcolo to the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel Wragg.

DEATH OF WALTER 'CAP' BRYAN

Well-known North Quincy sports figure for three decades, Walter "Cap" Bryan died at age 44.

The first captain of the North Quincy High School football team and outstanding player, he also starred at Boston College. Bryan was president of the school's alumni association and one of the leaders in the drive for a new NQHS gymnasium.

In addition to football, Bryan was a star basketball and baseball player at NQHS.

QUINCY-ISMS

The School Committee voted to hire Dr. David Karp, Dr. Frank Chmmello and Dr. Moses Entin as part-time school doctors. . . The QHS basketball team faced Lawrence Central Catholic in the Tech Tourney. THE WORKS OF three local visual artists (from left) Mary Smith, Gary Goodman and Alison Smith, is on display at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center. An opening reception for the exhibit, entitled "Three Dimensions" is Sunday, March 7 from 2 to 4 p.m. The exhibit is on display now through Sunday, March 28.

'Three Dimensions' Art Exhibit At Thomas Crane Public Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library will be presenting an exhibit entitled "Three Dimensions", featuring the works of three local visual artists: Mary Smith, Gary Goodman and Alison Smith.

Mary Smith is a graduate of Boston University and the Harvard University Graduate School of Design. In addition to being a landscape architect, Smith has been painting and showing her watercolors for the past 25 years. She has been a member of the Copley Society and is a gallery artist at The South Shore Art Center.

Gary Goodman received his BFA from Massachusetts College of Art. Goodman has been a corporate artist/photography for over 25 years and has photographed some of the most famous people of our generation including President Bush, Brooke Shields, Prince Edwards, Ted Williams and Muhammad Ali.

He will be showing some of his personal digital landscape images.

Alison Smith is a photographer and a life long resident of Quincy. She can usually be found either in her garden or studio working on images that provoke the remembrance of sunny warmer days. Her work reflects the delicate balance of symmetry and beauty found in nature.

The exhibit is on display now through Sunday, March 28.

There will be an opening reception Sunday, March 7 from 2 to 4 p.m. The public is invited.

'The Cat In The Hat' Visits

'Read Together Celebration' Begins At Beechwood Center

The Beechwood Community Life Center's annual month-long "Read Together Celebration" began Tuesday appropriately on the 100th anniversary of Dr. Seuss' birth.

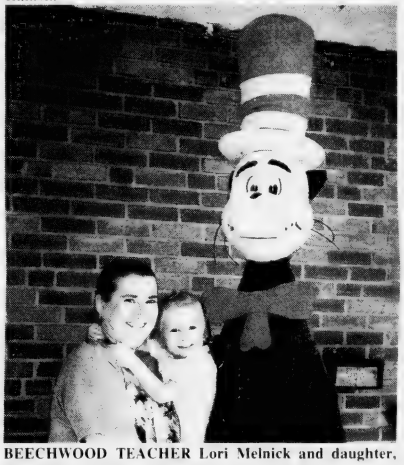
Theodore Seuss Geisel as Dr. Seuss wrote 44 favorite children's books, which sold more than 500 million copies, notes Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Center.

Seuss's most well-known character, "The Cat In The Hat," visited Beechwood to help get the month-long reading celebration off to a good start.

"Throughout the month, activities will be planned to encourage children, parents and grandparents to read together," said Sharon Fayette, the center's pre-school director. "Special emphasis will be upon books that focus on family and intergenerational life."

The National Education Association (NEA) has for the last seven years designated Dr. Seuss' birthday as a nationwide one-day reading event: "Read Across America Day."

Quincy seniors are also helping celebrate in March with the start-up of a long-planned Poetry Group. Co-leaders of this special interest group will be Barbara Gilliland and Jim Lynch. A special senior lunch and poetry reading is planned for March 18.



All interested in the center's pre-school offerings and special events are invited to call Sharon Fayette at 617-471-5712.

THE CAT IN The Hat visited the Beechwood Community Life Center to promote the center's annual "Read Together Celebration," which began Tuesday on the 100th anniversary of Dr. Seuss' birth. Shown with the distinguished visitor are toddler teacher Laurie Deery and toddlers Scott McMahon, Margo Butler, William Farrell, Matthew McCratic and Jaclyn Hanlon.

CAROL AUSTIN and her pre-school children, Grace and Brighton, gave the Cat In The Hat a big welcome.

BEECHWOOD TEACHER Lori Melnick and daughter, Stephanie, were happy to meet the Cat In The Hat.

Leigh Gledhill Receives State Street Community Service Award

QUINCY RESIDENT Leigh Gledhill was recently presented the 2003 William S. Edgerly Community Service Award from State Street Corporation. With her are State Street Chairman and CEO David Spina (left) and William Edgerly, State Street's Chairman Emeritus.

Leigh Gledhill of Quincy was recently presented the William S. Edgerly Community Service Award from State Street Corporation.

Gledhill was one of three State Street employees honored for making significant and sustained volunteer contributions to nonprofit charitable organizations in their communities.

The awards were presented by Edgerly, State Streetís chairman emeritus, at the Street Community Service Recognition Reception held at the New England Aquarium.

Edgerly, who served as chairman of State Street Corporation from 1976 through 1991, helped ingrain the ethic of community support into the company's culture. The service award program, established in honor of Edgerly, emphasizes the importance that State Street places on community involvement, corporate goodwill and serving the needs of less-advantaged citizens.

The awards provide a $10,000 grant to the organizations to which the recipients volunteer their time and service.

"Volunteering is one of the most important components of our community support program," said David A. Spina, chairman and chief executive officer of State Street. "It allows our employees to deliver hands-on service to assist our less-fortunate neighbors around the world."

Gledhill, an assistant vice president with the IT/Business Technology Services division in Milton, was acknowledged for her work with the Quincy Animal Shelter. Its mission is to care for abandoned and homeless animals in Quincy until new, appropriate and permanent homes for them are found, and to educate the public about the responsibilities of pet ownership.

Gledhill began volunteering at the shelter four years ago, caring for homeless cats a few nights per week. She is now the chairperson of the fundraising committee and serves on the volunteer organization's board of directors.

Gledhill dedicates more than 800 hours each year to the shelter.

Herby Duverne, an officer in the Security Control Division for State Street in Quincy, also received the Edgerly Community Service Award.

Duverne was honored for his work with the Haitian Coalition of Somerville. He has been a collation volunteer for more than 10 years and served as the president of its board of directors. His efforts helped pave the way for the creation of a new community program that works toward eliminating racism in the public school system and other social institutions.

You've seen this familiar classical revival building on Hancock Street...

What goes on inside the Quincy Masonic Building? Who are the Masons? What do they do?

The imposing Indiana limestone building at 1170 Hancock Street, has been a familiar landmark and the home of Quincy's Masonic community since it was dedicated in 1927.

To most people the Masonic fraternity is a mystery, and that's largely our own fault because, over the years, we have chosen to let our good works speak for themselves. But too many folks still believe that Freemasonry is a secret organization.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Yes we have some secret handshakes but, if we were truly a secret society, we would not have our familiar square and compasses emblem over the door and our members probably wouldn't wear lapel pins and rings. We're proud of who we are and what we do as Masons.

Masons have been helping to make Quincy a better community since the formation of Rural Lodge in 1801. And many of the things we do might surprise you.

Certainly you're familiar with the Shriners Burns Hospital in Boston. Every child receives treatment absolutely free. The hospital has no billing department. But, did you know that every Shriner first belongs to a Masonic Lodge?

Masons seek men of good character, who believe in God, to join in our good works. But, Masonry is not a religion. We are the world's oldest and largest fraternity of men based on a foundation of brotherly love, relief and truth. In fact, we like to say that Freemasonry makes good men better!

In future issues of this newspaper we'll be telling you more about the Masons of Quincy, what we do and how you can become a part of our good works while sharing fellowship and having fun. Yes, fun!

Masonry offers you the opportunity to improve your community and to improve yourself. For more information without any obligation, call the number below.

CENTER
QUINCY MEDICAL
The Boston Medical Center Alliance For Quality

With a score of 98, Quincy Medical Center has received the Gold Seal of Approval™ for quality health care from the nation's top standard-setting and accrediting health care body – the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO). Following the highest professional standards, JCAHO scores the nation's hospitals and other health care organizations using detailed, aggressive benchmarks to measure care quality and compliance.

Why were we recently ranked among the top 7% of hospitals in America?

Because the people here give 100% every single day.

Our very high score is what put us in America's top 7% of hospitals surveyed by JCAHO, but to see who put us there, look at the list below of our employees, nurses, physicians and supporters from all over the South Shore. To learn more about our JCAHO accreditation, or the Truly Remarkable™ health care options it reflects, call us toll-free, 24-hours-a-day, at 877-479-CARE, or visit www.quincymc.org.

CTE's Culinary Arts Program Granted Accreditation By American Culinary Federation

The Culinary Arts program at Quincy High School's Center for Technical Education (CTE) received notice of its accreditation recently by the American Culinary Federation (ACF), joining 56 other high school programs in the United States.

ACF operates the only programmatic accreditation program for high school culinary arts programs in the United States. The program is designed to help schools develop a food-service oriented curriculum and provide career objectives for potential culinarians.

In order for a culinary arts program to receive ACF accreditation, the program must complete a rigorous application, self-study, and on-site visit. The curriculum, facility, resources and organizational structure at CTE superseded standards set by the ACF Accrediting Committee.

Students graduating from Quincy Culinary Arts Program will be required to pass a written exam and verify successful completion of an ACF approved sanitation course before becoming eligible to earn the ACL designation of "Certified Secondary Graduate."

Graduates of Quincy's program will be ready to progress to the next stage in their careers, which may include post-secondary training toward a degree, participation in an ACF apprenticeship program, or placement directly into the industry.

3 'Tax Emergency' Sessions

The Quincy Taxpayers Association will hold three "Tax Emergency Briefing Sessions" for residents.

The schedule:

- Tuesday, March 16, "Property Taxation."
- Thursday, March 25, "Municipal Budgeting."
- Thursday, April 1, "Approaching Elected Officials."

The meetings will be held in the Community Meeting Room at the Thomas Crane Public Library from 7 to 8:45 p.m. They are free.

The Quincy Taxpayers Association was started in August, 2001 by Alan Cousin and Robert Haley. Its goal, according to Cousin and Haley, is to encourage responsible spending by the city in order to stop double-digit tax inflation.

Cousin said since December, when the city's new tax rate was announced, the group's membership has more than doubled, from 73 to 180. Cousin said his goal is to recruit 1,000 members by June 30, before the city issues the new budget.

More information about the Quincy Taxpayers Association can be found at the group's Web site (www.quincytaxpayers.org). Those interested in joining can also call Cousin at 617-770-4188 or e-mail him at alan@quincytaxpayers.org.

Meeting March 13 At QHS On Downtown Revitalization

Residents are invited to bring their ideas on revitalizing the downtown area to a day-long brainstorming session Saturday, March 13 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Quincy High School.

Mayor William Phelan and a team of architects and planners will work with local residents to tackle such issues as traffic, open space, parking and new businesses in the downtown area.

Participation is free. For more information call the mayor's office at 617-376-1990.

Parish Retreat
at STAR OF THE SEA PARISH
Sunday, March 7 — Thursday, March 11 at 7:00 p.m.
"Unless a Grain of Wheat..."

With the call to "rebuild the Church in Boston" and reconfiguration, we are all attempting to deal with the implications. What is becoming apparent is that all Catholics and all parishes within the Archdiocese will enter into a transforming process, every Catholic is touched, and every parish is changed.

Our parish retreat will attempt to help us enter this transformation in Christ and with faith, hope and love. All are welcome.

Check out Star of the Sea Parish Website at www.marystaroftheseа.org for more information, directions and other events at Star of the Sea Parish. Or call the Parish Office at 617-328-0866.

CITIZENS OF QUINCY

AFTER HAVING YOUR TAXES RAISED DRAMATICALLY IN THE PAST TWO YEARS YOU ARE LOSING FIRE PROTECTION. LAST YEAR RESCUE 1 WAS PUT ON A TEMPORARY STATUS AND IT IS RUNNING LESS THAN 30% OF THE TIME. THIS YEAR THERE IS TALK OF ELIMINATING ENGINE 4 ON BEALE STREET IN WOLLASTON AS OF JULY 1ST. ENGINE 4 AFFECTS THE WHOLE CITY, AS IT GOES TO EVERY ALARM AT WHICH A FIRE IS REPORTED. WHILE THERE WILL STILL BE A LADDER TRUCK IN THE WOLLASTON STATION, THIS IS THE TRUCK THAT GOES TO OTHER CITIES AND TOWNS WHEN THEY HAVE FIRES. THIS WILL LEAVE AN EMPTY STATION FOR LONG PERIODS OF TIME. THE ELIMINATION WILL HAVE AN ABSOLUTE DIRECT NEGATIVE IMPACT ON THE SAFETY OF THE CITIZENS OF QUINCY, ESPECIALLY IN THE WOLLASTON AREA. MAKE NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT, EVERY TIME THE MAYOR DECOMMISSIONS A PIECE OF EQUIPMENT IT MAKES IT HARDER FOR THE QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS TO PROVIDE THE CURRENT QUALITY OF SERVICE THE CITIZENS DESERVE AND ARE PAYING FOR. SO EVEN THOUGH MAYOR PHELAN MIGHT NOT BE CONCERNED FOR YOUR SAFETY, THE QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS ARE. HELP THE QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS HELP YOU. WE URGE PEOPLE TO CALL AND WRITE THE MAYOR TO TELL HIM THAT YOU PAY TOP TAX DOLLARS AND DESERVE THE BEST FIRE PROTECTION POSSIBLE, SO KEEP ENGINE 4 AND RESCUE 1 IN SERVICE.

Three Faiths Coming Together For Interfaith Seder March 28

Members of the Christian, Jewish and Muslim faiths will come together and take part in the city's first Interfaith Passover Seder Sunday, March 28 at the Quincy Point Congregational Church.

Beginning at 2 p.m. and scheduled to last approximately two hours, the event is designed to bring together people from different faiths and educate them on the Passover Seder.

"This celebration will bring the three faiths together and give them an understanding of each other's faiths, and celebrate a holiday of freedom," said David Ezickson, one of the coordinators of the event. About 160 residents are expected to attend the ceremony, he said.

Ezickson said representatives from 10 area churches are scheduled to attend the event.

Seder means "order" because great care is taken to carry out the various practices of the service in the correct order. Traditionally, the Seder takes place in the home on the first night of Passover.

The Seder is considered a joyous religious celebration because it takes place in the home and combines a unique mixture of serious commemoration of a historical event with a joyful festivity of deliverance from slavery.

The main part of the service tells the story of the Jewish exodus from Egypt. The story is made more dramatic by the eating of certain symbolic foods and visual aids for teaching history. The Seder will also feature singalongs of traditional songs.

Ezickson said residents will be able to eat from a Seder plate, which contains certain symbolic foods, such as roasted eggs, matzo bread, salt water, fish, cinnamon and horse radish.

Parents are also encouraged to bring their children, as they will play a big role in the celebration, he said.

Ezickson said the ceremony is designed to strengthen community bonds and allow residents to learn about the customs of other religions. It will prove to be educational and fun, he said.

"Overall, it is a chance to build a community through a traditional ceremony that people might not be aware of," he said.

Ezickson said he wants to make the celebration an annual event. "Next year it will be larger and more inclusive," he said.

Anyone interested in attending the event should contact Ezickson at 617-471-9359.

On Bellotti Quincy Cable Program

Finneran Says Kerry Will Give Bush 'A Good Run'

House Speaker Thomas M. Finneran in a guest appearance on Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's "Law Politics" program on Quincy Access television said Senator John Kerry will give President Bush "a good run" for the White House.

Finneran also discussed a wide range of topics with Bellotti during the half-hour program.

Bellotti, turning to politics, noted that Kerry was looking more and more likely to be the Democratic nominee.

Finneran said Kerry has "found his stride and comfort level" and "will give a good run to President Bush."

The reasons, Finneran said, are that:

Kerry is prepared to fight back against attacks from the Bush camp. He has strong ideas about education and the economy. He has a sterling military record. And, as a former successful prosecutor, he is mentally tough and determined.

Bellotti said Quincy viewers got a chance to see the side of Finneran that most people don't get to see.

"He is one of the sharpest minds in the legislature — so smart, so personable and a real family man," Bellotti said.

"I'm glad people got this glimpse of who he really is. Unfortunately, the characterization we often see of him in the press isn't the real man. It's not really fair, but he handles it all with such grace and professionalism.

The show will air through March on Quincy Access TV.

A Democrat, today Finneran presides over the Massachusetts House of Representatives as Speaker and represents the 12th Suffolk District, which includes sections of Dorchester, Mattapan, Hyde Park and Milton.

He has been Speaker since April 1996 and member of the House since 1979.

Bellotti also asked Finneran about his strong belief in early childhood literacy programs.

"If you make the serious and committed investment in Early Childhood Education, the strides that you make in literacy and numeracy .... are phenomenal," Finneran said.

It is completely beneficial to lay the foundation of early education at three and four years of age, Finneran said, adding that such early education programs "should be offered to every child in Massachusetts."

Finneran spoke of his own two daughters, who are now adults:

"I don't think I have every spent more pleasant hours in my entire life . . . nothing has meant more to me that to sit with my kids when they were youngsters and turn the pages of a book and read with them and talk to them and then watch them take it to the next level . . . it makes your heart soar."

Finneran and Bellotti discussed other topics such as the history of politics in Massachusetts, the ideals that make the United States a great nation, foreign affairs (including North Korea and Iraq), effective leadership qualities and even recent books Finneran has read.

"Law & Politics" is Bellotti's monthly talk show recorded at the cable access studio in Quincy. The program with Finneran will also be made available to other local cable access channels across Norfolk County.

APPROXIMATELY 40 Quincy firefighters demonstrated outside City Hall last Friday, protesting the lack of a contract with the city. They also concerned about the possibility that equipment, such as Engine 4 in Wollaston, will be deactivated in a cost-saving move.

Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Noble

TOM BOWES, president of Quincy Firefighters Union Local 792, distributes a leaflet to a passerby outside City Hall last Thursday. The union contends eliminating any fire equipment will have an "absolute direct negative impact on the safety of the citizens of Quincy."

Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Petition Drive To Keep Engine 4

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Association, said the fire department is the first responder for a number of different emergencies, including heart attacks or falls.

"They are here all the time, sometimes more than once a day," said Pells.

She said residents will give the signatures to Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and also ask him to present the petitions to the city council.

"I think their effort illustrates the importance of having a fully operational fire house in Wollaston, to not only the seniors but the businesses and all residents," said Gutro. "I take it very serious when a large number of individuals urge me to do all that I can to ensure every engine remains operational. This reaffirms the need to expedite an answer from Chief O'Connell as soon as possible."

One of the petitions reads, "The Wollaston station is very important to our 164 senior or disabled residents in our building, as well as the many residents at Tobin Towers at 80 Clay St., and at Fenno House on Hancock St. There are also many businesses and homeowners who would be affected. Please keep our health and safety in mind. Five minutes is a long time when you are having a heart attack."

Two months ago, Pells required the help of the fire department after she fell and injured her shoulder. She called 911 and the Wollaston Fire Station responded to the emergency. "They were here in no time," she said.

Helen Flaherty of 91 Clay St. is also collecting signatures at local businesses.

"We would be lost without them," Flaherty, 82, said of the Wollaston branch. "It's important that they keep this station open."

Flaherty shudders at the prospect of having the residential complexes serviced by the Quincy Center fire station on Quincy Ave.

"With all the traffic in Quincy now, it would take so much more time to get to Clay St.," she said. "We need the Wollaston station right where it is."

Rumors have been circulating about the fate of Engine 4 in Wollaston since the firefighters' union president said he was told by Chief Paul O'Connell that the department would lose the apparatus unless more firefighters are hired or more funds are appropriated to cover overtime costs.

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick recently said the department's overtime budget would be depleted in April, nearly three months before the end of the fiscal year.

Fenno House Assisted Living Facility Opening Friday

The opening of the new Assisted Living at Fenno House facility, 340 Hancock St., Wollaston, will be celebrated with a ribbon cutting ceremony Friday at 10 a.m.

Mayor William Phelan and representatives of the Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc. will participate in the event.

The project involved converting 39 apartments on the first and second floors from independent living units to units designed for assisted living services.

The conversion was funded by a $3 million construction grant from HUD. Through HUD's Assisted Living Conversion Program, the kitchen at Fenno House was completely re-fitted with commercial-style food preparation facilities. The Common Room and Dining Room were also refurbished, and new office space and a country kitchen and wellness room were added.

Rev. Adolph Wismar said Assisted Living at Fenno House has been designed to offer affordable assisted living. Full assisted living services including apartment rent, meals, other personal services will be available. Assisted Living at Fenno House will be licensed by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA).

Built in 1973 under HUD's Section 236 program, the Fenno House will continue to use 112 units as independent living apartments occupied by low and moderate income elderly persons. The conversion of 39 apartments into assisted living units offers the opportunity for independent-unit residents to remain at Fenno House if the time comes that they need assisted living services.

Phelan commented: "I applaud the Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments for creating affordable assisted living units that provide a welcome alternative for many frail elderly people in our city who can live independently but need assistance with activities of daily living."

For more information about Assisting Living at Fenno House, call Carol Scanlon, resident care director, at 617-773-1590 or 617-773-5483 or Mayor Phelan's Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500.

ideas," said Haley. "We're just looking for them to be responsible."

Carol Fisher, who lives on Havilend St., talked about problems with the property assessment system, which she had researched for the past year. She said she found it difficult to get clear and timely answers from the assessor's office about how property is assessed.

She also said she had assessors measure eight houses on her street and all eight were being charged for square footage that didn't exist.

"The tax assessor's office is not doing their job . . . They are not protecting the taxpayer," said Fisher.

Annalee Johnson, another speaker, raised the issue of telling taxpayers where the money is spent.

At the end of the rally, Cousin raised a poster displaying Mayor William Phelan's office number. He encouraged attendees to write and call their city councillors.

Councillor-at-large Joseph Finn and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro attended the rally. Cousin commended them, as well as Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, who was not at the rally, for working toward responsible spending.

Former mayor and city assessor Joseph LaRaia also attended. He carried copies of a paper in which he said outlined an imbalance in the ratio between commercial and residential taxes that he said surfaced because of sharp increases in residential valuations.

"The residential levy has risen 23.9 million in three years, 2002-2004. The commercial levy has risen only 4.2 million in those three years . . . The ratio of commercial to residential tax for those three years is 15 percent to 85 percent, which demonstrates the need to address and rectify the residential imbalance by elected officials for the fiscal year 2005," wrote LaRaia.

He said the state legislation adopted in January, which gave elected officials the option to boost the commercial share of the tax, is the only way to remedy the imbalance and provide tax relief.

LaRaia said the legislation would boost the commercial share to 36 percent. He said this is still lower than the share that the business community paid over the past 15 years. Prior to 2004, he wrote in the letter, the lowest commercial percentage was 37 percent.

"The only way you can balance that out is with the state law passed this year," said LaRaia.

The city council voted in the beginning of February to adopt this state law, but Phelan rejected the proposal two weeks ago, saying it would hurt homeowners in the long run by discouraging businesses from coming to Quincy.

Cousin and Haley did not address this new state law at Saturday's rally.

They plan to hold three more "tax emergency" events, with the goal of encouraging responsible spending before the budget comes out in the spring.

"This is only the beginning," said Cousin.

Will Pay Rent Hike If Repairs Done

College Wants City To Maintain Buildings

By WILLIAM F. TRAYNOR

Quincy College will pay a rent increase if the city agrees to repair and maintain three city-owned buildings occupied by the school, according to an attorney representing the college.

In a letter to School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Attorney Leonard H. Kesten stated that the college would agree to pay a rent hike if the city assumes the role of landlord and makes much-needed repairs to Coddington Hall and two houses on Saville Ave. Any future costs for repairs and maintenance should be picked up by the city, the college maintains.

Kesten's letter states that the college has spent a lot of money maintaining the buildings "despite the fact that those expenses would normally be borne by the landlord and not the tenant."

Under the terms of the previous lease – which has expired - the college was responsible for the upkeep of the buildings.

THERESA LORD-PIATELLI

DeCristofaro was not available for comment.

The school committee was scheduled to address the matter in executive session at last night's (Wednesday) meeting.

The request comes just weeks after the school department decided to begin an eviction process against the college. At issue is more than 18 months' worth of rent, or $443,000, on three city-owned buildings the college occupies.

In 2002, the school committee voted to double the rent from $217,000 to $450,000 it charges the college. Although the school department has not increased the rent in a decade, college officials complained that the rent hike was unfair.

The college has refused to pay the increase and has been issuing checks at the old rate for more than 18 months. Since the previous lease expired, the college is considered a tenant-at-will. The city can end the relationship whenever it wants because a judge ruled last year that it has the right to charge rent and is considered the landlord of the properties.

The school department has set a March 15 deadline for entering into a new, one-year lease with the rent hike intact. In addition, the college must pay all back rent.

Kesten's letter, however, does not address the issue involving the back rent.

The letter does state that the college spent more than $135,000 to perform maintenance to the heating system in Coddington Hall, but the system will soon require a total overhaul. In addition, some classes in Coddington Hall are almost "uninhabitable" because the windows are not airtight and create cold conditions, Kesten's letter states.

"The City of Quincy, as the owner of the building, needs to address these conditions immediately," the letter stated. "Once the buildings are repaired, the college will be amenable to pay appropriate rent."

Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the college board of governors, said Quincy College has spent more than $1 million to maintain the buildings over the past decade.

"If anyone has had a sweetheart deal - at least for the first several years - it was the city," she said. "It is disingenuous for the city to portray it in any other light."

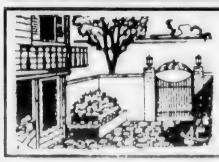
Lord-Piatelli said it is unfair for the school department to double the rent and force the college to pay to maintain the buildings. The terms of the previous lease should not apply because the contract expired years ago, she said.

"If we are going to negotiate a new lease then let's negotiate the terms," she said. "The city is saying, 'We want more money, but we don't want to do what any other landlord would do, namely make repairs to the buildings.'"

Lord-Piatelli said the college paid below-market rent for years because the previous lease stipulated that the college would be responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of the buildings.

"We have no obligation to pay for any repairs since the expiration of the old lease," she said. "The college is, has been, and continues to be willing to be full partners working with the school committee and city. But let's be fair to the college."

Merrymount School Plans 75th Anniversary Celebration



The Merrymount School is planning a 75th anniversary celebration.

The event will be held Sunday, May 2, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the school.

The committee is seeking photos or other memorabilia to be displayed at the celebration. Former students and teachers are all invited to be interviewed regarding their memories of attending the school. They are asked to call 617-984-8762.

Those wishing to be interviewed are asked to contact Elaine Gibbons at the same telephone number.

Multi-Family Home Sales Set New Annual Record In Massachusetts During 2003

Sales of multifamily homes in Massachusetts increased for the third consecutive year in 2003, climbing 8.1 percent this past year over 2002 levels to establish a new annual record for 2-4 family home sales in the Bay State, according to a report recently issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

The record setting sales pace reflects strong demand for affordable, entry level homes among immigrants and first time buyers, renewed confidence in the multifamily market among investors, and a sharp increase in multifamily home construction during the past year.

In 2003, a total of 8,088 two-, three- and four-family homes were sold in Massachusetts, compared to 7,481 the prior year, making it the largest annual gain in 2-4 family homes sales in four years. The 8,088 multifamily homes sold last year also are the most ever recorded in one year in state history, topping the previous high of 7,508 units sold in 1999.

"The multifamily housing market is more popular than ever among traditional home buyers," said MAR President Judy Moore. "Two- and three-family homes have become increasingly popular among first-time buyers faced with by the escalation in prices and limited inventory of starter homes in the single-family home market. We're also seeing strong demand in this market from many of the state's foreign-born residents, many of whom are recent immigrants who have settled in Massachusetts with their extended families and want to live within close proximity to one another," she said.

The MAR report found that sales of 2-4 family homes improved in six of seven regional markets in 2003, with sales growth most pronounced in regions populated by large cities and older urban centers. Specifically, sales rose 14.1 percent in greater Boston, 11.3 percent in western Massachusetts.

Century 21 Annex Realty's Theresa Repoff Achieves 'Extra Mile' Award

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., with offices in Quincy and Hanover, announces Theresa Repoff, SRES, CBR, recently received the 2003 "Extra Mile" Award for exhibiting extraordinary service in the community.

Repoff, a Realtor based in the company's Quincy office, helped organize two major charity events during 2003.

Repoff organized a fundraiser in October 2003 to benefit a longtime friend, a single mother of two who is battling breast cancer.

The event, which took place at the Quincy Yacht Club, was a major success, raising $15,000 to cover her friend's mortgage and medical bills while she was unable to work.

"There were approximately 250 people in attendance, including Senator (Michael) Morrissey and Mayor (William) Phelan," Repoff said. "It took several months to organize and market the fundraiser, but the end result was very rewarding.

THERESA REPOFF

Less than two months later, Repoff found the spirit of the holidays and rallied her Century 21 Annex Realty teammates to help another worthy cause. She led her fellow agents in a drive to donate food, clothing and games to the Quincy Crisis Center, a local charity that benefits disadvantaged individuals in the greater Quincy area.

The company donated $250 in goods to the organization, one week before Christmas.

"Theresa repeatedly goes 'above and beyond' to find ways to help others in the little time she has between her responsibilities as a Realtor," said Art Foley, Broker/Owner of Century 21 Annex Realty. "She applies the same amount of care and commitment to her community as she does to her career. We're very lucky to have her on our team."

Repoff is also an active member of the Fair Housing Committee for the City of Quincy, where she lives with her husband, Bill. They have two children, Rachel, 24 and Maxwell, 21.

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., with a staff of more than 50 professional Realtors, serves the South Shore community, from the Neponset Bridge to the Sagamore Bridge.

Now, when I flip to a new month, the cards are right there, and I just fill them out and pop them in the mail. No more forgetting an occasion and rushing to the store to get a card. I also prestamp the envelopes and affix a return-address label." — Joan R. in Macon, Ga.

Multi-Family Home Sales Set New Annual Record In Massachusetts During 2003

and 7.6 percent in the North east region. In addition, on Cape Cod and the South Shore, multifamily home sales rose by 6 percent over 2002, and increased 2.5 per cent in Worcester County.

Along with the steady in crease in sales, property val ues for 2-4 family homes also rose modestly in 2003. While specific price com parisons are not available for two , three and four family dwellings separately, the MAR data show total dollar volume for multifamily sales increased from $2,091,697,908 in 2002 to $2,350,811,643 last year, an indication that selling prices of 2-4 family homes rose an average of 4 percent in 2003, from an average prices of $279,601 a year ago to $290,654 this past year.

Don't Confuse Concrete, Sand And Mortar Mix

ON THE HOUSE
BY PAUL O'MALLEY

QUESTION: What's the difference between concrete, sand and mortar mix?

ANSWER: A very good and important question. They are not all the same. These three types of products are usaullly just mixed with water and that's it.

For walkways, footings or other thick applications you want to use concrete mix. It's comprised of sand, port land cement and gravel or small stones. It is designed to take weight. It's basically the same product compostion used to pour foundations in major con struction projects.

If you need to resurface a concrete walkway or base ment floor, use an sandmix. It's just like concrete except it doesn't have any samll stones. It's just sand and portland cement. It's appli cation is designed for no more than a two inch thick ness.

If you are resurfacing old concrete make sure it's swept and dampened to assure a good bond. You can also ap ply a bonding agent to the old concrete before you spread the new.

Mortar mix is strictly de signed for laying brick and stone. It will not hold up well if used for footings or skimcoats.

All three products may look the same but they have unique purposes.

QUESTION: How can I keep my door hinge screws from coming out of the door jam?

ANSWER: Door hinges should never come loose un der normal circumstances. The only thing I can think of is the door may be binding when you go to close it.

One way to tell if it's binding is to close the door but don't engage the door latch. If it springs open by itself even just alittle, it is binding. It can be adjusted by either mortising out the hinges on the jamb with a wood chisel or by reducing the mortise by adding thin pieces of carboard between the hinge and jamb.

It's hard to say without seeing it what the case may be. If the srew holes are stripped and the screws won't grip, take some wooden matches or tooth picks and fill in the screwholes. Put in as many as you can. Then by hand, screw in the same screws.

Don't pre-drill, and don't overturn. They should hold now.

QUESTION: What are the pros and cons with oil and latex polyurethanes?

ANSWER: Latex polyurathenes, like latex paints are quick drying. You can't beat it's convenience.

Oil base polys do take much longer to dry and the cleanup factor and odor is sues are there. However, Oil polys will honeytone wood and after years it will darken somewhat.

But oil base is a richer fin ish and more durable finish. Latex polys are less forgiv ing when it comes to hiding sanding imperfections and they won't honeytone the wood. One thing about all la tex polys is that when you open the can, it looks like skimmed milk. Don't worry it's perfectly normal.

They will dry clear.
